Start Right Right at the Start

This little chat has to do with money-saving foresight. To have foresight, you must imagine what is going to happen. You must imagine, for example, how things will be when you have ten times as many houses.

How you will heat them, and work them.

The location of your power plant and first house is going to govern everything you do afterwards.

Of course, the nearer to a railroad, the better for your coal supply.

A switch right to your power house and an elevated trestle is the thing.

Then you can dump it right into a sloping-sided bin and always have your coal to the front of the bin, ready to shovel.

When you can, locate your house so as to do as little future grading as possible.

Such work runs up into money fast.

The power is placed in the center, and separate, passage-connected houses built on either side.

Such a layout means an economically balanced distribution of heat. It equalizes the distance in working the houses. By building each house the same size you can work them as units, knowing exactly what it costs to crop each, and approximately what crop to expect. The adding of a house means only that much coal and help. You know exactly how to figure, and what to count on.

After you have definitely settled on your plan of development, stick to it.

Don't let every good-intentioned giver of free advice change your mind.

But first be sure your plan is right. Our years of experience in such matters is always at your disposal.

It's a part of our expert service we are glad to offer you.

A Word to the Wise is Sufficient

Fresh Giganteums are scarce, owing to very short crop—consequently there will be little or no cold storage stock for 1921. Be one of the wise ones, have Lilies when your neighbors have none, by placing part of the fresh stock in storage and growing cold storage stock for the early Easter.

Grow Darwin Tulips For Profit

Undoubtedly there is more profit in growing Darwin Tulips than any other kind of bulb. Whether grown inside or outdoors, the cut flowers bring good prices and are in good demand. More and more they replace the Early Tulips. Their clear and brilliant colors and tall stems make them much more useful. Outside, they can be left undisturbed for several seasons. When forced they require little heat and the forced bulbs can be used for outside planting the next season.

While it would be more profitable for us to sell a complete line of Dutch Bulbs, still in order to offer our customers something worth while, we carry a full line of Darwin Tulips at very attractive prices. Darwin Tulips are scarce and in good demand. Quality is excellent, varieties are the best, and our customers should make a liberal planting. Orders filled same day as received.

Terms: 60 days; 3% cash with order; 2% 10 days. Unknown correspondents please send cash with order. Delivery F. O. B. Benton Harbor, Mich., or F. O. B. Chicago, Ill.

Asparagus Plumosus Nanus Seed

True greenhouse-grown stock. $4.00 per 1000 seeds; $19.00 per 5000 seeds; $36.00 per 10,000 seeds; $85.00 per 25,000 seeds.
We also offer a complete line of HYACINTHS, TULIPS, NARCISSUS, Etc.

Dutch, Roman and White Hyacinths

L'Innocence. The best white variety for forcing. There are practically no French Roman Hyacinths on the market—in the later winter there will be a demand for white hyacinths for design work that cannot be filled with any flower better than the "Dutch Roman." They are easily forced in flats or pans; splendid for cutting, for use in bouquets, centerpieces or funeral work. Big, husky bulbs that will produce large, graceful spikes. $4.25 per 100; $36.00 per 1000.

Narcissus Paper White Grandiflora

Big, plump bulbs, 13 ctm., up, packed 1250 to the case. There is always a profit in forcing them; keep a batch coming along constantly. Engage your season's requirements now, keep in a cool cellar until ready to plant. $2.75 per 100; $21.00 per 1000; per case of 1250 bulbs, $26.25.

Lilium Formosum (Dark Stem Type)

A splendid lot of late dug bulbs, especially well ripened, just the thing to plant in flats and benches for cutting or for pot plants to sell at Easter. Dark stem Formosums are superior to the green stem type, and worth more. Fine, big 6 to 8-in. bulbs, packed 400 to the case; per case $41.50

FREE, WASHINGTON, D. C. HUNDRED AT THOUSAND PRICE

First-class Certificate Haarlem, August 4, 1919. Its color is a shade brighter than America, flowers twice as large as America and its habit of growth is like America. It is as early as Halley and multiplies as Halley. In a few years Le Marechal Foch will be growing all over the U. S. A., and when you are talking about Gladioli you will talk about Le Marechal Foch, because it is the best fine pink color, very early, has extra shipping qualities, and every first size bulb gives three and four strong flower spikes direct out of the bulb.

Never a Gladiolus has been introduced with such great trade possibilities.

Notice re Import

Last year we had several shipments for customers in the U. S. A. All have been inspected by the F. H. B. in Washington and no pests at all have been found, so all customers have received the goods in good condition. As the inspection by the F. H. B. is very exact, you have to be sure that you get absolutely sound stuff. We therefore beg to inform you that you cannot order Gladioli everywhere, because the inspection has to be done also on our side very carefully, and although our cultures are absolutely pest free, we hand-select all our bulbs before shipping. If you give us your order you can be sure that you will have no trouble at all, as we know all about inspection, packing and shipping. Bulbs for propagating are duty free. We are the largest stockholders of this variety and guarantee true stock. Stock is very limited.

For Import License

address the Federal Horticultural Board in Washington, D. C., which gives it freely for this splendid variety. We allow 7% discount for cash with order, otherwise three months' credit with good references. Send your name for our list of fancy varieties.

CYCLAMEN

- This has been one of our specialties for over twenty years. In all our experience we have never seen a finer lot of plants. We are growing our stock in new houses. They are absolutely clean and perfect in every way and not to be compared with weakly, drawn stock offered at less money.
- 4-inch pots...$50 per 100
- 4-inch pots, extra heavy...$60 per 100
- 5-inch pots...$15 per doz.
- 5½-inch pots...$18 per doz.
- 6-in. pots...$24 and $30 per doz.
- 7 and 8-inch pots...$36, $48 and $60 per doz.

This stock will be profitable to anyone buying now.

PHOENIX ROEBELENI

- Well grown plants.
- 13-inch tubs...$15 and $20 each

IMPORTANT NOTICE

Owing to the very great increase in price of all materials used in packing of plants, we find it necessary to make a small charge for same, as follows, much lower than the percentage plan:

- Full size cases...$2.00 each
- Three-quarter size cases...$1.50 each
- Small size cases...$0.50 each

IMPORTANT NOTICE

Owing to the very great increase in price of all materials used in packing of plants, we find it necessary to make a small charge for same, as follows, much lower than the percentage plan:

Full size cases.....	$2.00 each
Small size cases.....	$0.50 each
Three-quarter size cases.....	$1.50 each

TALKING TURKEY TO GET TRADE

Little developed, in proportion to its possibilities, Thanksgiving offers an opportunity for increasing sales of both cut flowers and plants. Some florists have made this holiday a big sales occasion. This season is a favorable one for others to make it a day of flowers as well as turkey.

F

IRST in chronological order among American holidays, Thanksgiving is far from being first among florists' big days. It is, indeed, far from the position it should hold as a sales occasion for the trade. In this country as general observance is made of the last Thursday in November as of Easter Sunday. Not alone the descendants of the Pilgrim Fathers, but Americans of every extraction, make this a day of festivity and social enjoyment, whether the time-honored turkey adorns the festal board or is replaced by some packers' product whose price soars not so high. The big spring flower day, Easter, is an occasion of religious observance. Thanksgiving is an occasion of family gatherings and household festivities. It is celebrated, not in a church or other public place, but in the home. The extent of its observance is not dependent upon anyone's attendance at services or ceremonies; it takes place at each hearth side, as they said in olden days, whether, to be more modern, said hearth side is a hotel dining room, a one-room apartment, a brownstone city residence, or a real place by the big fire "down on the farm." In view of this wider and more general observance of the day, it is hard to see why we have not a big autumn flower day more nearly worthy to rank with our big one of spring.

Effort Needed.

Perhaps the answer lies within ourselves. Little effort has been made, as a general rule, to develop sales for Thanksgiving. Here and there a florist, by folders, newspaper advertising or window display, seeks to arouse the interest of his patrons at that time, and the results are so successful that it is surprising the example has not been followed more widely. During the autumn season the last two years, of course, florists were busy enough—they experienced such a demand for flowers that they had little time or wish to develop more. But this year conditions are otherwise. Even though chrysanthemums are not so plentiful as they were in most markets a year ago, other flowers are in good supply and prices are not so stiff as they were a year ago. Moreover, the public is becoming more and more used to flowers for all sorts of occasions.

Why Not Now?

So what better time to start active promotion of Thanksgiving as a flower day than the present? The trade has demonstrated its ability to develop a flower occasion and will no doubt do so again. Thanksgiving offers us an opportunity.

The way has been blazed already by members of the trade. Indeed, the trail is pretty clearly marked out, if one wishes to follow it to bigger sales for Thanksgiving. There are numerous ways of going at it, for the day has a variety of associations in people's minds. It is a day of giving thanks for national good fortune and prosperity, being thus semi-religious in character. It is a day of memory, also, harking back to the early seventeenth century in New England—it was first celebrated in 1621—recalling the Mayflower, the Pilgrim Fathers, the Indians with whom they dealt, the rigorous Puritan customs and their quaint dress. It is a day, also, associated with the harvest time, and cornstalks, pumpkins and turkeys are emblematic of the occasion. This last phase of the day has encouraged the celebration of it after the fashion of the Pilgrims in 1621, with a bountiful repast. And what dinner can be pretentious without flowers nowadays?

Ample material is at hand, it is evident, for the florist who wishes to develop the day by any of the means he customarily employs, whether by mail, by newspaper advertising, by window displays or by any other form of publicity.

An example of a catchy form of advertisement is given on this page. It is one of several used by Bertermann Bros. Co., Indianapolis, Ind., in which the turkey provided the Thanksgiving note. Chrysanthemums in each case formed the floral part of the decoration. This form of illustration served to draw attention to the advertisements—it was striking, novel and timely. The appeal in type was in one case to possible guests and in another to the hostess. A few words only were necessary to send it home. The occasion, the day itself, is the biggest sales factor.

Wide Variety.

But if a florist chooses, he can use another subject. He does not have to "talk turkey"; he can use as his theme any of the other associations attached to the day, a number of which are mentioned above. Whether it is a day of thanks, of memory, of festivity, or of merely social entertainment, Thanksgiving is an occasion to "Say It with Flowers." The florist can play upon any of these phases in his newspaper advertising, or he can, should he choose, employ a different theme in different advertisements.

In window decoration, also, the same variety of illustration tive material is suitable to form the drawing feature of the display. One would perhaps prefer another to the harvest phase of the day, to distinguish the Thanksgiving day window from a mere autumn display. The Puritan reminiscences provide the best material for window displays. Upon a reading of some of Longfellow's poems of those days, one could conjure up a dozen or more different scenes easy to stage in the florist's window as a suggestion for Thanksgiving day and to associate it with flowers in the minds of passers-by. On this score the possibilities are unlimited.

These are a few suggestions. They should stimulate others in each florist's mind, in keeping with his own locality and his own facilities. But wherever he is, the opportunity is big. Throughout America the last Thursday in November should bring a greater demand for flowers this year than ever before, a demand far greater if florists of the country undertake to "talk turkey"—and flowers—to the public.

and other supplies are stored in the room and the basement below.

PICKING UP MONEY.

Quarters and Dimes for Retailers.

Nobody suggests that flower stores imitate drug stores, which nowadays chase the elusive nickels so assiduously that the jimcracks on display almost, if they do not totally, obscure the original apothecarial purpose of such places. It is foolish to put in so many side lines that the main line is submerged. But there is little danger of that with flower stores; most of them still neglect their legitimate opportunities.

Take, for instance, plant foods and insecticides. How many florists carry them? They would not be out of place in any store which sells plants; indeed, nearly every florist who sells plants has numerous requests for "something to make them grow." Not to have such things at hand, even in sight, is a neglect deplorable in more ways than one. In the first place, every florist should try to supply as many as possible of the needs of his customers. He supplies the pot cover; then why not the bit of plant food? In the second place, in addition to satisfying the customer's desire, each such sale adds a quarter or a dime to the florist's profits and does it without adding in any way to his overhead expenses.

Within recent times some of the large retailers have come to appreciate that a really desirable sum is to be added to the annual profits in this perfectly legitimate way. Trying it out, numbers of them have found it paid to have several kinds on display and to advertise them by means of the show cards, booklets and envelope stuffers supplied by the manufacturers. "Now we never fail to mention plant food when selling potted plants," says a prominent St. Louis retailer. There are many good plant foods, each having its particular advantages. The housewife wants "something for her plants." Gratify her wish.

THE RETAIL FLORIST

FLOWERS FOR FUNERALS.

Various estimates place the proportion of flowers for funerals at one-third to one-half of the total sales of florists in this country. Whatever the exact amount, there is today no other branch of sales which comes near rivaling that one the year around. Not without good reason do some retailers call it their "bread-and-butter" business.

What it amounts to in an individual store may be seen by the illustration on this page, which shows the work made up for one funeral, that of the secretary of the order of railway telegraphers, by the C. Young & Sons Co., St. Louis, recently. Eighteen pieces are shown, an equal number each of baskets, sprays and wreaths.

In this group it is interesting to note the proportion of each type of order. It indicates, if one may generalize therefrom, what is being generally noted in the best florists' stores; namely, a change from the one-time demand for all sorts of odd designs to a call for funeral offerings depending, not on shape, but on artistic arrangement for their effect. Baskets are coming more and more into vogue for funerals. Simple sprays are largely asked for, and tastefully made wreaths represent the usual extent of the desire for a design. Occasionally a florist has a call for an odd and intricate piece, but nowadays that is the exception. Recognition of real beauty has led to the demand for the looser forms of arrangement.

MAKING SPACE COUNT.

Many flower stores cover a larger floor area than that of Penn the Florist, in Boston, but few do so large a business. One is inclined to wonder, upon entering it, if this is the place where this firm's tremendous business is done. For the year's total is one that would stagger many florists. The reason that so much can be done, and is done, in this space is learned upon inspection. Arrangement and system tell the tale.

How simple are the travels of an order is instructive. Order tickets are in duplicate. Both go to the cashier's window. One goes upstairs to the bookkeeping office as the cashier's record. The other goes to the shipping desk, which is but a few feet from the cashier's cage. If the order is to go out immediately, the clerk who receives the order gets the necessary stock and lays it, with the order, on an adjoining table to be made up. When this is done, the flowers are boxed and addressed and laid on the next table. The order ticket is still attached. When the delivery boy takes the box, the ticket is detached and put aside. During the day these tickets are taken to the bookkeeping department; they indicate that the order has been filled and sent. In the bookkeeping department, the two copies of each order are matched and pinned together, thus forming a complete record of the day's transactions. Since they are being collected and paired during the day, a complete record of each day's business is available early the following morning, if not the same night.

Beginning November 1, Penn the Florist installed a National cash register of the type that classifies each order or parts of an order, so that at the end of the month the firm will know how much business was funeral work, how much corsage orders, etc.

Of course, holiday business cannot all be handled in this store. On special occasions a neighboring store is employed for receiving stock and making deliveries. As high as 4,600 deliveries in a day have been made from this extra store at Easter time. During the remainder of the year baskets, pottery

AUTUMN EXHIBITIONS

NEW YORK FALL SHOWS.

Show Diminished Interest.

The two New York flower shows of last week, that of the American Institute, November 3 to 5, held in the Engineering Societies' building, and that of the Horticultural Society of New York, held in the American Museum of Natural History, showed how present conditions are militating against interesting exhibitions of horticultural products. Outside of the big international flower show, now, happily, an annual event in New York, there is a waning of interest in local shows in that locality. This is not due to a cessation of interest in such shows on the part of the public, but rather to difficulties in the production of exhibits of the kind that go to the making up of a show. Dependence has always been placed upon the private growers for exhibits to conform with the schedules issued for these shows, but it must be realized that where formerly there were twenty prospective exhibitors, there now is, perhaps, only one. So many private greenhouses have been closed altogether, or devoted to actual household requirements, that exhibition stock has been neglected, and unless something unforeseen happens, or some of the former enthusiasts seek to redeem the situation, it may be some time before local shows will take on something of the glories of the past.

Old Features Lacking.

Labor conditions, and increased expense in the way of buildings and supplies, turn even millionaires from a horticultural hobby, and the revulsion is reflected in the shows of last week. Staged in practically the same quarters as formerly, the exhibits were conspicuous through their paucity. The managers of the shows did their best to conceal the shortage in exhibits, but, at best, their ingenuity was scant. The show of the Horticultural Society of New York occupied only the western aisle of the big museum, with the orchid section, as usual, in the northern aisle, and a lot of trained plants of chrysanthemums, diminutive even as the whole exhibition, in the foyer, where once, in pre-war days, were seen the magnificent productions of Adolph Lewisohn and others, in spread as much as sixteen feet in diameter. The same condition was in evidence at the American Institute's show. But in spite of the narrowing down of the scope of these shows, the exhibitions were excellent.

At the American Institute.

At the American Institute the exhibits generally were good. The chrysanthemum displays were light, and, outside of the small varieties, there did not appear to be anything new. The warm weather prior to the show prevented the staging of many flowers in course of preparation for the exhibition. One exhibitor expressed it: "The best of my flowers melted away."

W. Milne, gardener for the H. B. Plant estate, Groton, Conn., carried off the medal for the finest flowers in the show, staging some remarkable stock, when conditions were considered. Geo. E. Ferguson, gardener for Mrs. Harry Payne Whitney, Manhasset, N. Y., also helped materially in the make-up of the show.

Max Schling staged two magnificent Egyptian vases of chrysanthemums supported by autumn foliage and berried branches, with an accentuated note produced by Physalis Franchetii, which proved to be a great attraction to the visitors.

The commercial exhibits were few; in fact, the C. H. Totty Co., Madison, N. J., filled out in the commercial section. Its group of chrysanthemums and roses on the platform in the main hall was superb, and was awarded a special prize. The company also won the firsts in fifteen classes of chrysanthemums and four classes of roses.

The judges were Peter Duff, Eugene Dailedouze, John McNichol and Wil-

Pierson Co., Tarrytown, N. Y., won first prizes in the classes for fifty red and fifty dark pink. L. B. Coddington, of Murray Hill, N. J., was second on fifty dark pink and first on fifty flesh or light pink, second in that class going to the Chas. H. Totty Co.

Silver medals were awarded to the Charles H. Totty Co. for the new rose, Golden Ophelia, and to the F. R. Pierson Co. for its pink sport of Francis Scott Key.

In the foliage plant section the F. R. Pierson Co. won two firsts and one second.

In the orchid classes Lager & Hurrell, Summit, N. J., staged the prize-winning collection of not less than twenty-five species and varieties and won the award for the new meritorious variety not in commerce. The Joseph Manda Co., West Orange, N. J., won first on three plants of three varieties and on a collection of not less than twenty-five vases. This firm was awarded a special prize on its display of Cypripedium insigne Sanderæ.

Special Awards.

Special awards were given as follows: Herman Mamitsch, Rockville Center, N. Y., on basket of sweet peas, sport of Rose Queen; Mills & Co., Mamaroneck, N. Y., on display of dahlias; A. N. Pierson, Inc., Cromwell, Conn., on pompon chrysanthemums Nos. 498, 456, 461, 466 and 458; F. R. Pierson Co., on display of ferns; Julius Roehrs Co., Rutherford, N. J., on collection of orchids; Chas. H. Totty Co., on five vases roses.

The private gardeners, who staged the greater part of the show, included the following among the prize-winners: Joseph A. Winsock, gardener for Mrs. Wm. D. Guthrie, Locust Valley, N. J.; James McManus, for Miss A. De Lamar, Glen Cove, N. Y.; Andrew Strachan, for Wm. B. Thompson, Yonkers, N. Y.; James Stuart, for Mrs. F. A. Constable, Mamaroneck, N. Y.; George Ferguson, for Mrs. Payne Whitney, Manhasset, N. Y.; A. MacDonald, for D. E. Oppenheimer, Yonkers, N. Y.; W. R. Fowkes, for Howard Cole, Madison, N. J.; James T. Sisley, for Mrs. Paul Moore, Convent, N. J.; A. V. Carver, for Miss M. Valentine, New Canaan, Conn.; David Gustafson, for H. F. Kean, Elberon, N. J.; William Reid, for S. M. and A. Colgate, Orange, N. J., and Anthon Pedersen, for Charles Stewart Smith, Stamford, Conn.

Anthony J. Manda, Hollis, N. Y., was manager of the show.

TARRYTOWN, N. Y.

Autumn Show.

The annual fall exhibition of the Tarrytown Horticultural Society was held at Music hall, November 3 to 5. The exhibition again proved a success. Owing to the unfavorable weather conditions, the exhibits of chrysanthemums were not quite so extensive as in former years, but they were of fine quality. The fruit and vegetable exhibits were far ahead of previous exhibits. Com-

Horticultural Society's Show

The chrysanthemum show held by the Horticultural Society of New York at the Museum of Natural History November 4 to 7 depended chiefly for its support this year on the gardeners of the private estates in this vicinity, though a few commercial growers made exhibits. In the chrysanthemum classes the Charles H. Totty Co., Madison, N. J., was the only commercial grower who appeared in the list of awards. To this firm went first prize for twenty blooms with stems of not less than three feet; for collection of twenty named varieties, stems not over fifteen inches; for collection of twenty varieties of pompons and of a similar variety of singles.

Rose Classes.

tive material is suitable to form the drawing feature of the display. One would perhaps prefer another to the harvest phase of the day, to distinguish the Thanksgiving day window from a mere autumn display. The Puritan reminiscences provide the best material for window displays. it with flowers in the minds of passers-by. On this score the possibilities are unlimited.

These are a few suggestions. They should stimulate others in each florist's mind, in keeping with his own locality and his own facilities. But wherever he is, the opportunity is big. Throughout America the last Thursday in November should bring a greater demand for flowers this year than ever before, a demand far greater if florists of the country undertake to "talk turkey"—and flowers—to the public.

PICKING UP MONEY.

Quarters and Dimes for Retailers.

Nobody suggests that flower stores imitate drug stores, which nowadays chase the elusive nickels so assiduously that the jimeracks on display almost, if they do not totally, obscure the original apothecarial purpose of such places. It is foolish to put in so many side lines that the main line is submerged. But there is little danger of that with flower stores; most of them still neglect their legitimate opportunities.

Take, for instance, plant foods and insecticides. How many florists carry them? They would not be out of place in any store which sells plants; indeed, nearly every florist who sells plants has numerous requests for "something to make them grow." Not to have such things at hand, even in sight, is a neglect deplorable in more ways than one. In the first place, every florist should try to supply as many as possible of the needs of his customers. He supplies the pot cover; then why not the bit of plant food? In the second place, in addition to satisfying the customer's desire, each such sale adds a quarter or a dime to the florist's profits and does it without adding in any way to his overhead expenses.

Within recent times some of the large retailers have come to appreciate that a really desirable sum is to be added to the annual profits in this perfectly legitimate way. Trying it out, numbers of them have found it paid to have several kinds on display and to advertise them by means of the show cards, booklets and envelope stuffers supplied by the manufacturers. "Now we never fail to mention plant food when selling potted plants," says a prominent St. Louis retailer. There are many good plant foods, each having its particular advantages. The housewife wants "something for her plants." Gratify her wish.

FLOWERS FOR FUNERALS.

Various estimates place the proportion of flowers for funerals at one-third to one-half of the total sales of florists in this country. Whatever the exact amount, there is today no other branch of sales which comes near rivaling that one the year around. Not without good reason do some retailers call it their "bread-and-butter" business.

What it amounts to in an individual store may be seen by the illustration on this page, which shows the work made up for one funeral, that of the secretary of the order of railway telegraphers, by the C. Young & Sons Co., St. Louis, recently. Eighteen pieces are shown, an equal number each of baskets, sprays and wreaths.

In this group it is interesting to note the proportion of each type of order. It indicates, if one may generalize therefrom, what is being generally noted in the best florists' stores; namely, a change from the one-time demand for all sorts of odd designs to a call for funeral offerings depending, not on shape, but on artistic arrangement for their effect. Baskets are coming more and more into vogue for funerals. Simple sprays are largely asked for, and tastefully made wreaths represent the usual extent of the desire for a design. Occasionally a florist has a call for an odd and intricate piece, but nowadays that is the exception. Recognition of real beauty has led to the demand for the looser forms of arrangement.

MAKING SPACE COUNT.

Many flower stores cover a larger floor area than that of Penn the Florist, in Boston, but few do so large a business. One is inclined to wonder, upon entering it, if this is the place where this firm's tremendous business is done. For the year's total is one that would stagger many florists. The reason that so much can be done, and is done, in this space is learned upon inspection. Arrangement and system tell the tale.

How simple are the travels of an order is instructive. Order tickets are in duplicate. Both go to the cashier's window. One goes upstairs to the bookkeeping office as the cashier's record. The other goes to the shipping desk, which is but a few feet from the cashier's cage. If the order is to go out immediately, the clerk who receives the order gets the necessary stock and lays it, with the order, on an adjoining table to be made up. When this is done, the flowers are boxed and addressed and laid on the next table. The order ticket is still attached. When the delivery boy takes the box, the ticket is detached and put aside. During the day these tickets are taken to the bookkeeping department; they indicate that the order has been filled and sent. In the bookkeeping department, the two copies of each order are matched and pinned together, thus forming a complete record of the day's transactions. Since they are being collected and paired during the day, a complete record of each day's business is available early the following morning, if not the same night.

Beginning November 1, Penn the Florist installed a National cash register of the type that classifies each order or parts of an order, so that at the end of the month the firm will know how much business was funeral work, how much corsage orders, etc.

Of course, holiday business cannot all be handled in this store. On special occasions a neighboring store is employed for receiving stock and making deliveries. As high as 4,600 deliveries in a day have been made from this extra store at Easter time. During the remainder of the year baskets, pottery

NEW YORK FALL SHOWS.

Show Diminished Interest.

The two New York flower shows of last week, that of the American Institute, November 3 to 5, held in the Engineering Societies' building, and that of the Horticultural Society of New York, held in the American Museum of Natural History, showed how present conditions are militating against interesting exhibitions of horticultural products. Outside of the big international flower show, now, happily, an annual event in New York, there is a waning of interest in local shows in that locality. This is not due to a cessation of interest in such shows on the part of the public, but rather to difficulties in the production of exhibits of the kind that go to the making up of a show. Dependence has always been placed upon the private growers for exhibits to conform with the schedules issued for these shows, but it must be realized that where formerly there were twenty prospective exhibitors, there now is, perhaps, only one. So many private greenhouses have been closed altogether, or devoted to actual household requirements, that exhibition stock has been neglected, and unless something unforeseen happens, or some of the former enthusiasts seek to redeem the situation, it may be some time before local shows will take on something of the glories of the past.

Old Features Lacking.

Labor conditions, and increased expense in the way of buildings and supplies, turn even millionaires from a horticultural hobby, and the revulsion is reflected in the shows of last week. Staged in practically the same quarters as formerly, the exhibits were conspicuous through their paucity. The managers of the shows did their best to conceal the shortage in exhibits, but, at best, their ingenuity was scant. The show of the Horticultural Society of New York occupied only the western aisle of the big museum, with the orchid section, as usual, in the northern aisle, and a lot of trained plants of chrysanthemums, diminutive even as the whole exhibition, in the foyer, where once, in pre-war days, were seen the magnificent productions of Adolph Lewisohn and others, in spread as much as sixteen feet in diameter. The same condition was in evidence at the American Institute's show. But in spite of the narrowing down of the scope of these shows, the exhibitions were excellent.

At the American Institute.

At the American Institute the exhibits generally were good. The chrysanthemum displays were light, and, outside of the small varieties, there did not appear to be anything new. The warm weather prior to the show prevented the staging of many flowers in course of preparation for the exhibition. One exhibitor expressed it: "The best of my flowers melted away."

W. Milne, gardener for the H. B. Plant estate, Groton, Conn., carried off the medal for the finest flowers in the show, staging some remarkable stock, when conditions were considered. Geo. E. Ferguson, gardener for Mrs. Harry Payne Whitney, Manhasset, N. Y., also helped materially in the make-up of the show.

Max Schling staged two magnificent Egyptian vases of chrysanthemums supported by autumn foliage and berried branches, with an accentuated note produced by Physalis Franchetii, which proved to be a great attraction to the visitors.

The commercial exhibits were few; in fact, the C. H. Totty Co., Madison, N. J., filled out in the commercial section. Its group of chrysanthemums and roses on the platform in the main hall was superb, and was awarded a special prize. The company also won the firsts in fifteen classes of chrysanthemums and four classes of roses.

The judges were Peter Duff, Eugene Dailledouze, John McNichol and Wil-

Pierson Co., Tarrytown, N. Y., won first prizes in the classes for fifty red and fifty dark pink. L. B. Coddington, of Murray Hill, N. J., was second on fifty dark pink and first on fifty flesh or light pink, second in that class going to the Chas. H. Totty Co.

Silver medals were awarded to the Charles H. Totty Co. for the new rose, Golden Ophelia, and to the F. R. Pierson Co. for its pink sport of Francis Scott Key.

In the foliage plant section the F. R. Pierson Co. won two firsts and one second.

In the orchid classes Lager & Hurrell, Summit, N. J., staged the prize-winning collection of not less than twenty-five species and varieties and won the award for the new meritorious variety not in commerce. The Joseph Manda Co., West Orange, N. J., won first on three plants of three varieties and on a collection of not less than twenty-five vases. This firm was awarded a special prize on its display of Cypripedium insigne Sanderæ.

Special Awards.

Special awards were given as follows: Herman Mamitsch, Rockville Center, N. Y., on basket of sweet peas, sport of Rose Queen; Mills & Co., Mamaroneck, N. Y., on display of dahlias; A. N. Pierson, Inc., Cromwell, Conn., on pompon chrysanthemums Nos. 498, 456, 461, 466 and 458; F. R. Pierson Co., on display of ferns; Julius Roehrs Co., Rutherford, N. J., on collection of orchids; Chas. H. Totty Co., on five vases roses.

The private gardeners, who staged the greater part of the show, included the following among the prize-winners: Joseph A. Winsock, gardener for Mrs. Wm. D. Guthrie, Locust Valley, N. J.; James McManus, for Miss A. De Lamar, Glen Cove, N. Y.; Andrew Strachan, for Wm. B. Thompson, Yonkers, N. Y.; James Stuart, for Mrs. F. A. Constable, Mamaroneck, N. Y.; George Ferguson, for Mrs. Payne Whitney, Manhasset, N. Y.; A. MacDonald, for D. E. Oppenheimer, Yonkers, N. Y.; W. R. Fowkes, for Howard Cole, Madison, N. J.; James T. Sisley, for Mrs. Paul Moore, Convent, N. J.; A. V. Carver, for Miss M. Valentine, New Canaan, Conn.; David Gustafson, for H. F. Kean, Elberon, N. J.; William Reid, for S. M. and A. Colgate, Orange, N. J., and Anthon Pedersen, for Charles Stewart Smith, Stamford, Conn.

Anthony J. Manda, Hollis, N. Y., was manager of the show.

Autumn Show.

The annual fall exhibition of the Tarrytown Horticultural Society was held at Music hall, November 3 to 5. The exhibition again proved a success. Owing to the unfavorable weather conditions, the exhibits of chrysanthemums were not quite so extensive as in former years, but they were of fine quality. The fruit and vegetable exhibits were far ahead of previous exhibits. Com-

Horticultural Society's Show

The chrysanthemum show held by the Horticultural Society of New York at the Museum of Natural History November 4 to 7 depended chiefly for its support this year on the gardeners of the private estates in this vicinity, though a few commercial growers made exhibits. In the chrysanthemum classes the Charles H. Totty Co., Madison, N. J., was the only commercial grower who appeared in the list of awards. To this firm went first prize for twenty blooms with stems of not less than three feet; for collection of twenty named varieties, stems not over fifteen inches; for collection of twenty varieties of pompons and of a similar number of singles.

Rose Classes.

petition was keen in the table decoration for the Stuyvesant Fish cup.

Notable among the exhibits was a new pink-rose on the order of La France and also a pink Francis Scott Key, exhibited by the F. R. Pierson Co. This firm was awarded the certificate of merit for its beautiful exhibit of roses, chrysanthemums, ferns, palms, etc., and won prizes on cut blooms of roses, carnations and chrysanthemums.

The judges on the first day were T. F. Eastwood, Garrison, N. Y.; Alex MacKenzie, White Plains, and George Middleton, Tarrytown. On the second day they were William Whitton, New Rochelle; E. Beckett, White Plains, and Duncan McGregor, Tuxedo Park, N. Y.

The exhibition was well attended and fully appreciated by all the visitors.

Aside from the F. R. Pierson Co., which captured a number of awards, the prize-winners were chiefly the gardeners of the private estates in this vicinity. Among them were Alex Anderson, gardener for Henry Sidenberg; A. Strachan, for William B. Thompson; J. W. Dowlan, for S. M. Lehman; George Malral, for William Mitchell; C. A. Williams, for Mrs. J. I. Straus; A. MacDonald, for D. E. Oppenheimer; M. J. Senley, for Mrs. Charles Mallory; William Graham, for John D. Rockefeller; James MacDonald, for Mrs. John H. Hall; Frank Baiano, for W. H. McGee; Robert Macon, for Stuyvesant Fish; Peter Stobie, for Charles de Rham; James Linane, for Mrs. F. H. Allen; Charles J. Wood, for Mrs. Stanley McCormick; Edward Kane, for F. P. King; J. A. Grant, for Mrs. Thomas Lake; John MacIntyre, for R. C. Colt; William Smith, for Robert Mallory; Stuart McKendry, for John J. Riker; W. Will, for Clarence Whitman; A. H. Brown, for G. E. Tripp.

TENNESSEE FLORISTS.

Will Meet at Memphis.

All roads lead to Memphis next week for Tennessee florists, where the seventh annual convention of the Tennessee State Florists' Association will be held, November 17 and 18. The arrangements have been practically completed and the program should make the convention one of the best in the history of the association. This is the first time the Memphis florists have entertained the convention and they are anxious to make it a success. Nothing is being left undone that might add to the comfort and entertainment of the visiting florists.

The meetings will be held in the Board of Commerce building. One of the important features of the convention will be the commercial displays. Display space is being furnished free of charge by the Memphis florists.

Program of Addresses.

W. Cleveland Johnson, chairman of the arrangement committee, Memphis, will call the meeting to order and, after the invocation, W. H. Englehart will introduce the mayor of Memphis. The mayor's address of welcome will be followed by the annual address of President A. J. McNutt, of Knoxville, Tenn., and by the report of the secretary-treasurer, Professor G. M. Bentley, of Knoxville. The program of subsequent addresses is as follows:

NOVEMBER 17, 10:00 A. M.

"Birthday Flowers," by Vincent J. Gorly, of Grimm & Gorly, St. Louis, Mo.
 "Flower Shop Arrangement," by R. I. Gresham, of the C. A. Dahl Co., Atlanta, Ga.
 "The Cost of Doing Business," by Herman Knoble, of Knoble Bros. Co., Cleveland, O.
 "The Best Method of Collecting," by Ira W. Harper, of the A. W. Smith Co., Pittsburgh, Pa.
 "National Publicity," by George Asmus, of Schiller's, Chicago, and Major O'Keefe, of Boston, Mass.

"Local Publicity," by W. H. Englehart, president of the Idlewild Greenhouses, Memphis, Tenn.

NOVEMBER 17, 1:30 P. M.

Report of committees.
 Election of officers.
 Selection of meeting place for next year.

"Substitutes for Debarred Blooming Plants," by Carl Hagenburger, West Mentor, O.

"Progress of Floriculture in Tennessee for the Last Fifty Years," by Ed Truitt, Franklin, Tenn.

"Value of Floral Articles in the Public Press," by Louis J. Tackett, of Fort Worth, Tex.

"Travel Talks on the Orient," by A. Miller, of the American Bulb Co., Chicago.

NOVEMBER 17, 7:45 P. M.

"Lily Culture in the South," by Prof. R. N. Lobdell, of the Mississippi Agricultural College.
 Motion pictures of Hollywood Gardens, Seattle, Wash., and Gude Bros. Co., Washington, D. C., and advertising slides of Penn the Florist, Boston, Mass.

NOVEMBER 18, 9:00 A. M.

"Heating and Cooling Systems," by Fred Lautenschlager, of Kroeschell Bros. Co., Chicago, Ill.

"Greenhouse Construction—the Best Adapted to the South," by Harold Joy, Nashville, Tenn.

"Florists' Problems in Europe," by Sidney Bayersdorfer, of H. Bayersdorfer & Co., Philadelphia, Pa.

"Should Florists Use Artificial Flowers?" by H. G. Brumm, Bristol, Tenn., and Fred C. Weber, St. Louis, Mo.

At 10:30 a. m. November 18 there will be an intermission for conference and to permit an inspection of the exhibits. Before the noon adjournment, however, the convention will be called to order for announcements. At 1:15 p. m. the members and delegates will assemble for a trip through Memphis greenhouses and nurseries.

ST. LOUIS GROWERS' MEETING.

Plans are being made for a meeting of the growers of the St. Louis district at the Planters' hotel, St. Louis, Tuesday, November 16. This meeting has been called for the purpose of organizing a permanent branch of the National Flower Growers' Association. Plans for including the growers of central, western and southern Illinois with those of Missouri in one large organization, will be discussed.

This is the largest meeting of growers ever called in St. Louis and all the growers of that district are urged to be present. J. F. Ammann, secretary of the National Flower Growers' Association, announces that growers who will not be able to be present at the meeting may become members of the organization upon written application.

The Illinois committee in charge of the meeting is as follows: C. E. Gullett, W. J. Hembreiker, Philip J. Daut, F. L. Washburn, James M. Cole and Walter A. Amling. The Missouri committee is as follows: L. Jules Bourdet, W. A. Rowe, W. J. Pilcher, C. E. De Wever and Joseph Deutschmann.

CHRYSANTHEMUM SOCIETY.

Reports on New Varieties.

The committees of the C. S. A. examining the new varieties of mums have submitted reports on the following:

At Chicago, Ill., October 30, No. 271-22-17, white, pompon, submitted by Elmer D. Smith & Co., Adrian, Mich., scored as follows: Color, 87; form, 19; stem and foliage, 20; fullness, 20; total, 86.

At Cincinnati, O., October 30, No. 271-22-17, white, pompon, submitted by Elmer D. Smith & Co., Adrian, Mich., scored as follows: Color, 35; form, 18; stem and foliage, 16; fullness, 20; total, 89.

At Boston, Mass., October 23, Mrs. Wm. Kessler, yellow, Japanese incurved, submitted by Jacob Hauck, Bloomfield, N. J., scored as follows: Color, 18; form, 14; fullness, 8; stem, 15; foliage, 12; substance, 12; size, 8; total, 87.

At Philadelphia, Pa., October 16, Mrs. Wm. Kessler, yellow, Japanese incurved, submitted by Jacob Hauck, Bloomfield, N. J., scored as follows: Color, 19; form, 14; fullness, 9; stem, 13; foliage, 12; substance, 14; size, 9; total, 89.

At New York, N. Y., October 23, Mrs. Wm. Kessler, yellow, Japanese incurved, submitted by Jacob Hauck, Bloomfield, N. J., scored as follows: Color, 17; form, 13; fullness, 9; stem, 13; foliage, 18; substance, 14; size, 7; total, 86.

BUSINESS EMBARRASMENTS.

Chicago, Ill.—The trustee of William Langhout, or Wiebren Langhout, bankrupt, has succeeded in paying a total dividend of thirteen and seven-tenths per cent on his debts. The Central Trust Co. of Illinois was appointed trustee in bankruptcy October 22, 1918. The final meeting of creditors was held at the office of Sidney C. Eastman, referee in bankruptcy, October 21, 1920, and the report of the trustee was there read. The total receipts were $11,737.30 and the fees of Ringer & Wilhartz, attorneys for the trustee, not including expenses, amounted to $2,500. This included charges for a lengthy legal dispute with the Delaware, Lackawanna & Western railroad. The total dividends paid amounted to $3,894.14. The principal creditor was Van Zonneveld Bros. & Philippo, Sassenheim, Holland. Three employees of Mr. Langhout claimed wages. A partial list of creditors and amount of claims is as follows:

Richards & Sons, Chicago.....	$ 541.48
A. Henderson & Co., Chicago.....	521.33
W. L. Palinsky, Chicago.....	123.25
Van Zonneveld Bros. & Philippo, Sassenheim, Holland.....	24,700.98
W. W. Barnard Co., Chicago.....	8.00
Louis Geyler Co., Chicago.....	101.40
John Lang, Chicago.....	108.65
Poehlmann Bros. Co., Chicago.....	47.80
Anton K. Truka, Chicago.....	70.40
American Shipping Co., Chicago.....	1,871.64
William Zastrow, Chicago.....	36.00
Anton Then, Chicago.....	175.00

The total liabilities were in the neighborhood of $28,000.

Milton, Del.—Charles G. Jones, whose business name is Jones, the Holly Wreath Man, says there will be a scarcity of holly and boxwood this season and that orders to date indicate a demand in excess of the supply.

Paris, France.—William T. Usinger, who has been in Europe representing American firms, is temporarily discontinuing his work here, after having visited the principal centers of supply, and is returning to the United States.

HOW CHICAGO DID IT

CHICAGO HAS BIG WEEK.

Staged by Allied Florists.

As a means of educating the public in regard to flowers, the "Say It with Flowers" week which started in Chicago Saturday, November 6, has proved a marked success. Newspapers have been printing feature stories concerning the various doings of the days of "Say It with Flowers" week; ten leading theaters held "Say It with Flowers" nights; popular actresses sang the "Say It with Flowers" song; in many churches mention was made, November 7, of the proposed gifts of flowers to soldiers and sailors and other inmates of hospitals, and, last but not least, the man in the street is talking about "Say It with Flowers" week.

The big week opened November 6 at the Chicago-Illinois football game at Stagg Field. An aeroplane with "Say It with Flowers" painted on its wings, swooped down and bombarded the 40,000 people witnessing the game with flowers. Tied to each flower was a card informing the recipient that it was "Say It with Flowers" week.

Events of the Week.

More aeroplane events were on schedule for Monday, November 8, including a flight over the loop, dropping carnation buds with cards attached. On this day, also, all the newspaper editors were presented with bouquets. The direct, or indirect, result was that the newspapers all printed stories with large headlines. The loop had been "Bombed with Buds," and all Chicago heard of it.

The hospitals of Chicago and vicinity received over 3,000 bunches of flowers Tuesday, November 9. These were distributed to the various wards and every patient received a bunch. That they were appreciated goes without saying, and by some this was considered one of the biggest events of the week.

At the weekly luncheon of the Chicago Association of Commerce, Wednesday, November 10, flowers were placed on every table. These were accompanied by small folders explaining the meaning of the week, which was referred to at the luncheon.

Retail Store Displays.

A feature of the week was the flower shows held in all the retail stores in the city. Some of these were fine exhibitions and attracted much attention. The directors in charge of the arrangements organized a special competition for those wishing to enter their exhibitions, and about fifty florists entered. The prize-winners were: George Wienhoeber, first; Bohannon Floral Co., second; H. N. Bruns, third. Honorable mention was given the Rogers Park Floral Co., Linea Florist, John Mangel, A. M. Pauliss and C. A. Samuelson.

Wednesday evening, November 10, was "Say It with Flowers" night on Chicago's "Great White Way." More than ten large theaters put on special features and advertised a "Say It with Flowers" night. These theaters were decorated with flowers gratis by the florists. The feature in one theater was Constance Penny, who, in a special costume, danced a "Say It with Flowers" dance, an interpretation of the song, which she later sang. Some large dance halls featured this night as flower night, as well.

Soldiers Remembered.

Armistice day saw a bunch of flowers presented to every wounded or sick soldier or sailor in Chicago. This immense task was undertaken by the American Red Cross, and due to their excellent organization there was practically no hitch in the plan. Both army and navy hospitals were visited and Red Cross nurses and soldiers saw that every hero was remembered. Effort was made to commemorate this event by having every citizen wear a flower in memory of "the boys who never came back."

The directors of the Allied Florists' Association arranged with the Visiting Nurses' Association, which cares for several hundred patients, crippled children, old people and others who are too poor to go to the hospitals, that Friday, November 12, all these poor people should be visited by members of the nurses' association and individually presented with flowers.

Florists' Club Dance.

The last big feature planned for the week is a dance, Friday night, November 12, planned at the meeting of the Chicago Florists' Club just a week before. It is to be held in the Colonial ballroom of the Hotel Randolph, which is to be profusely decorated for the occasion. Florists, their ladies and their friends are to be the only guests. Over 275 tickets had been sold by the opening of the week. The committee in charge of the arrangements of the dance is composed of T. E. Waters, A. T. Pyfer, Paul Chicago Florists' Announcement of their Big Week in Local Newspapers.

E. Weiss, Fred Lautenschlager, August F. Poehlmann, A. J. Zech, William J. Keimel, Guy W. French, E. A. Ollinger and Ed. Enders.

Newspaper Advertisements.

In a preparatory advertisement, a "mammoth flower show" was announced "at every flower shop in Chicago and suburbs," November 8 to 14, in the Tribune and other Chicago dailies. The same announcement played further upon the mayor's much-advertised horn, in the following manner:

Chicago is to have the world's largest flower show—several hundred flower shops exhibiting the finest prize specimens of fall flowers and plants.

The public conservatories at Garfield, Lincoln and Washington parks will likewise display choicest varieties of chrysanthemums at their annual flower shows.

The public cannot well afford to miss this unusual opportunity to view the pride of Chicago's expert growers—the greatest in the world.

Monday, November 8, the advertisement which is reproduced on page 25 appeared in daily papers.

Week a Success.

The week has been a marked success. Members of the trade have worked together splendidly. They have thrown open their doors to welcome the public to their individual flower shows. Banners appeared on delivery and private cars. Posters are displayed in nearly all the windows. Thousands of folders, supplied by the directors, have been used judiciously by the retailers.

The Chicago daily papers featured the "Say It with Flowers" week in their news columns. While this publicity is of a general nature, the trade cannot but benefit by it. Feature stories suggesting the wearing of a flower on Armistice day must influence the public to some extent. Secretary Swenson, of the Allied Florists' Association, estimated that if the free publicity that has been obtained were to be paid for at regular advertising rates, it would cost the association over $5,000.

The directors of the Allied Florists' Association were in control of all arrangements for the week and they, together with Secretary H. V. Swenson and President George Asmus, deserve great credit for the success of the campaign. Besides President George Asmus, the board consists of William J. Smyth, August Lange, John Michelsen, Paul Klingsporn, Eric Johnson, August F. Poehlmann, Otto Amling and Peter Pearson.

covered wire in their fancy bouquet work. Green sheet moss is used extensively in baskets and other arrangements for the display of flowers.

Flowers at present are not expensive for the American buyer, but the French flower lover feels the cost a little more. At this writing the French franc, whose normal value is one-fifth of an American dollar, is now rated at one-fifteenth. It therefore can be seen by the following scale of prices that there are two views of prices in the flower market:

Orchids, which are seen in dozens of varieties compared with the small number displayed in America, sell at 30 francs each.

Chrysanthemums of the best size are 180 francs a dozen.

Roses of all varieties, usually the best in their class, bring 60 francs a dozen.

A basket of twelve superb dahlias was sold for 70 francs.

In the best class of flower stores plants are conspicuous for their absence, with the exception, perhaps, of cyclamens and hydrangeas. These are usually of the larger types.

Of course there are the street venders, who, especially in the outdoor flower markets, on special days of the week handle fine stock. There one can buy flowers at a reasonable price.

French Artistic Nature.

At this time of the year, the harvest season, the flower stores display a variety of small pumpkins, squashes and other highly-colored vegetables and fruits, such as peppers, apples, pears, persimmons and figs. Their table pieces tempt both the sense of smell and the appetite—a good combination.

I wish I could further describe the floral creations of the Parisian florists, which differ materially from the work of our own florists. This taste is what the natives and the Americans visiting France call "chic," an indefinable something peculiar to this people in every artistic effort attempted.

William T. Usinger.

AUTUMN ADS APPEAR.

The autumn opening of the florists' coöperative advertising campaigns in various cities took place during the first week in November. Some of them, of course, have been using space in local papers during the summer as occasion offered. Now, however, they are increasing their activity and unlimbering heavy artillery for action. Elsewhere in this issue is described Chicago's publicity in connection with "Say It with Flowers" week in that city.

In St. Louis the first gun of the fall campaign went off in the Globe-Democrat last week. It advertised "The Radiant Flower of Autumn, Chrysanthemums." Alongside an illustration of a chrysanthemum bloom ran the following:

It is Chrysanthemum Time! These majestic blooms, so brilliant of aspect, await your admiration at every florist's. The magnificence and lasting freshness of these lovely flowers yield supremacy to none for decoration.

As a compliment, appreciation or remembrance, Chrysanthemums are without a rival. They are essentially the vogue and no home should be without a vase of these gorgeous flowers.

You will find a variety of shades and sizes, and the prices to be extremely moderate, notwithstanding the wealth of floral beauty received in return.

The advertisement closed with the line, "You can send flowers by telegraph to any city," and the script slogan, "Say It with Flowers."

PARISIAN FLOWER STORES.

Change from German.

Before leaving Germany for France I visited Erfurt and saw the famous greenhouses and gardens of J. C. Schmidt. The grounds, I was told, still have their pre-war beauty, but the greenhouses for the most part will soon be shut down on account of the lack of coal. A new roadway or drive is being built, along which the horticultural work will be equal to anything in Europe. The landscape work in general surrounding the houses and offices surpasses anything we have in America of a commercial nature. From postcards on sale at the office one can get a slight idea of the grandeur of the place in former years, and also of the quality of the stock at one time grown in the houses. At present, due to economic conditions, this splendid production has been reduced.

I found such cities as Leipsic, Nuremberg and Stuttgart similar to other German cities in regard to the character of their flower stores.

It was surprising to see the large number of stores in Germany selling artificial flowers. They handle only made-up baskets, wreaths, etc., both for funerals and weddings.

Few Plants in Paris

In Paris one sees an entirely different class of flower stores. The good flower stores handle few, if any, small flowering plants, while in Germany, as in the United States, these plants are plentiful. Paris displays her floral art in gorgeous baskets and hampers, in wonderfully designed centerpieces, or in large pieces of display. I could not begin to name the varieties of orchids usually assembled in one piece. One of these pieces usually is the center of attraction in the window, surrounded by vases and baskets of less pretentious, if not more beautiful, flowers. There is ever the sense of freshness in these displays, as if they had just that minute been placed there. The flowers on display are always of such an unusually large size, especially to the American eye, that doubt is often expressed as to their being real.

The present display of flowers, including roses, orchids, violets, chrysanthemums and carnations, looks like exhibition stock, having for foliage as many varieties as a French chef has sauces. Anything that has berries on it is used profusely in all kinds of work. Raspberry foliage, with unripened berries, is generally used with yellow roses and the effect is beautiful.

Just now a large berried holly is in evidence. I have seen numerous other decorations used, but my lack of knowledge of the French tongue forbids my even ascertaining their names. But I feel sure there is no foliage of any kind which can possibly be used that is not seen at the flower stores.

I have seen the largest dahlias in Paris that I have ever seen. They are in every color and variety imaginable and some even beyond imagination.

Many Street Peddlers.

The street peddlers are interesting, especially at the flower market at the Madeleine on flower days. Here the display of fancy outdoor stock often outclasses that in the best stores and prices are good. Every cart and stand has its supply of straw frames, wreaths and crosses in case a funeral piece is wanted, but bouquets are most popular, being purchased by people in all walks of life. Some of the better stores use a green-

CLUB MEETINGS

CHICAGO FLORISTS' CLUB.

Election of Officers.

At the monthly meeting of the Chicago Florists' Club, Thursday evening, November 4, nomination of officers for 1921 was held. For each office the nomination was unanimous, Ex-president T. E. Waters declining another term in order to leave the nomination of Joseph Kohout for president unanimous. The other officers for the coming year are: Vice-president, A. T. Pyfer; treasurer, A. H. Schneider, Oak Park, and secretary, Fred Lautenschlager. August F. Poehlmann, whose term as trustee had expired, was re-nominated for another three years.

One application for membership was read, that of Albert Schmidt. Secretary Lautenschlager, in his report, made reference to the tremendous growth of the membership list. There have been forty-six new members to date this year. This is an increase of over twenty-five per cent.

Recommend Honorary Memberships.

Mention was made of the resignation of Ernst C. Amling, who has settled in California, and his name and that of Oscar J. Friedman were referred to the trustees and recommended for honorary memberships. It was also voted that a basket of fruit be sent to Reinhold Schiller, who is ill in a hospital. President Waters in a short address made mention of members recently deceased and those present stood in silence while he read the names of Charles Hunt and Thomas J. Long.

It was voted that an invitation be extended to the Chrysanthemum Society of America to hold its annual exhibition in Chicago next year. It is held this week at Washington, D. C. A tentative committee to investigate possible accommodation was appointed by the chair and consisted of C. W. Johnson, chairman, Fred Lautenschlager and N. J. Wietor.

A bill of Mrs. Ella Grant Wilson for publicity work during the annual meeting of the American Carnation Society last January was brought before the club. One-third of this had been assumed by the Chicago Retail Florists' Association and another third by the Allied Florists' Association. It was voted that the Chicago Florists' Club assume payment of the remaining third. The total bill amounted to about $270.

"Say It with Flowers" Week.

The committee on "Say It with Flowers" week had no definite report to make, except that everything was being made ready. George Asmus said that the estimated cost would be between $6,000 and $7,000. It was expected, he said, that the week would be opened with a proclamation by Mayor Thompson.

President Waters brought up the idea of a dance to be held during "Say It with Flowers" week. After some discussion the idea was enthusiastically adopted by the club and the good-of-the-club committee was empowered to arrange details. As a guarantee of the financial support of the club, members were asked to subscribe for tickets and in five minutes 160 tickets at $1 each were spoken for by sixteen members. The night chosen was Friday, November 12, and it was proposed to call the dance the "Say It with Flowers" ball. It will be held at the Hotel Randolph.

In addition to the party November 12 the committee has arranged progressive cards, any game the ladies like to play, for the entertainment of those who do not dance.

Armistice day, November 11, it is proposed that every soldier in every hospital in the city receive a floral token. Among the other plans outlined for the big week was that at a football game Saturday, November 6, an aeroplane should fly over the field and drop flowers on the spectators of the game below.

It was suggested that while members were subscribing for the expenses of the big week the "Say It with Flowers" pennants still remaining be disposed of. Secretary Lautenschlager passed among the members and succeeded in disposing of all but twenty-five. These pennants are being used on florists' automobiles this week.

NEW YORK CLUB MEETING.

Next Year's Nominees.

The regular monthly meeting of the New York Florists' Club was held at the club's rooms in the Engineering Societies' building, Monday evening, November 8, with an attendance approaching 200. President A. M. Henshaw presided.

The nominating committee reported the following selections of candidates for office in the club during 1921:

For president: A. M. Henshaw, I. S. Hendrickson and Eugene Dailedouze.

For vice-president: Roman J. Irwin and John Canning.

For secretary: John Young and Wm. A. Phillips.

For trustees: Richard Hughes, G. E. M. Stumpp, Alex. Donaldson, Percy B. Rigby, C. B. Weathered, Fred L. Atkins, Jos. S. Fenrich, Harry O. May, Anton Schultheis, Wallace R. Pierson, Jos. A. Manda and P. W. Popp.

Joseph Kohout.

(Next President of the Chicago Florists' Club.)

For the exhibition committee it was announced that the next meeting night would be novelty night, and the committee hoped that the members would send sufficient exhibits to make a good showing.

Clifford Lowther, for the transportation committee, reported on the recent trip to Indianapolis, to the convention of the Florists' Telegraph Delivery Association.

C. H. Totty, for the flower show committee, reported arrangements for the flower show next spring to be well under way.

Secretary Young announced that the club had lost two members by death, William Plumb, a past president, and E. C. Horan. The demise of Mrs. Allen, wife of James K. Allen, was also reported. On motion, the chair was directed to appoint a committee to prepare memorial resolutions.

Most of the evening was taken up with a discussion of the movement in the direction of publicity to be promoted by the newly organized Allied Florists' Association of New York. Frank H. Traendly reported that at a meeting of the New York Wholesale Florists' Protective Association November 5 the sum of $2,600 was collected to be used for publicity purposes.

Several candidates were put in nomination for election at the next meeting.

The Exhibits.

A. N. Pierson, Inc., Cromwell, Conn., staged one vase each of Chrysanthemums Nellie Irwin, Elizabeth McDowell and Izola, for which a vote of thanks was awarded. A collection of thirty-five varieties of seedling single and pompon chrysanthemums exhibited by the same company was awarded a silver medal, and special mention was made of the variety New York, for which the committee on awards recommended a preliminary certificate.

W. A. Manda, Inc., South Orange, N. J., made a display of chrysanthemum seedling No. 8, for which a vote of thanks was awarded. J. H. P.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

The market is still suffering from an oversupply of stock. Outside material, such as cosmos, dahlias and small chrysanthemums, continues to arrive and hampers the movement of indoor-grown flowers. The supply of single-stemmed chrysanthemums shows little sign of decrease and is much in advance of demand. Most of the late varieties are being cut and it is expected that the mum season will close early this year. White and pink Chieftain, Bonnaffon, Marigold, Charles Rager and McNiece are among the offerings.

Roses are abundant and, with so many other flowers available, move rather slowly. American Beauty is not in particularly large supply, but the demand for it is not active and the prices of specials remain about the same as last week. Hybrid teas are plentiful, with movement slow at prices about the same as last week. The best Hadleys are bringing as much as $30 and Crusaders a little better. Francis Scott Key is of excellent quality and brings $50 for selected flowers.

The supply of carnations is ample, but the demand is weak, probably on account of the short stems of many of the arrivals.

There is a fair demand for cattleyas, which are arriving in somewhat increased supply. The labiate variety is supplemented by a few Trianæ and Percevaliana. The price range is 50 cents to $1, with proportionately more for hybrids, which are in but small supply. A few cyripediums are available and some oncidiums.

Lilies are not in large supply, yet quite sufficient for the rather small demand. Lily of the valley is plentiful enough for the small demand and moves slowly.

Numbers of violets are coming in, but the demand for them is light, the weather not favoring them. The singles seem to be in better favor than the doubles this season, the quality being better. Sweet peas are arriving in small lots and move within a range of $2 to $4 per hundred. Narcissi, mostly Paper Whites, continue to arrive in small quantity, but their sale drags.

Chrysanthemums are hard to quote, prices varying from day to day, according to accumulations. The large number of arrivals make it absolutely necessary to accomplish clearances, and bargain prices are common.

Various Notes.

William Plumb, for many years connected with the trade in and around New York, but for the last few years engaged in landscape work in Cuba, came up from Havana last week and engaged a room at the Hotel Breslin. He was taken ill Saturday night, November 6, and passed away before medical attention could be secured. His many friends in New York were shocked to hear of his sudden death. An obituary will be found elsewhere in this issue.

The executive board of the American Dahlia Society entertained the judges who officiated at the society's recent show in New York at lunch at the Pennsylvania hotel Thursday, November 4. President Vincent and Secretary Vick furnished particulars which showed that the exhibition was a decided success, resulting in a substantial balance for the treasury after meeting all expenses. After the lunch there was a meeting of the executive board.

The special meeting of retailers held at the Chemists' Club Wednesday evening, November 3, was poorly attended, only about forty being present, of whom twenty-four were retailers. The matter of supporting the publicity campaign planned by the newly organized Allied Florists' Trade Association of New York was discussed at length, but, on account of the small attendance, no action was taken, it being decided to hold another meeting shortly. The retailers pledged themselves to bring others, so as to have a representative gathering.

Anthony J. Manda and Walter Manda have taken over the greenhouse property of Florent Spiegeler, at Hollis, L. I., and will continue the business under the style of the Hollis Nurseries, producing both plants and cut flowers. There are six greenhouses on the property, about 15,000 square feet altogether.

Says the Chatham, N. B., World, of October 22: "Four American gentlemen were at the Touraine hotel Monday with the heads of three moose and four deer they had shot in the Bartibogno region under the guidance of Mr. Connell. They spent about two weeks on the hunting ground." The gentlemen referred to were Roman J. Irwin, New York; Wallace R. Pierson, Cromwell, Conn.; F. C. W. Brown, Cleveland, O., and Ernest Gude, Washington, D. C.

Recent visitors were: George W. Kerr, of the W. Atlee Burpee Co., Fordhook, Pa.; Richard Vincent, Jr., White Marsh, Md.; George L. Stillman, West-erly, R. I.; J. K. Alexander, East Bridge-water, Mass.

Robert E. Berry, well known landscape gardener, has permanently settled at Kingsport, Tenn., where he is establishing a 20-acre nursery to produce planting material for the town, which is being developed as a manufacturing center and will be made a city of homes something after the style of parts of Rochester, N. Y., and Dayton, O.

C. H. Totty, Madison, N. J., gave a talk on chrysanthemums before the Park Garden Club of Flushing, N. Y., Monday afternoon, November 8. J. H. P.

Irving Aronson, who was on the sales staff of Schloss Bros., Inc., New York, for the last eight years, has gone into partnership with Harry H. White, for the last three years assistant buyer for the same concern, and they are doing business as the Whitehouse Ribbon Co., at 37 East Twenty-eighth street.

SALT LAKE CITY, UTAH.

The Market.

A large supply still features the market. Chrysanthemums have the big call and move fairly well at good prices. Turner brings as high as $12 per dozen, retail, while other varieties go at $5 to $8 per dozen. Pompons in all colors bring from 25 to 50 cents, wholesale.

Roses of excellent quality are plentiful and move well for the mum season. Columbia, Hoosier and Dunlop are the popular leaders, selling as high as $25 per hundred, wholesale, while Ophelia, Shawyer, Milady and White Killarney range from $7 to $20 per hundred.

The carnation supply is picking up, but is still short of the demand. Carnations sell at from $3 to $7 per hundred. Laddie has again made its appearance. The first blooms are rather short, but bring $10 per hundred. A few blooms of Paper Whites may be had.

Various Notes.

Three or four days before election were rather slow, but October business shows a little improvement over last year, though the increased cost will no doubt absorb the extra receipts.

Robert Newcomb, of the Burlington Willow Ware Shops, Burlington, Ia., was in town November 2, showing a new line of stock.

The new rose, Dunlop, is meeting with much favor among growers and retailers in this section. Some growers believe it is the best find this season. G. J. B.

Houlton, Me.—Newell's, who are florists and milliners, are progressing. They have just completed the erection of a Hitchings greenhouse.

Apopka, Fla.—The new firm known as the Apopka Fernery Co. has now three acres under slats. It is making a specialty of growing Asparagus plumosus and Sprengeri. The concern is supported by local capital and will continue building until ten acres are covered.

EXCESSIVE HUMIDITY.

After receiving my carnation plants and setting them out, I find when a new green shoot looks promising dark spots appear on the new growth and then it wilts and dies. R. D.—Ga.

Your plants are probably affected with the carnation leaf-spot disease. This is usually brought on through excessive humidity, which is quite likely to occur in your warm climate. Pick off all the affected leaves possible and then spray thoroughly with Bordeaux mixture. Keep all other water off the foliage until you have the disease under control. Give abundant ventilation on all favorable occasions and keep a dry, buoyant atmosphere. Give enough water at the roots to promote a strong growth, but do not apply any fertilizers until the plants resume a normal growth.

—A. F. J. B.

CUTWORMS ON CARNATIONS.

Our carnations are being spoiled by some worm or insect which eats a hole in the side of the bud and hollows out the flower. It also attacks partly opened flowers. We have never been able to find any worms or insects at work. What remedy would you suggest?

R. & S.—Mich.

Your carnation buds are being eaten by cutworms. The reason you do not see them is because they feed at night. If you will take a strong light and go among the carnation beds after midnight, you will probably find them. To get rid of them, use poisoned bait. Take ordinary bran and mix a mash by adding molasses. Then mix with it enough Paris green to make it poisonous and drop a spoonful here and there on the beds. The feed stores sell an alfalfa-molasses horse feed which we have used after mixing it with Paris green.

A. F. J. B.

NEED CAREFUL CULTIVATION.

Under separate cover I am sending you a sample of my carnations. Almost all of them are rusty, below or at the roots, and some are dying. They have new soil and I give them plenty of air. I have never seen this before this year, although I have inspected some of the big greenhouses near here.

I am spraying them with a solution of formaldehyde, three-quarters of a pint to fifty gallons of water.

L. U.—Kan.

The plants were too badly dried up to give any idea as to the cause of your trouble. I could see no signs of rust, but believe the plants have never taken hold in the new soil. Water them moderately, but not too sparingly, and keep the surface of the soil loosened to a depth of about half an inch. A light spraying of Bordeaux mixture will do them no harm.

A. F. J. B.

CINCINNATI, O.

The Market.

Last week found this market a little more settled than it was the previous week. Stock is beginning to arrive in better condition and sales show an improvement.

Mums are now arriving in large quantities and are finding ready sale, some selling at $4 per dozen, including Turner, Eaton and Marigold. Pompons are arriving in a larger assortment of colors and sell well. Roses have been unusually good, especially Premier and Mme. Butterfly. They are finding a good market here, which is exceptional, as they are usually not in demand during the mum season.

Snapdragons are showing the result of the bright sunshine and clean up well.

Carnations and lilies are not going well, because of the mums. Violets are arriving in larger quantities and moving fast. A good week was noted in the sales of southern smilax and bitter-sweet, due to the fact that a number of decoration orders were filled.

Various Notes.

C. E. Critchell reports a banner week in the sale of large mums, of which he is receiving daily shipments from Joseph H. Hill, of Richmond, Ind., and Charles Pfeiffer's Sons, of Fort Thomas, Ky.

Hardesty & Co. deserve credit for keeping their window displays up to the minute. This week found the windows decorated with mum plants and cut blooms.

The William Murphy Co. is receiving some excellent snapdragons from Charles Murphy, Price Hill, and some exceptional Hoosier Beauty from Anders Rasmussen, New Albany, Ind.

C. J. Ohmer, of West Palm Beach, Fla., is stopping with his uncle, E. G. Gillett, en route from Colorado Springs, Colo., where he and his wife spent the summer. He is making the trip in his new Paige car.

H. W. Sheppard had a good week, receiving many F. T. D. orders and contracts to decorate for debutante festivities.

Tromey's Flower Shop has been kept going daily with funeral work and weddings.

Fred Gear reports business brisk on upper Vine street.

L. H. Kyrk is now receiving shipments of Ward roses and pompons, on which he reports ready sales.

The regular meeting of the Cincinnati Florists' Club was held Monday evening, November 8. A campaign for new members was discussed.

OPEN LETTERS FROM READERS

WILL PRICES STAY UP?

With the prices in all other lines falling, how much longer is the retail florist going to be compelled to keep on increasing the price of flowers? We are glad to admit that the standard of business has been raised nearer to the point it should occupy in the last two years, but the present is no time for further increases.

Flowers during the present season are of a poorer quality and higher in price than a year ago. Due to advertising, there have been many new uses created for flowers. Had the merchants and manufacturers of the country the foresight at the beginning of the present season to maintain last year's prices or be satisfied with a slight reduction, they would not be voicing their regrets at the present time.

During the present season the business in position to increase the volume of sales while maintaining last year's prices will have easy sailing. Some of us at the present time are kidding ourselves that there will be less competition this year than last. We are due for an awakening. Selling will be more of an art in the future than in the past. All other lines have been heavily advertised at reduced prices.

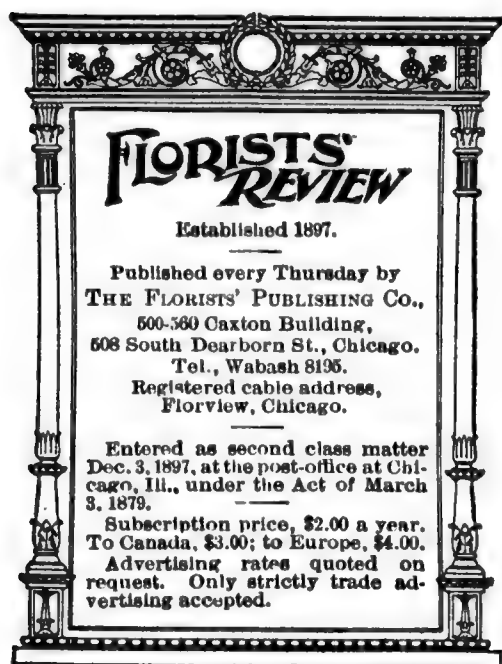

It is time to be up and doing. If the National Flower Growers' Association intends to improve the quality of stock, the members will be sure of fair prices and it will serve a useful purpose. If their intention is only to increase prices, there will be no excuse for the organization's existence.

At the F. T. D. convention it was stated that purchases should cost no more than thirty-three per cent of the selling price. The retailer, the man who has the final disposition of the stock, is lucky under present conditions to hold his percentage at fifty. And taking last year's prices as a basis, his prospects for profit for the coming year are rather gloomy, according to published averages.

More coöperation is to be wished for among the trade. At the present time it would benefit the retailer to study the reason for the drop in the percentage of funeral work. It has not maintained the increase it should in comparison with the rest of the business. Everybody realizes that it is profitable.

The retail florist should take a greater interest in flower shows and exhibitions. A splendid grower may be a poor display man, and flowers should be displayed to the public to their best advantage. J. A. Cannon.

Results bring advertising.
The Review brings results.

Cold weather has put snap in the flower markets as well as the atmosphere.

COMMERCIAL failures last week were almost twice the number in the same week of 1919.

JOHN COOK, rosarian, will celebrate his seventy-seventh birthday anniversary at his home in Baltimore, November 16.

ABOUT the only thing on which members of both political parties agree is the abolition of the excess profits tax, and florists are with 'em.

IN order that The Review may reach its readers at the usual time, the forms of the issue of November 25, Thanksgiving day, will close one day earlier than usual. Contributors and advertisers should send their material to reach this office not later than November 20.

IT is two years since florists as a class stopped pushing for business. For the greater part of the time since the armistice there has been more demand than stock. If this is not to be the case in future the trade soon will adjust itself to the new condition and each will prosper according to the effort made.

A STRICTER code of commercial morality will be forced on florists, among others, by the new set of business conditions being brought about by deflation. The days when there were more buyers than sellers are gone. The man who does not give value or who fails to adjust legitimate complaints will lose business so rapidly he soon will be eliminated from the competition.

RETAIL prices in the florists' trade, it has been said, are not quickly influenced by changes in wholesale markets, but it is being demonstrated that the retail prices of other commodities are still slower to follow down when wholesale prices break. Nearly all the necessities of life have fallen from twenty-five to fifty per cent in replacement cost in the last six months, but consumers have scarcely begun to feel the change in the cost of living. Retail florists, on the other hand, having stock only for the day, are selling on the basis of the present market level. And it transpires that the florists' business is not exceptional, as many of us thought, in the difference between what the consumer pays and what the producer gets.

WHOLESALE prices in mercantile lines during November were the lowest in eighteen months, according to Dun's review of business.

AN illustrated 32-page booklet from the flower shop Corona, 175 Kalverstraat, Amsterdam, Holland, shows specimens of its basket and design work. The managers are Joh. H. and J. J. Groenewegen.

THE Horticultural Trade-Journal, a leading British publication, reprinted on the first page of its October 20 issue the article of Charles H. Totty, in The Review of September 9, on "Travels among British Trade."

For advertising purposes only, Penn the Florist orders from California each autumn seventy-five dozen large chrysanthemums, which are exhibited in the store in Boston after they have made the trans-continental journey. The notice such an exhibit receives is worth much expensive newspaper space.

DON'T cut wages. It is probable that the reversal of the farm-to-factory movement, which has begun, will steadily increase the volume of labor open for employment in greenhouses, but it will be a mistake to reduce the pay. The future of the business is best assured by keeping wages up to a point which will make the work attractive to intelligent young men.

COAL PRICES DROPPING.

The coal situation at present is more favorable for those growers who have not yet secured their full winter's supply than it has been at any time this summer or autumn. It is regarded as more than likely that the demand for bituminous coal will show a marked decrease in the near future and those who are in touch with the situation believe this is one of the principal reasons for the drooping market at present. Dealers have begun to realize that with heavy production and a freer car supply there is really nothing to keep prices up and it is expected that within a few weeks quotations will have reached normal levels on practically all grades of fuel.

In the meantime most of the coal speculators and fly-by-night concerns have been driven from the field. Responsible coal men appear to be highly pleased over this change in the situation, for it was felt all along that these speculators had a greater share in the manipulation of prices than any other factor. They simply took advantage of a temporary situation to spread erroneous reports regarding an alleged impending shortage and managed in scores of instances to take orders at prices that were not warranted by actual conditions in the market.

Production of soft coal is certainly being maintained along the most encouraging lines. For the fourth week in succession the 12,000,000 mark has been exceeded. This is due in a large measure to the attitude of labor, which is returning to the mines in large numbers from other industries where wages had proved far more attractive. The miners seem to be satisfied, generally speaking, and operators are in hopes that no disturbances will arise in the future. With labor on the job, thus insuring large and efficient production, greenhouse men need have no worries about a possible shortage of coal.

Price declines last week were marked. The action of the Cleveland operators to lower prices had a telling effect on the market. The slowing up of manufacturing operations has also caused a slackening in demand for bituminous coal. Despite the fact that export and bunker demands are still heavy, prices in this division, where they have been highest, seem to be approaching normal levels, giving growers hope of an early supply for their needs at reasonable prices.

BUSINESS IS BRISK.

The trade in the middle west reports plant business brisk, like this:

Kindly discontinue our ad of holly ferns; all sold by the first insertion.—J. B. Wilson Floral Co., Des Moines, Ia., November 7, 1920.

We are sold out for the present and have to return money by every mail. We never want for buyers when we advertise in The Review.—Kirkwood Floral Co., Des Moines, Ia., November 6, 1920.

We have sold out on plumosus for the present, thanks to The Review.—Charles T. May, Dayton, O., November 6, 1920.

If you hear a man complain of the cost of advertising you can be pretty certain he spends a good bit of money elsewhere than in The Review.

BRIEF ANSWERS.

C. B., Minn.—Clematis coccinea is the name usually given in the trade, although the correct botanical name is C. texensis. It is probably a variety of C. Viorna and Asa Gray considered it such.

C. M., Ind.—Clematis coccinea, botanically known as C. texensis, is somewhat variable in leaf, which is sometimes almost round and in other cases oval.

E. C. M., N. J.—There are white, rose and purple forms of Gladiolus Kunderdi Glory and probably Mr. Kunderd has additional shades.

A SIX-CYLINDER PARABLE.

There's some food for thought for florists as well as other kinds of people in "A Six-Cylinder Parable" by the business manager of the New York Evening Post:

"There once was an Automobile Driver who used all Six Cylinders going Down Grade, but when he came to a Hill he took the wires off two Spark Plugs and tried to negotiate the hill on Four Cylinders. You will agree that he was a Pretty Foolish Driver.

"Yet a Lot of advertisers are Just Like Him. Last fall and winter, when they couldn't supply their Customers' Demands (the Going was Good), they advertised on a very Large Scale (used Six Cylinders). Now that they have Struck the Upgrade, quite a Few of them are Deliberately getting out and taking the Wires off two of their Spark Plugs. Just like the Grocer who Pulled Down the Curtains in his store because his groceries Weren't Selling.

"Other advertisers Took an Opposite View. They ran on Six Cylinders in good times; now they are running on Six and Giving her a lot of Extra Gas. When others are Dropping Out they are going Strong.

"A lot of Pessimists say we are in for a business depression This Winter. Those who Discharge their Best Salesmen doubtless will find business slow. But think—how much Better it would be for Everyone to keep On His Toes and when business shows Signs of Slowing Down, step on the Gas, keep Hitting on All Six—and take the Hill on High!"

OBITUARY

William Plumb.

William Plumb, president of the New York Florists' Club for two terms, 1898 and 1899, died at the Hotel Breslin, New York, on the evening of November 6, of heart failure superinduced by an attack of pleurisy. During the last few years he had been engaged in landscape work in Cuba, making his headquarters at Havana.

In the early days of the New York Florists' Club's history he was one of its staunch supporters, and figured in the flower shows of those times as a capable manager, particularly in the shows held at Madison Square Garden, then and now one of New York's greatest exhibition halls. He was well qualified as a gardener and horticulturist for his undertakings, which included the development of both private estates and commercial establishments. When preparations were in progress for the big Panama-Pacific exposition, at San Francisco, he was appointed superintendent of the department of horticulture.

Mr. Plumb was possessed of a most charming personality, which endeared him to a host of friends. He arrived in New York from Havana Tuesday, November 2. He had not been feeling well, and remained in seclusion until November 6, when he felt somewhat better and entertained his nephew, Charles Plumb, to whom he explained his unannounced visit as due to the fact that financial conditions in Cuba made it possible for him to come north to renew acquaintance with his friends. When he retired to his room, his illness asserted itself to such an extent that he died before medical aid could reach him. He was born seventy years ago, in Huntingdon, Hants county, England, the birthplace of Oliver Cromwell. The deceased was a member of the S. A. F., F. & A. M., Knights Templar, Shriners, Odd Fellows and Elks. He leaves a widow and one daughter, Mildred, both residents of Boston. The body was taken to Boston Monday, November 8, where interment was made. J. H. P.

George Williams.

George Williams, a veteran florist of Indianapolis, Ind., died Saturday evening, November 6. Several years ago he organized the firm of George Williams & Son, but recently he relinquished active participation in the business. His son, Earle, now manages the business.

August F. Hoffmeister.

August F. Hoffmeister died at the home of his sister, Mrs. William Sanders, at Westwood, Cincinnati, O., Wednesday, November 3, after a lingering illness. He was 55 years of age.

Mr. Hoffmeister and his two sisters organized the Hoffmeister Floral Co. twenty-five years ago. Later they specialized in the growing of Easter lilies and were one of the largest concerns of that nature west of New York. Mr. Hoffmeister was known as the "Ohio lily king." ## TORONTO, ONT.

The big event of the week was the flower show conducted by Toronto retail florists. This annual mum show is held in the individual flower shops. There were some beautiful window displays. The usual immense exhibition mums were missing, but there were thousands of other kinds, including beautiful Turners, for which there was a good sale. The show had the effect of making all florists make use of their windows and make special decorations. Some of these windows were arranged with baskets of mums and others contained banks of mums, these banks extending into the stores in some cases.

The demand for wedding decorations has fallen off considerably during the last week, but there are many requests for decorations for teas, which appear to be the order of the day. These decorations consist chiefly of palms, ferns and mums.

The cut flower trade is good and the demand for design work continues.

A. W. Doughty has reentered the florists' trade after an absence of a year. His new store is on Danforth avenue.

J. P. McCarthy, of the M. Rice Co., Philadelphia, was in town last week.

George Manton, for many years a grower in Toronto, died November 5.

Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Neal have moved to the city for the winter, after spending the summer at their farm.

The Market.

Last week's election excitement had no sooner subsided than the market experienced a nice little boom. The reason seemed to be that nearly all the retailers who draw stock from Chicago's wholesale district had carried as little as possible over the days of the landslide and its aftermath; as soon as the distraction passed the stores all stocked up again and made of the end of the week a veritable little holiday. As the supply of flowers was not large, prices were improved and practically everything was cleaned up Saturday night.

Business not only is good, but it is running up sales totals ahead of the record for the same time last year. In October this result was attained on quantity sold at low prices, but now it is the result of small supply sold at better prices than prevailed last year. In no line is the supply large. During the chrysanthemum season none of the growers cares to bring in a heavy crop of anything else and this year there are not many mums. Last year's oversupply and low prices had the usual result; for this market not nearly so many mums or pompons were planted as in 1919. Consequently,

William Plumb.

William Plumb, president of the New York Florists' Club for two terms, 1898 and 1899, died at the Hotel Breslin, New York, on the evening of November 6, of heart failure superinduced by an attack of pleurisy. During the last few years he had been engaged in landscape work in Cuba, making his headquarters at Havana.

In the early days of the New York Florists' Club's history he was one of its staunch supporters, and figured in the flower shows of those times as a capable manager, particularly in the shows held at Madison Square Garden, then and now one of New York's greatest exhibition halls. He was well qualified as a gardener and horticulturist for his undertakings, which included the development of both private estates and commercial establishments. When preparations were in progress for the big Panama-Pacific exposition, at San Francisco, he was appointed superintendent of the department of horticulture.

Mr. Plumb was possessed of a most charming personality, which endeared him to a host of friends. He arrived in New York from Havana Tuesday, November 2. He had not been feeling well, and remained in seclusion until November 6, when he felt somewhat better and entertained his nephew, Charles Plumb, to whom he explained his unannounced visit as due to the fact that financial conditions in Cuba made it possible for him to come north to renew acquaintance with his friends. When he retired to his room, his illness asserted itself to such an extent that he died before medical aid could reach him. He was born seventy years ago, in Huntingdon, Hants county, England, the birthplace of Oliver Cromwell. The deceased was a member of the S. A. F., F. & A. M., Knights Templar, Shriners, Odd Fellows and Elks. He leaves a widow and one daughter, Mildred, both residents of Boston. The body was taken to Boston Monday, November 8, where interment was made.

George Williams.

George Williams, a veteran florist of Indianapolis, Ind., died Saturday evening, November 6. Several years ago he organized the firm of George Williams & Son, but recently he relinquished active participation in the business. His son, Earle, now manages the business.

August F. Hoffmeister.

August F. Hoffmeister died at the home of his sister, Mrs. William Sanders, at Westwood, Cincinnati, O., Wednesday, November 3, after a lingering illness. He was 55 years of age.

Mr. Hoffmeister and his two sisters organized the Hoffmeister Floral Co. twenty-five years ago. Later they specialized in the growing of Easter lilies and were one of the largest concerns of that nature west of New York. Mr. Hoffmeister was known as the "Ohio lily king." much better prices are being realized. The demand is strongest for the finest, big blooms, but the medium and small flowers are selling at fine prices. Bonaffon is the most abundant variety and flowers which were well sold last year at 10 to 12 cents are bringing 15 to 20 cents; it takes 25 to 30 cents to get really good stock. White is in almost as strong request, but the supply of pink is lacking. Pompons also are selling better than in recent years. It may be noted in passing that the smaller quantity and better prices are conducive to more careful handling. There will not be many mums for Thanksgiving.

There is nothing new to be said of roses or the demand for them. The supply is not large and the call cleans them up pretty steadily at prices which it seems should be profitable. As usual, each day sees an increase in the average length of the stems; there are few shorts after the first crop is cut from the young plants. At the same time the majority of growers are of the opinion that it pays better in the long run to produce medium stems rather than special long. Consequently, medium quality, supply and salability. There are those who say prices recently have averaged as good as last year at the same date, while the supply has been much larger. Sweet peas also are more plentiful and of better quality; they sell well, much better than violets. Paper Whites have arrived, the first selling for as much as 10 cents! Mignonette, too, has returned for the season. Callas sell rather slowly, as do lilies, but the supply of neither is large. Valley equals the demand. More good calendulas could be sold. Small quantities of gardenias and swainsona move well. There are enough cattleyas at the price.

Greens are selling steadily, but not rapidly; there seems at the moment no special demand for anything in this line, of which there is an adequate supply except of bronze galax.

Hastening the Crops.

All cut flower crops under glass were earlier than usual this season. It was peculiarly noticeable in chrysanthemums. The midseason varieties came in on the heels of the earlies and the late sorts now are in crop at least a week, and probably ten days, earlier than usual. The reason for it can be seen in the weather man's record for October. The mean temperature was 62 degrees, or almost 9 degrees higher than normal. Of the possible duration of sunshine there was sixty-nine per cent, or nine per cent more than normal for the month. On the other hand, rainfall was only one-fourth the amount which fell last October. There were nineteen clear days, where a normal October gives only eleven. The first killing frost this year was October 21, twelve days later than the average date.

been more active than many other lines, including numbers of those classed as essential. Everybody knows of the practical paralysis of industry in Russia and George J. Ball, the Glen Ellyn sweet pea grower, has found another evidence of the nearly necessary character of flowers in the following extract from a newspaper article on business conditions in St. Petersburg:

"There are perhaps half a dozen shops still open in St. Petersburg. There is a government crockery shop and there are a few flower shops. It is a wonderful fact, I think, that in this city in which most of the shrinking population is already nearly starving and hardly anyone possesses a second suit of clothes or more than a single change of linen, flowers can be and still are bought and sold. For 5,000 rubles, which is about 6s 8d ($1.50) at the current rate of exchange, one can get a very pleasing bunch of big chrysanthemums."

Various Notes.

The fuel situation continues to ease up. There will be coal enough and, while it will not be cheap, it will not bankrupt growers to get it.

It is the intention of the A. L. Randall Co. to develop its department of plants, bulbs and growers' supplies. William Reid, whose recent marriage with Miss Edna Frauenfelder made it his wish to discontinue traveling, has been placed in charge.

Fred Stielow, the Niles Center grower, has been on a hunting trip in Michigan.

The A. L. Randall Co., November 8, had another of the frequent evening conferences of the sales and factory forces. The feature of the doings was a story of the development of the business, by Sales Manager Galavan. The organization has been growing so fast that many of its active members were not acquainted with its beginnings.

The officers of the Florists' Club plan to enhance its new reputation as a social organization with a dance November 12. Business houses have been asked to subscribe for tickets and give them to their employees, thus assuring solvency and a large attendance.

In addition to the party November 12 the committee has arranged progressive cards, any game the ladies like to play, for the entertainment of those who do not dance.

N. J. Wietor has discovered a new pompon which he thinks will take a place in the trade ahead of any other white variety. It was raised by H. W. Rieman's Sons, Indianapolis, and when exhibited for the first time, November 22, 1919, scored ninety-seven points, a higher score than was given any other pompon shown to the C. S. A. committees last year. Wietor Bros. bought the entire stock, together with the right to rename, the original name of Pearl not being satisfactory. They have this season three benches of the variety, worked up from the original stock of 200 plants. Next season they will plant four houses with it and in the course of time they will offer young stock to the trade.

Forty retailers have special window decorations this week in competition for the prizes offered by the Allied Florists' Association.

At Morton Grove Poehlmann Bros. Co. has five 250-foot benches of Yellow Chadwick which are the pink of perfection. The first flowers were cut November 8.

Bassett & Washburn are putting the firemen at Gregg's Station on an 8-hour day. Heretofore they have operated only two shifts of twelve hours each.

H. N. Bruns reports the first shipment of 1920 valley pips as on the rail from New York.

The conservatory at Schiller's north side store will be formally opened November 12 and 13. The big glass structure, which was built by the American Greenhouse Mfg. Co., is being filled with a great quantity of plants from Chicago's best growers.

While William Stielow, grower, had his eyes focused on Jack Dempsey at Benton Harbor on Labor day, someone stole his Hudson Supersix, parked at the ringside. Just as Mr. Stielow was about to collect the insurance the other day the car was discovered to have been abandoned in South Bend nearly two months ago and was returned to him rather the worse for its brief stay in other hands.

W. C. Florentine, well known in the trade because of his greenhouses at Downers Grove and because of his more recent connection with Randall's, has opened an office in room 1114 Lytton building, corner State street and Jackson boulevard, as sales manager for R. H. Hoover Laboratories, Freeport, Ill. They are putting on the market a new packet fertilizer called Plantlife, for sale in flower and seed stores.

John A. Michal, whose store and big show house at 7045 Stony Island avenue are landmarks in the Jackson Highlands section, is an optimist. He believes his section of the city will fill up rapidly as soon as building recommences, with good private residences or apartment houses, making all kinds of work for the florist.

The A. B. C. has had its window full of poppies this week, Japanese poppies, the indestructible kind.

William Spandikow, at the enlarged Frank Schramm establishment at Crystal Lake, is again demonstrating his unusual facility in handling the Mrs. Russell rose. The Chicago Flower Growers' Association reports that city buyers have been taking his longest stems at 50 to 60 cents per flower.

Mike Fink is going right along. He operates the greenhouses on Herndon street, the property of his mother since his father's death, and has just bought three lots across the way, one of them having on it a neat cottage in which Mr. Fink will live. He has made it by steady work.

August Jurgens has spent the entire summer on his place at Ridgeland, Miss. He has sent to his greenhouses here all the narcissus bulbs needed for this season's forcing.

Andrew Benson, who recently left the Lombard Floral Co., where he was manager for the owner, Charles Abrams, went to New York last week for a short vacation. On his return he probably will close a pending deal which will bring him back into the rose growing business.

Visitors.

Alexander Montgomery, of Waban Rose Conservatories, Natick, Mass., has been here for several days, his first visit in a number of years. Mr. Montgomery raised and introduced the Russell rose, a variety which found its first popularity in the Chicago district, and during his stay he inspected a number of the local ranges in which it is grown. November 6 he visited the establishment of Wendland & Keimel Co., Elmhurst, which is unique in that it never has housed a plant of Russell.

Among last week's visitors in the market were the two daughters of John Rindfleisch, the veteran Beloit, Wis., florist. One of these ladies is about to wed and her name then will be Mrs. Charles Russell, just like the rose.

Walter Amling, of Pana, was here last week, accompanied by his foreman, Albert Berlin. The latter is to be married at Forest Park, November 13, to Miss Anna Ahrens.

BOSTON.

The Market.

A welcome improvement has taken place in business. There has been no great advance in prices, but clearances are decidedly better and the outlook is much more encouraging. While the weather is a little cooler, it remains wonderful for November and there has been little frost yet. Chrysanthemums are abundant, but meet with a better sale, although prices are not what they should be. There are large numbers of Bonnaillon coming in and this old variety is as popular as ever. Rager is the leader among whites. Crimson sold particularly well November 6, for the Harvard-Princeton football game. Singles and pompons are selling well; a number of growers now devote more space to them than to the single-stemmed varieties and find them more profitable. Some handsome blooms of William Turner, Yellow Turner and other fancy varieties are seen.

Carnations are doing rather better and the somewhat cooler weather is improving their quality. Ward, Matchless and Pink Delight continue to be the favorites here, with Laddie supreme among the fancies. Roses have had a hard time of late and quotations on them are difficult, the motto being "Sell as best you can."

Sweet peas are abundant; in fact, I never saw so many good peas here at this time of the year. Sales are good. Calendulas are fine, but overabundant. Pansies are of splendid quality and sell better than violets. Paper White narcissi sell steadily. Small lots of asters and gladioli are still seen, but the present week will see the end of them and dahlias, cosmos and other outdoor flowers.

A few nice gardenias are seen, while Bouvardia Humboldtii still arrives in small lots. A fair supply of cattleyas continues to come in and more of the insigne type of cypripedium, some of the yellow type being also offered. Nerines in small lots are also coming in and these beautiful bulbous flowers sell well.

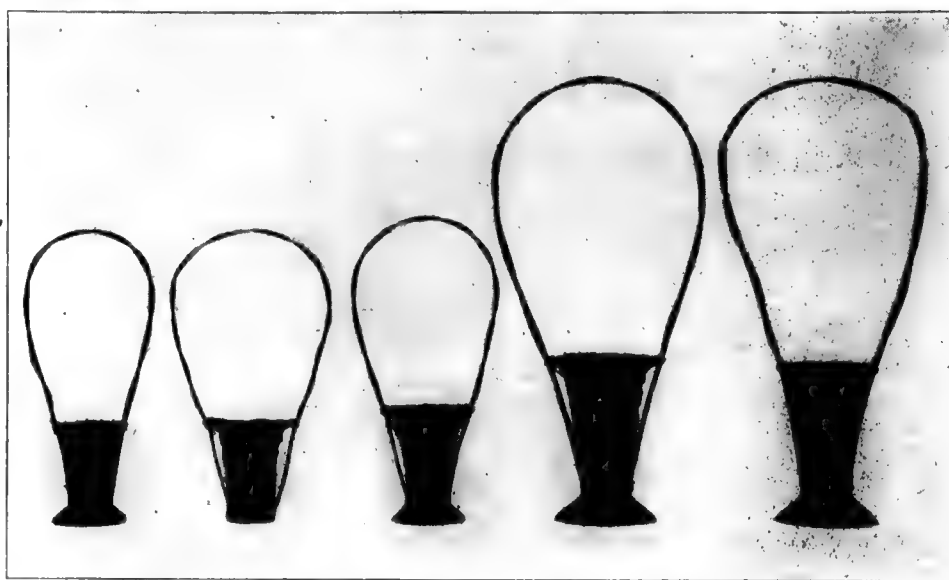

There is a little better demand for adiantum and asparagus.

Fall Horticultural Show.

While a mere ghost of many of the autumn exhibitions held in Boston two decades ago, when big blooms were all the rage and competition in both plants and cut flowers was keen, there were nevertheless some fine exhibits at the show held November 6 and 7. Spring exhibitions have potent attractions here, while fall shows are just the reverse. It was not always thus and some day we may be able to present a creditable fall show in Boston.

There was little competition in the chrysanthemum cut bloom class and practically none for pot plants, but some fine material was shown just the same.

Walter H. Golby, superintendent for Edward A. Clark, won first prize for specimen trained white with Garza, first for yellow with Mrs. William Duckham and first for bronze with Hortus Tolusanus. In the cut bloom classes James Nicol, the veteran octogenarian mum fancier from Quincy, won for twelve Japanese incurved with splendid flowers of that grand old variety, Mrs. Jerome Jones, still without a peer when well

FRAT-M'S

Frat-Ms are a great help to florists who make funeral work. They are exact reproductions of the official emblems embossed in gold and the different colors as required by each Fraternal and Labor organization.

The florist is saved time and worry in the nuisance of lettering, as well as the keeping of such a stock of wire frames, and different colored flowers. Just use such flowers as you have and then attach a FRAT-M with paste to the chiffon, or by the hanger that comes for each, as a card, and that is all there is to it, excepting the comment and commendatory talk for the florist.

Just pick out a dozen of the most used from the list following, enclosing $2.00 per dozen, and if they don't make you ten times their cost, return those unused and get your money.

Square and Compass, Chapter, Commandery, 32nd Degree, Shrine, Eastern Star, Royal Neighbors, M. W. A., Maccabees, Odd Fellows, Red Men, Knights of Columbus, K. of P., Moose, Jr. O. U. A. M., B. of R. T., B. of R. Clerks, B. of L. E., Br. of Blacksmiths and Helpers, Eagles.

Just give Frat-Ms a trial, you don't have to keep them. We are willing to send them to you and return the money if they don't pay you ten times their cost. Address grown. Mr. Nicol also captured first for ten yellow with Yellow Turner and was again in the lead for ten white with magnificent Turner. W. H. Golby took second in these latter classes and first for pink with Wells' Late Pink. Allen

J. Jenkins was second with Wells' Late Pink. Mr. Jenkins also won for twelve reflexed. W. H. Colby had the best reds in Mrs. Firestone. A. R. Jenkins won for twenty-five vases of singles. W. N. Craigh was second. The latter also won for twelve sprays anemone-flowered. Eric H. Wetterlow had—not for competition—some grand vases of specimen blooms. A. R. Jenkins had the best arrangement of chrysanthemums, showing how they could be utilized in the home. S. J. Goddard had some fine vases of Richmond and Charles Rager. Mr. Goddard showed a handsome vase of Carnation Laddie, which received first for pink. C. S. Strout showed Maine Sunshine in grand condition and received a silver medal.

There was a wonderful display of winter-flowering begonias of the English type and they surpassed chrysanthemums in popular favor. A magnificent display covering several hundred square feet of space came from James Marlborough, superintendent for Thomas E. Proctor. Over forty varieties were shown and many of these were specimens three to four feet across. The following were especially fine: Fascination, Sunrise, Altrineham Pink, Empress, Splendor, Ideala, Optima, Eclipse, Vulcan, Rose Queen, Dazzler, Emily Clibran, one of the best; Rosalind, Pink Perfection, Apricot, Mrs. Heal and Flambeau. This group was charmingly arranged and well merited the gold medal awarded.

For six specimen begonias Mr. Marlborough showed immense plants heavily flowered of Clibran Pink, Emily Clibran, Eclipse and Sunrise. Peter Arnott, gardener for E. S. Webster, was a close second, showing fine plants of Optima, Mrs. Heal, Emily Clibran and Exquisite. Eric H. Wetterlow won first for six begonias of the pink American commercial type with large well flowered specimens of Cincinnati.

Douglas Eccleston, gardener for Albert C. Burrage, staged a large group of choice cypripediums in forty varieties. Being terrestrial orchids, they were appropriately plunged and the group, which was of semicircular formation, went to a considerable height and was capped with large cibotiums. Below were numerous well flowered specimens of Cymbidium Pawelsii and masses of such oncidiums as Forbesii crispum and Kramerianum, and below them were cypripedium plants, 200 in number. Tufa stone was effectually used among them, also lycopodium and other trailing plants. There were numerous plants of C. insigne Sanderæ, Harefield Hall, Dreadnaught, Maudia, magnificum, Leeannum, virginale and other choice varieties. A few other good varieties were Lord Wolmer, Lord Wolseley, Frau Ida Brandt, triumphans and Actæus. A gold medal

There were fine displays of fruits and vegetables. For twelve varieties of fruits and vegetables arranged for effect D. R. McLean was first; Hillcrest Gardens, second, and E. L. Lewis third. For six varieties prizes went to J. A. Nixon, J. T. Madden and Arthur Urquhart.

Boston Florists' Association.

This association held its regular monthly meeting at the City Club November 3. Henry Penn, president, was in the chair. The attendance was small. The committee appointed to draw a suitable circular to mail to all retail florists urging their cooperation in the publicity campaign reported that the sickness of one of the members of the committee had caused a delay, but that the circulars would be out in a day or two.

Major P. F. O'Keefe was the speaker of the evening and gave one of his interesting and eloquent talks on publicity. He spoke of the grand meeting of the F. T. D. at Indianapolis and how keen everyone was for publicity, what a cordial welcome was tendered all strangers not only there, but all over the west. Chicago was praised for the wonderful work it was doing. Boston seemed to be cold-blooded and in a semi-comatose state. Petty factional differences, such as existed here, were unknown to the hustling west, and it was time Boston florists shook off their staid conservatism and fell into line. There was too much aloofness and coldness to visiting strangers here, and this must end if the Hub is to take its rightful place in the campaign now under way, which meant more and better business for everyone. After some discussion, a hearty vote of thanks was tendered the

Various Notes.

The annual meeting of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society will take place at Horticultural hall at noon November 13. The election of a president, vice-president, four trustees and a nominating committee will take place and all members are urged to attend.

William Nicholson, of Framingham, is home from an extended western trip. He spent three weeks in and around Richmond, Ind., and visited all leading growers. On his way home he visited a number of growers in and around New York. He considered the Duckham-Pierson range, at Madison, N. J., the finest he had seen and all stock in grand shape; the Joseph Hill Co. range, at Richmond, Ind., however, gave it a close run for first place and was quite an eye-opener.

William J. Thurston, manager of the Flower Exchange, November 4 received notice from the Hupmobile Co., one of whose cars he owns, that he had been adjudged winner of a $50 prize offered

PHILADELPHIA.

The Market.

Election week in a presidential year promised little floral activity, yet the close of election leaves the market bare, an almost unbelievable state of affairs. The retailers say it is dull, but the ice-boxes of the wholesalers were almost empty at the close of business Saturday, November 6. It is the height of the chrysanthemum season. The shows are right here. Usually there is a big surplus at this time. Today there is no surplus. The reason why is clear. Experience has taught the growers that midseason chrysanthemums are unprofitable; late varieties pay better. The planting was planned with this fact in mind. The growers of other flowers have learned that the early part of November is a good time not to produce; a good time to let the queen of autumn rule undisputed. Weather conditions have brought this out more strongly, so supply and demand are evenly balanced. A good deal is said about chrysanthemums not bringing the price they should. The facts do not appear to warrant this view. A few fancy chrysanthemums, show lots from private places, have brought $9 and occasionally $12 per dozen wholesale. Bonnaffon, the splendid commercial yellow, has sold at $25, $30 and now and then $40 per hundred, while good ordinary mums bring $10 to $12 per hundred. Even with the high price of labor, these figures seem fair value, provided there is little depreciation or waste, especially when it is considered that little or no coal is required to grow them since planting them out of pots.

Pompons have done well so far, with two exceptions. They are the outdoor and the white. Outdoor-grown pompons are seldom good enough to meet the market standard of excellence, while white pompons are not popular and pull down the average price.

Carnations are improving fast. With their improvement comes a better market for them. The rich colors like Mrs. C. W. Ward sell fast at top prices, while white sells last at bottom prices. The retailers say that baskets and sprays are more popular than designs, and so white carnations, especially the short-stemmed white carnations, are not needed, the designs being their principal field, of usefulness.

Roses have been amazingly scarce. One of the leading wholesale houses was obliged to cut its rose orders for four consecutive days. This is probably due to heavy disbudding. Sweet peas are really excellent. Single violets are improving. Colored bouvardia has come, so have mignonette and Paper White narcissi and Narcissus Soleil d'Or. The Easter lily crop is at its lightest. There are a few callas. Just now spray orchids are almost as plentiful as cattleyas, which is not saying much. Yellow daisies are still short-stemmed. There seems no immediate hope of the return of the pansy.

plants. The proportion of green was sufficient to enhance the beauty of the blooms. The central position was filled by a large group arranged by William Kleinheinz, of Lynnwood Hall, Ogontz, Pa. This group was formed of a variety of choice foliage plants, pots of lilies of the valley and Lilium magnificum, topped by Oncidium varicosum surmounted by a specimen Cibotium Schiedeii.

There were some excellent specimen chrysanthemums, but the autumn queen's real strength lay in the 6-inch pot grown to a single flower and in the cut blooms. They were tastefully arranged, some with broad oak foliage, some with pin oak foliage and one exhibit with velvet between flowers and vases. The varieties in this exhibit were William Turner, Yellow Turner, Nerissa, Meudon, Firestone, Nagirroc, William Bigby, Glenview, Mrs. C. W. Johnson, Nakota, Wm. H. Waite and Louisa Pockett. The cut pompons were excellent.

Henry A. Dreer, Inc., put up a fine group of crotons and the seed exhibit was tastefully arranged. Macaw Bros. displayed a choice group of their ferns and Pandanus Veitchii. Henry F. Mitchell Co. exhibited fine bulbs. Hosea

Yesterday.

All the greenhouses around Philadelphia were devoted to miscellaneous collections, so to speak, of potted plants and cut flowers. Almost all the florists had some chrysanthemums in the fall, some roses and carnations in winter; some Easter plants followed; last and most important of all, some geraniums and other soft-wooded plants for filling beds and boxes. Nearly everyone felt obliged to take boarders, sick or well, and grumbled about it. Everybody had everything and nobody had anything in winter. Our cut flowers at that season came from Boston and from New York. Then came a change. Wide-awake, far-seeing growers saw possibilities for the future. Edwin Lonsdale and John Burton formed a partnership. They built a greenhouse at Wyndmoor, where the soil was good and the air was pure, expressly to grow specialties for the wholesale cut flower market in Philadelphia. They ignored tradition. They put all their glass into carefully selected varieties of winter-flowering plants and allowed those who came for a geranium or a lemon verbena to go away empty-handed, without even a sigh. They had flowers in winter when nobody else had them. They had them in quantity and they prospered. American Beauty roses were their great specialty.

Today.

Alfred Burton and George Burton have three immense ranges of glass where their uncle and their father first built their greenhouses at Wyndmoor. Alfred Burton operates one range. George Burton operates two ranges, his father's, the original Lonsdale and Burton range, and his own, built since. On all three ranges the American Beauty still flourishes, with only this difference: They not only supply Philadelphia with Beauties, but their Philadelphia Beauties supply a vast expanse of territory besides. So this wholesale production prospered.

Besides Beauties, Alfred Burton grows Mrs. Charles Russell in great numbers. His Russell stands at the very top of the list, a rose that can be depended upon to go anywhere with George Burton has Columbia, Premier and Ophelia, in addition to Beauty and Russell. His stock is uniformly good; not a house needs apology.

Perhaps the keynote to this Burton success is thoroughness. What father and sons have done has always been well done.

with prices somewhere around $10 a case lower than last year's high-water mark. It seems probable that there will be plenty of lilies for cutting next summer after all that are needed for the early Easter have been forced.

Paper White narcissi have become more plentiful than seemed possible at first. This is likely to be reflected in late bulb sales and in the cut flower market.

There have been great quantities of Dutch bulbs marketed—hyacinths, tulips, daffodils, etc. Despite left-overs and auction sales, the season has been satisfactory to the dealers. Good quality and prompt delivery had their effect.

Hosea Waterer considers the bulb season satisfactory.

The S. S. Pennock Co. is replacing its ammonia system with brine. The idea is to insure the safety of the flowers. The brine is chilled by ammonia below stairs and then pumped through the pipes in the cooling room. Phil.

BOSTON NOTES.

for the best letter giving new ideas as to why he preferred the Hupmobile to other cars. There were 212 letters submitted in the competition.

Charles T. Beasley & Co., of East Milton, are probably the largest growers of pansies under glass in the country. Thanks to the mild autumn, plants are blooming with wonderful profusion and not only are large quantities of flowers coming into the Boston market, but New York receives a good share. All pansies are bunched in separate colors and under glass they carry remarkably long stems. Those producing specially long stems are used for seed purposes.

Don't forget the meeting of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club November 16. There will be talks by George C. Moyse and Andrew Christensen, nomination of officers, displays of late chrysanthemums and much important business.

The National Grange P. of H. is holding its annual sessions in Boston this week. W. N. Craig is chairman of the decorating committee and the stage of the Merchants' building represents not only a forest scene, but has fine floral effects.

The first real frost of the season occurred here November 7. As a general rule, a killing frost comes on or about September 20. The weather man has certainly helped to combat the coal man in good shape and florists are glad to have him on their side. W. N. C.

TATE'S TIPS

WHY ARE PRICES SO HIGH?

Weather Imaginary Cause.

Last winter, during the season when flowers were so high and hard to procure at any price, the writer made a careful investigation to find out, if possible, what was the cause of this unprecedented inflation of prices. The main cause, as given by the growers, was weather conditions. We all recall that we had a protracted spell of cloudy weather about this time, yet when one considers the aggregate number of flowers handled by the wholesale houses it was as great as, if not greater than, that of previous years. This being the fact, is it not reasonable to conclude that the increased demand was the cause of the shortage of stock last winter? I want to drive that point home in the minds of my readers in the simplest English at my command, for, to my thinking, supply is the most important problem the florists of this country have to solve today. The real cause of the high prices last winter was the fact that, at the height of the flower season, there were not enough flowers to meet the demand.

Now, we can all go back a short period to the time when a like condition existed, but there was no trouble to find the cause for that shortage. An epidemic of influenza was raging from one end of the country to the other, with entire pages of our daily papers devoted to death notices, and in many cases it was impossible to get caskets to bury the dead. Under such circumstances as these, there was no difficulty in tracing the reason for the increased demand for flowers. It is true that the influenza epidemic was in the fall, when, through part of it, outdoor stock was procurable, but is it not a fact that last winter cut flowers were scarcer and higher in price (and, mind you, under normal physical conditions, aside from a little cloudy weather) than they were during the influenza epidemic? Now, just as there was a reason for the one, there must be a reason for the other.

In my articles last winter it was my endeavor to show the florists of the country that as the flu was responsible for the first shortage, national advertising was the cause of the second. I was even accused of being an advertising "nut," but just as sure as the flu was responsible in the first place, publicity was in the second. If you will consult the files of The Review you will find that I went so far as to advocate a greater glass area to meet this condition during the present season. What reason have we to suppose that conditions will not be at least as bad during the coming season as they were last? National publicity has been going on, not by any means as it should; neither has it since it started. I firmly believe that Major O'Keefe realizes that he has the best advertising proposition that he ever handled in "Say It with Flowers." Why, it's safe to say that, if we were to give this firm carte blanche with the publicity of this slogan, there would not be half enough flowers after the first killing frost to meet the demand. And on top of this national publicity there are local campaigns springing up all over the country.

Publicity Increases Demand.

As I write this, Baltimore has just closed a "Say It with Flowers" week that cost about $3,500; Chicago is on the eve of one that will no doubt cost more. In Washington there will be the Chrysanthemum Society of America's show. Similar stunts are being held all over the country, all of which are educating the public to "Say It with Flowers." The question the writer wants to bring home to florists is, why is all this money being spent? When you begin to gather the fruits of all this publicity, are you going to have an ample supply of the goods you have been advertising, or, as in last winter, is the supply going to be so short that the price will be prohibitive? Instead of educating the public to "Say It with Flowers," are you, by the price you are obliged to charge for them, going to educate them to the idea that flowers are a luxury that no one but the wealthy can afford? The writer is not a "calamity howler" by any means. This article is being written at this time for the sole purpose, right at the beginning of the season, of aiding the growers in keeping tab on conditions throughout the season to see if larger production (in the face of the publicity flowers are getting) is not absolutely necessary. It is true that there is another alternative, but "breathes there a man with soul so dead" who would take advantage of it, and that is to cut out publicity and let the industry stand where it is today. Why, such a procedure would be like selling your birthright! There is just one course for the florist to pursue. I think it was Grover Cleveland who said, "It's a condition we are facing, not a theory." Meet this condition like the men that you are. There is no doubt in the minds of any of us that publicity creates a demand for flowers. It is too late this season to increase the supply, but watch the demand this winter and meet it as best you can, and prepare for an increased supply next season.

Ample Supply Only Remedy.

The tone of this article may convey the impression that, if there is an abnormal demand this winter, it might be a good thing to slow down on publicity. This is the very time when you want to increase it. Let me cite an instance. During the late war, when the government took over the entire output of Bull Durham smoking tobacco and not a bag of it could be obtained in this country, the publicity bureau of the tobacco company worked overtime keeping it before the public. Had they closed down this department of their business,

A Tearing Thanksgiving

AS TOLD BY JIMMY

The Hybernian Hybrid

Jimmy got confidential the other day about his first pair of pants, which he was allowed to wear for the first time on a Thanksgiving Day.

His mother cautioned him not to go out and play in them, but he "forgot," and in a game of hide-and-seek caught those wonderful pants on a nail and tore them badly. One of the girls, taking pity on Jimmy, sewed up the tear as best she could, with Jimmy in the pants.

It was so good a job that his mother never noticed it until at night when he came to take them off; it developed that pants and underwear were sewed together.

Jimmy said his mother promptly gave him something hotter than Jamaica ginger, administered with a slipper properly placed.

Jimmy said that ended his "trying to get away with things;" that ever since if he is in wrong he makes a clean breast of it. Have a notion that's one of the reasons why so many like to have him wait on them.

Whenever I hear of an F. T. D. member having "substituted" stock and tried to get away with it without saying a word, can't help but wish he had torn his first pair of pants and learned Jimmy's lesson early in life.

it would have been a case of beginning all over, and years of hard work would have been lost. As it was, as soon as they had been released by the government they were ready to go on the market, practically where they had left off.

Take the present condition of the flower markets all over the country, with weather conditions as they are. In many of them outdoor stock is still to contend with and advance and midseason crops of chrysanthemums are forced upon the market; still there is no great glut reported anywhere. There can be only one reason for this. That is increased demand. Now, there is not one of us who does not realize that this increased supply can last but a short time and the supply will be back to normal. Then, how about the demand that has been taking care of an abnormal supply? The problem is a great one; it is up to the florists to study it and solve it. Tate.

The Market.

Conditions at the various wholesale markets were splendid all last week, with all seasonable flowers in abundance, and the retailer had no trouble in having his orders filled. The chrysanthemum, of course, was the principal flower in demand. Some regular prize-winners were noticed among them, including blooms of Charles Rager, Marigold, Kelley, Appleton, Chieftain and Bonaffon, as well as an excellent assortment of pompons, which have had a heavy demand. Eaton and Chadwick, both yellow and white, are looked for this week. The top price last week was $3 per dozen. The great demand for mums had a depressing effect on other stock.

Roses are in large supply and excellent stock is coming to this market daily. Russell and Premier are in high color and all fancy grades sell well. Ophelia and Milady and White Killarney were more plentiful than at any time since the season opened. Carnations are coming in, the supply being greater than the demand. Exhibition varieties, such as Nebraska and Matchless, sell at $4 per hundred. Other stock coming in daily is valley, Easter lilies, sweet peas, calendulas and snapdragons. Paper Whites have made their first appearance and the demand cleaned them out daily.

There has been a heavy demand all the week for plumosus, adiantum, smilax, galax and flat ferns.

Various Notes.

The St. Louis County Growers' Association held its regular monthly meeting at Kirkwood at the greenhouses of W. A. Rowe. The meeting was called to order by President Martin Ude. The attendance was large and a great deal of important business was disposed of. As this association holds charter No. 2 in the National Flower Growers' Association, a reorganization so as to conform with the national body in constitution and by-laws was discussed and it was decided to call a special meeting of growers in and around St. Louis. A committee was appointed to arrange for the meeting at one of the downtown hotels the latter part of the month. J. F. Ammann, the national secretary, will be the principal speaker. It was also decided that, until a suitable meeting place could be secured, the association would meet monthly at the establishment of W. A. Rowe, at Kirkwood. The next regular meeting will be December 1.

St. Louis Association of Gardeners was held at the municipal greenhouses November 3. President L. P. Jensen presided and the notices sent out by Secretary Schaff brought a large attendance. The meeting was called to order at 8 p. m. The feature of the meeting was an illustrated lecture by Dr. B. M. Duggar, of the Missouri Botanical Garden, on "Native Edible and Poisonous Mushrooms." This was an interesting subject, as it gave the members an opportunity to learn something about mushrooms. The committees in charge of the national convention, having wound up their affairs, were discharged with thanks. The winter meetings will be held, for the present, at the municipal greenhouses. The next meeting of the association will be held December 1.

have kept the association alive look for a large increase of membership from this social gathering. The ladies are especially invited. The officers of the association will have charge of the arrangements.

The Missouri Botanical Garden opened its chrysanthemum show Sunday, November 7, and a large attendance was recorded. A fine collection of mums was on exhibition. The St. Louis Florists' Club, after its meeting Thursday afternoon, November 11, visited the show in a body. The show is in charge of George Pring and L. P. Jensen, and they deserve a great deal of credit.

Dr. Herman Von Schrenk, president of the St. Louis Garden Club, lectured before the St. Louis Academy of Science recently on the subject of the forest resources of the United States. He also spoke before the Garden Club on Pacific coast trees.

The large store room of the Mullanphy Florists is being divided into three stores, their lease having expired. They will occupy one of the small divisions of their former store until their new location is vacated for them. The location of this is not yet made public; it is understood, however, that it will be in the downtown district.

Charles Beyer has purchased one of the big "Say It with Flowers" signs, which will be erected on his Grand avenue front. The Bourdet Floral Co. will also place one on its Tower Grove avenue front.

entered business for himself. The new place is at Grand avenue and Juniata street, fronting on the latter. Mr. Burke says his first week's business was quite satisfactory.

Pierre Schneider, of Creve Coeur, Mo., is sending to C. A. Kuehn a fine seedling pompon, rich golden yellow in color. Advance orders clean them up daily.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward Guntley, of Windler's Flowers, celebrated their eighth wedding anniversary November 5 at their home. Mrs. Guntley is a sister of Frank, Joseph, Robert and George Windler.

A. Werner & Bro., of Clayton, Mo., have just finished building a new motor boat, in which "Bill" Smith has a half interest. The boat will be named the "Say It with Flowers," and will soon be put in operation on the Mississippi river.

Mrs. William Taylor has opened a flower shop at 2900 Madison avenue, Granite City, Ill. Mrs. Taylor visited the wholesale market last week, buying supplies.

The Market.

Business last week started slowly, but ended with an increase that brought the average up to normal for the season.
Shipping orders were heavy the last three days and supplies moved unusually well.

Mums are plentiful. The effect of the cool season is shown in the quality of these flowers. Growers are bringing in as fine mums as they have ever had.
It is estimated that there are between 30,000 and 40,000 fewer mums in the market now than a year ago, but the unusual condition that called for so much stock then is lacking and this shortage will not be felt. Prices will probably not reach the figures asked twelve months ago.

Carnations are being held back by some of the growers to give the mum crop every advantage of its brief season. Roses are satisfactory and are being cut in good quantity. Prices for the week are: Mums, $2 to $4; roses, $3 to $10; carnations, $4; pompons, 60 and 75 cents a bunch.

FRESH FLOWERS AND BEST SERVICE

Thursday evening, November 4, in the sales room of Henry Kusik & Co. This meeting was to have been held in the new store of the Chandler Landscape & Floral Co., but the finishing touches of the store remain to be put on and the December meeting will be held there. Three new members were received, bringing the total membership to 154. T. J. Noll, president of the club, announced that the charter had been closed and in the future an initiation fee of $2 will be charged in addition to the dues. The constitution and by-laws drafted by a committee appointed for that purpose were adopted. At the next meeting three trustees will be elected. William Wade, secretary, read a letter from Albert Pochelon, expressing appreciation of the hospitality shown upon the occasion of his visit, with Philip Breitmeyer, at the time of the October club meeting.

Various Notes.

MID-WEST EXPOSITION.

Big Show Planned.

Growers of horticultural products from sixteen states are expected to participate in the third annual Mid-west Horticultural Exposition, which will be held at Council Bluffs, Ia., beginning November 15 and continuing for five days. The exposition is under the auspices of the Iowa State Horticultural Society, with the Chamber of Commerce of Council Bluffs coöperating. Its scope is as broad as the field of horticulture.

If the plans already made are completely carried out, the managers are confident that this will be one of the most impressive events of the year in the horticultural world. Expense is not being spared. The Conway band, of New York city, has been engaged at big expense to play at all the sessions. Awards to winning exhibitors will be larger than usual and it is expected that a total of $75,000 will be spent to make this a significant chapter in the horticultural history of the year.

Florists' Section.

Of special interest to florists is the flowers and plants section, of which Blaine C. Wilcox, of Council Bluffs, is superintendent. The state chairmen of committees for the horticultural exhibits are as follows:

J. R. Cooper, Fayetteville, Ark.; E. P. Sandsten, Fort Collins, Colo.; A. M. Augustine, Normal, Ill.; Laurenz Greene, La Fayette, Ind.; T. J. Maney, Ames, Ia.; George A. Blair, Mulvane, Kan.; C. P. Halligan, East Lansing, Mich.; R. S. Mackintosh, St. Paul, Minn.; F. W. Faurot, Mountain Grove, Mo.; G. S. Christy, Johnson, Neb.; C. A. Chinberg, Hankinson, N. D.; F. H. Beach, Columbus, O.; J. A. Farquharson, Guthrie, Okla.; F. E. McCall, Brookings, S. D.; Frederic Craneheld, Madison, Wis.

In the flower and plant department the cash premiums total $1,500, from

The Market.

There was a much better tone to the market last week than there has been for some time. While outdoor stock had not been killed, it had practically bloomed itself out. This was especially true of dahlias. One cannot remember when the dahlia crop was cut so completely. There is hardly a bud left for the frost to kill. Mums are here in all their glory, but the season will not be so long as usual. Bonnaffons are already on the market and the late varieties will take the place of the midseason ones. Both in the wholesale and retail stores the shortage of good pink is lamented; yellow and white are in good supply and of fine quality. There is a fine supply of medium grades this season, but good pompons are scarce. As usual, the mum is king at this time and other lines of stock are only used when it is necessary. As mums can be used in almost any kind of work, this does not often occur. The prices run the entire gamut. As high as $8 per dozen is asked for some extras. I can give no better idea of the state and temper of the market than to say that stock of that quality is the first and easiest to sell.

The rose crop is being held in check as much as possible until mums are out of the way. The roses that are finding their way into the market certainly indicate that there is going to be a fine crop this season. While there is not a yet. In their case, again, the outlook is splendid, as to quantity, quality and variety. Violets are not in great supply yet, but there are enough for the demand and they sell well. Inside snapdragon has made its appearance, but the stems are short and the quality is of the advance kind. Paper Whites are also to be had in small quantities and the same is true of green goods.

In discussing the market, a leading wholesaler remarked that while prices had been lower this fall than usual, the sales of his firm would total more than during previous seasons. This can mean but one thing, that more stock had been handled and that there is a greater demand for flowers.

the store of Mary Johnston, Thursday evening, October 28, to prepare a report for the next club meeting. They found that the florists would be "set back" about $3,500 for the week's celebration.

The boys are getting up a party to go over to Washington to the exhibition of the Chrysanthemum Society of America and the Washington Club's banquet. They propose to keep on "Saying It with Flowers." A car has been chartered on the electric line. This will be decorated for the occasion and it is expected that about fifty will be in the party. The arrangements are in the hands of William McKissick, of the Leo Niessen Co.

There were several Halloween windows which attracted a great deal of attention. Mary Johnston had one that would answer as well for a harvest home occasion. Robert Johnston had all of the products of the farm most tastefully arranged, from the shock of corn down. Robert L. Graham, Jr., in the uptown store, featured pumpkins, accompanied by an alternating electric service, which gave his window the desired spooky effect. A window of this sort requires a lot of work and patience. The electric globe inside the pumpkin cooks it and it soon becomes soft; sixty were used during the week.

At John Cook's one of the finest combinations I have seen in a long time was a casket cross made for ex-Postmaster-General Garry's funeral. The cross was the full length of the casket and twelve inches wide, made of white roses, Bouvardia Humboldtii and adiantum. It certainly made a fine funeral offering. He has a window of yellow mums, as fine specimen flowers as I have ever seen.

Across the street at William Halliday's, Miss Groves had an equally fine window, the only difference being that she featured white.

At Samuel Feast & Sons, I found Mrs. Hill, as usual, up to her eyes in funeral work. Mrs. Hill, who is a close observer of conditions in the florists' business, says she has never seen a season open under more favorable circumstances.

Philip B. Welsh, as usual with him, is sending in some of the finest Turners seen on the market.

James Hamilton, while he is holding his roses back all he can, has the promise of the finest crop in his history. The judge is trying out Crusader, Pilgrim and Madame Butterfly and is becoming more enthusiastic over these new ones each day.

Jesse King, of Mount Airy, is another who has his rose crop timed for when mums are over. He has a promising outlook for a fine cut in a short time. Mr. King is sending in a fine lot of medium mums.

C. E. Akehurst & Son, who formerly grew nothing but carnations, have devoted part of their range to roses this season. They are trying out Pilgrim, Dunlop and Butterfly. All of the roses at this range look promising, with 30,000 of as fine carnations as one wishes to see. Tate.

ROCHESTER, N. Y.

The Market.

The presidential election, combined with unusually warm weather for this time of the year, made its mark on business conditions. In the first place the election, the most vital issue, interfered with social functions; secondly, there has been such a mass of outdoor flowers arriving, because of the lack of a killing frost, and the warm sunshine and clear days have brought along the indoor stock so rapidly, that growers are beginning to wonder where the chrysanthemums will come from for Thanksgiving. Such are the conditions in and around Rochester. It has been a most unusual season.

Chrysanthemums are being sold at low prices in order to clear. There is a large quantity of pompons, which move fairly well. In roses the supply is large and stock in general is good. Ophelia, Sunburst, Ward, Columbia, Premier, Hadley, Hoosier Beauty, Cecile Brunner and the Killarneys all move fairly well, but at figures lower than should exist at this season. Good pink snapdragon is seen in some of the stores. There is a heavy supply of carnations. They do not move as readily as they should. Paper White narcissi are here, but there is little demand for them. Violets have practically no sale as yet, only a few occasional bunches going for funeral work. There are a few good lilies, but these move quickly. Orchids are not over-plentiful, but the supply meets all demands. Valley is too expensive for the average buyer and is not used except on special occasions. Green goods of all kinds are plentiful and of good quality.

Rochester Mum Show.

For the last few years it has not been considered advisable to hold a chrysanthemum show in this city, but at the monthly meeting of the Rochester Florists' Association, held two weeks ago at the Osborn House, the project was proposed and received with a great deal of enthusiasm. The outcome was a good-sized show, held in the ballroom of the Osborn House Friday, November 5, from noon until 10:30 p. m. The attendance was good and the event was greatly appreciated by all flower lovers. No admission was charged.

Many sorts of flowers were exhibited, but a specialty was made of mums. Excellent specimen blooms of many of the latest varieties were exhibited by private growers. Similar entries were made from the greenhouses in the Rochester parks. Among the local florists and growers who exhibited were George B. Hart, H. E. Wilson, Fred C. Thomann, George T. Boucher, Hugo

Joseph H. Werdein, who several years ago was one of the sales force of H. E. Wilson, has returned to his former position.
Last week was national apple week and practically every store on Main street had elaborate displays, but none better than those shown by the florists, who artistically combined vases and baskets of choice flowers with some of the largest and most luscious apples grown in and around Rochester. J. B.
Keller Sons' display was unique. A large gilt frame enclosed a box eighteen inches deep lined with black cloth in which was a tall handled basket of apples, berries and flowers. Strong electric lights, hidden just inside the frame, made a wonderful effect. Hampers and baskets of fruit were seen in the other florists' window, but at H. E.
Wilson's a large horn of plenty was featured. Most of the flowers used in all displays were yellow, white and bronze chrysanthemums, with a profusion of pompons.
Horace J. Head, representing George
B. Hart, left late last week to attend legitimate florists pay. It is not known just when the tax will be imposed. There is considerable public discussion on both sides, some persons maintaining they should not be compelled to pay the license tax, while others assert that since these peddlers are competitors of the recognized florists for the public trade, "what is sauce for the goose is sauce for the gander."

DENVER, COLO.

The Market.

Business was good during the week ending November 6, the stores reporting a fairly busy week. There has been considerable funeral work and prices are practically unchanged. Chrysanthemums are not so plentiful, the smaller varieties being about gone and the later ones not having yet arrived in quantity. In roses, medium grades are a little scarce. Carnations are coming in more heavily all the time, but continue to move well. Sweet peas are getting better in quality. A few Easter lilies and violets complete the list. Shipping has been excellent.

Various Notes.

From the number of bulbs received this fall it looks as though there might be some difficulty in disposing of them next spring.

John Emsbach left last week for Los Angeles. Mr. Emsbach was a pioneer in the trade in this city, having followed the business for thirty-five years. He was foreman of the Elitch-Long Greenhouses for eighteen years, from whose employ he went into business for himself on West Twenty-ninth avenue. Later he turned the business over to his son, Russell. He has recently been with Fred Maler.

Mr. Haynes, the new representative of the A. L. Randall Co., Chicago, for this section, is making this city his headquarters.

Charles Meyer extends an invitation to those interested in bowling to meet with him every Wednesday. Ten participated in the first meeting.

The New York Floral Co. has had some especially large mums on display lately.

The Elitch Gardens Co. has just connected a new boiler. Paul Howard re-

The Market.

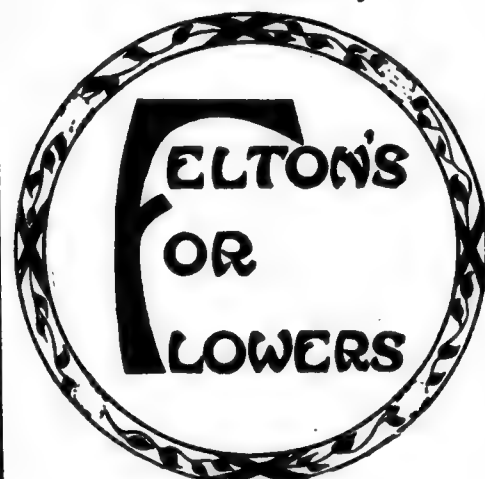

Since cooler weather set in the market has been brisk. Business has been much better the last two weeks. Mums are arriving in nice shape now, in all sizes and varieties. A nice lot of pompons is moving excellently.

There is an exceptionally fine lot of roses coming in. The supply of carnations is not moving as well as it should. This is due to the trade buying pompons in place of carnations during the mum season. There is a limited quantity of violets and sweet peas coming in and they find a ready sale.

Various Notes.

esting and attracted a great deal of attention.

The Florists' Club held its regular meeting Thursday night, November 4, and there was a large attendance. It was flower show night and many of the florists brought a display of high-priced flowers and plants. The entertainment committee has arranged for a theater party in December.

HOW THEY WERE NAMED.

Although the popular name clings to the flower, in most cases the bloom is high born and the name is derived from the Latin, Greek or French.

Pansy derives its name from the French, pensees, meaning thoughts.

Carnation, which superseded the old name gilliflower, is taken from the Latin word caro, meaning flesh.

Primrose, because of its early blooming, is styled the first rose and derives the prefix, prim, from the Latin prima (rosa).

Tansy is from the Greek and signifies immortality. The word is derived from the Greek athanasia, deathlessness.

Geranium can also be traced back to the Greek. It comes from geranium, meaning a crane.

The daisy is good old Anglo-Saxon, derived from daeges eage, and signifies the day's eye.

Dandelion is of French origin. It is derived from dent de lion and means lion's tooth.

Hawthorn is nothing more than hedge thorn. The haw is corrupted from the old English word бага, meaning hedge.

Peach goes back to the Latins, who called it persum. We interpret it as Persian apple.
Rhubarb has an ancient title and is corrupted from Rha barberum. Rha was the old name of the river Volga, on the banks of which the plant grew.

TROUBLE WITH CYCLAMENS.

I have some cyclamens in 4-inch and 5-inch pots. The plants stood the warm weather, but during the last six weeks there has been considerable rain and some cold nights and they are not doing well. Fine, large plants in 5-inch pots wilt and in two days turn rotten at the root.

During the day my house was warm and I sprayed the plants twice a day and dampened the walks. The soil was light. My mixture was five barrows of soil, one of well rotted manure, a 7-inch pot of horn shavings and enough sand to keep the soil from packing.

Some of the foliage has turned yellow and dried up, although the root is solid and in a short time makes new foliage, though not so strong as the first.

H. L. U.—Kan.

You are perhaps keeping your cyclamens too wet at the root. You should discontinue all syringing from now on. Give the plants a light bench and no shade. Scratch the surface soil occasionally and space the plants as required. Keep an abundance of ventilation in the house, even on cold nights. Throw away any of the poorer plants, and those which are well established will benefit. Give a light sprinkling of fine bone, or weak liquid manure. For the flowering pots, a good compost for cyclamens consists of equal parts of well decayed cow manure, leaf-mold and fibrous loam, with some sand added. Too light a soil is not good for the final potting, although excellent in the earlier stages of growth. C. W.

WHITE DAHLIAS FOR CUTTING.

What white dahlia would be good for commercial use as a cut bloom and at the same time grow well in clay soil in New Jersey? E. C. M.—N. J.

For a cactus dahlia grow either the Swan or Captain Scott. Of the older cactus varieties you will find Mrs. Douglas Fleming good for cutting. Of the popular peony-flowered section, King

DAHLIAS FOR WINTER STORAGE.

How should dahlia roots be treated and how and when should divisions be made in winter? E. C. M.—N. J.

Pack the roots on shelves in a shed or cellar which is dry and just excludes frost. A potato cellar is ideal. Another good plan is to wrap each root in a sheet of newspaper and pack away in barrels. Divisions for one's own use need not be made before May, but if you wish to sell them, a start can be made any time during the winter. You

PASADENA, CAL.

An interesting exhibit at the flower show, Pasadena, Cal., October 28 to 30, was that of Siebrecht's House of Flowers. The feature of this exhibit was a display of twelve varieties of roses, which were much admired. At one end was a collection of ferns, including Asplenium Nidus-avis, or bird's-nest fern, in variety, and platycerium, or stag-horn fern; also specimens of Cocos Weddelliana. At the opposite end was a collection of anthurium; strelitzia, or bird of paradise; seedlings of Cattleya Bowringiana, Forbesii and labiata superba; Oncidium varicosum, and Odontoglossum grande, or baby orchid. In front of the exhibit were vases of sweet peas, Sweetheart roses and violets. At the close of the show, the entire exhibit was donated to the Pasadena hospital and the Pasadena home of the aged.

LOS ANGELES, CAL.

The Market.

An abundance of stock, with a good shipping business and an average retail demand, sums up the market conditions as they existed last week. Mums are at their best and seldom have the growers had such a good season. The weather has been in favor of fine stock and the Appleton, Turner, Chieftain and other late midseason stock are at their best. Orchids are a little more plentiful, but the prices continue high. Valley is good and there is enough to go around. Carnations are well up to standard. Roses have fallen off a little in quality, but are still good. Dahlias are holding out well and are of better quality than usual at this time of the year. Good plumosus is coming in now and heavy shipments are being made. Cyclamen is the best seller in potted plants.

Various Notes.

Charles Brazee, the well known florist and bulb grower of Wilmington, Cal., has recently purchased twelve acres of land on the harbor boulevard and intends moving his entire stock there next season, the lease on his present quarters expiring July, 1921. Besides his large stock of bulbs, Mr. Brazee will grow a large supply of statice, delphinium and other hardy stock, and will erect a dwelling house and retail store at the new location. As this is on the main thoroughfare from the city to the harbor, there is a constant stream of traffic during the whole year, and this should prove profitable for his retail trade.

A look through the lath houses devoted to plumosus at Harry Bailey's place, at Montebello, shows that Mr. Bailey has excelled his own record for fine, well developed sprays of this popular green. The stock is remarkably clean and consists of medium-length sprays, just the kind that all growers aim to get, but not always with success.

Because of the large quantity grown, Mr. Bailey is able to let each section develop thoroughly before it is cut. In the houses devoted to seed growing, the seed crop is, perhaps, a little below the average in quantity, but the quality should be fine, judging from present appearances. A later crop will, unless cold weather conditions set in early, be developed by spring. There is also a big crop of Sprengeri seed ripening rapidly. Freesias are just coming through, the earliest being about four inches high, and are so well liked by the trade that Mr. Bailey has already booked large orders for 1921 delivery.

Gebhard Prechtel is especially successful in the propagation of Erica melanthera, and judging by the appearance of his latest batch of 75,000 cuttings, not one per cent has missed. He is also busy cleaning and shipping gladiolus bulbs, a big stock of Schwaben being handled by him. Mr. Prechtel calls attention to the extraordinary freedom of this popular variety.

The establishment of Roy F. Wilcox & Co., at Montebello, shows continued progress. Possibly the biggest thing of all is the kentias, which are here in hundreds of thousands, from seedlings to finely developed specimens. The stock is always kept so that the large sizes will not crowd the smaller plants. As they reach the 2½-inch pot size they are planted out under lath and grown until fit for another potting, as single or made-up specimens. Besides the kentias there are large and thriving blocks of Phoenix Roebelenii, P. Canariensis and other popular palms. While too late for freight shipments to the east this year, Mr. Wilcox has prospects of carload lots going back by express, a method of shipping that is becoming increasingly popular. Another large lath house is to be built at once and another next year, the idea being to have sufficient room so that these large houses may be brought along in rotation year by year. It looks as though Mr. Wilcox will have the whole thirty-five

NEW ZINNIA, DAHLIA-FLOWERED

Novelty of our own recent introduction. It is a sure winner commercially. Flowers the exact type and size of the Giant Show Dahlia; 6-8 inches in diameter; 7 new colors and shades unknown to Zinnias heretofore. Trade pkt., 500 seeds, $1.00.

Improved Centaurea Cyanus, Double—(Fraser's True Blue). The color of this charming centaurea is the best blue yet. This strain is fixed, and is highly desired by the Florist Trade. Trade pkt., 1000 seeds, $1.00.

Eventually every Florist will plant Fraser's "Sun-tested" California Asters, Delphiniums and Zinnias

ASTER AMERICAN BEAUTY—(new colors mixed).—A neighbor wholesale grower, John Bodger, has become famous for his American Beauty Asters. We are handling his seed for the Florist Trade. It is the greatest Aster novelty of the twentieth century, and will stand the test of time. Trade pkt., 1000 seeds, $1.00.

ROBERT G. FRASER & SON, Seed Growers, PASADENA, CALIF.

acres covered with glass and lath. The big rose houses are fine, excellent Russell being in full crop. Interesting, too, was a breadth of Prima Donna, with such marvelous flowers in November that the writer did not recognize this well known variety. The dwarf form of pomegranate is beautifully in flower now and Mr. Wilcox regrets that it cannot be held for Christmas. It surely would make a wonderful Christmas plant. While there has been some trouble with yellows in the heather, there will still be a wonderful crop of melanthra here, many of the plants being seven feet in height, with buds set from top to bottom. Acres of boxwood, Cocos plumosa, eugenia and other nursery stock are coming in fine shape and the whole place shows the effect of good management and well considered improvements.

The E. C. Amling Co. continues to receive daily shipments of fine valley from its greenhouses at Ocean Park Heights.

F. H. Hensley, of Knightstown, Ind., visited the wholesalers last week. Mr. Hensley has sold his Indianapolis store and is now located at Long Beach.

At the office of S. Murata & Co., a new statement machine, electrically driven, has been installed, making for considerable time saving. Business was reported exceptionally good before All Saints' day, but fell off a little early this week.

W. Armacost & Co. report a heavy shipping week.

The California Floral Co. reports big business. This company is noted for its shipping.

George Hall, of George Hall & Co., says business has been a little slow, but is picking up.

Although boycotted by the Japanese growers—for a day—Tom Wright is still in business at the old stand.

Oscar Schneider, of Purdie & Co., says business is keeping up well and that there is enough funeral work to clean up all stock.

H. Graham is now with the Alexandria Florist and T. Shewbrook has joined the force at Wright's Flower Shop.

Robert G. Fraser & Son are handling an extra fine strain of double cosmos, with flowers of a great variety of colors and shades and stems long, stiff and wiry, fine for baskets and other high-class florists' work. Though there are several strains of double cosmos on the market, they are the raisers of this type and hold the entire stock. H. R. R.

The Market.

Chrysanthemums still dominate the market, though some of the large varieties, grown under cloth, are at the end of their season. Turner is practically over and Chieftain is growing scarcer every day. If heavy frosts and storms hold off, however, there will probably be a fair supply of chrysanthemums until the middle of December. For the last ten days the weather has been as sunny and warm as in June, though the nights have brought occasional light frosts. There is an abundance of outdoor mums of all colors and sizes and these are extensively used, both locally and for shipping. The fact that eastern growers now have mums coming in more plentifully has caused some of the shippers to have a certain number of orders canceled, though others report as much activity in mums as ever.

Good roses and carnations are still scarce, partly because the demand for them is so brisk that the market is cleaned up every day. Violets are in excellent condition for shipping and the market is abundantly supplied with them. Orchids and gardenias are somewhat more plentiful. Lilies of the valley are still scarce and in much demand.

Various Notes.

Landscape gardening, until recently a neglected art in the planning of California homes, seems rapidly to be coming into its own. One of the latest landscape gardening announcements is that of Cotton & Co., landscape architects in the Call building, who have completed plans for a little formal garden with tea house, pool and wall fountain on the property of Mrs. M. E. Gaines, in Piedmont, a fashionable suburb of Oakland. The estimated cost is $2,500.

Owing to the mildness of the Califoring in have been grown under cheese-cloth, but most of the crop beginning to reach the market is from greenhouses, the stock having been planted outside and transplanted in the fall. This involves considerable outlay for labor, which is so high now that the growers have been going into roses, which here are nearly all grown on solid beds, instead of on raised benches, as in eastern greenhouses. Once planted, with careful cultivation and proper attention, the roses remain planted for years, which means a great saving in labor compared with the growing of greenhouse carnations."

Flower & Supply Co. These are in sets of six—four leaves, one blossom and one seed pod—and are intended for ornamental and decorative purposes. There is much demand for them from art stores and designers of baskets containing odd and unusual color effects.

Domoto Bros. are cutting their roses and report an exceptionally fine crop, especially of Russell and Ophelia. M. Domoto said: "Of our new roses, Madame Butterfly is much in demand in this market at present. I think it will soon take the place of Ophelia, for it is larger and of a deeper, richer color."

Enomoto & Co. have laid in a large stock of Chinese lily bulbs, in anticipation of an exceptionally busy Christmas season. Of these flowers, which bloom so abundantly in water for some growers and refuse a single bloom to others, Mr. Enomoto says, "The secret of producing flowers is to slit the outer brown covering, as the bulb breaks apart and expands. If the bulb is too tightly compressed by the outer casing in the process of expansion, there will be no flowers."

The Growers' Cut Flower Co. specializes in pansies and its crop is now coming into the market in good shape.

Pelicano, Rossi & Co. have had an unusual amount of funeral work during the last week.

V. L. Podesta, of Podesta & Baldocchi, is to have a great home-coming when he arrives from Italy, about December 15. He leaves about the middle of November and will make the trip without haste.

M. McLaughlin, of Joseph's, is the proud father of a baby girl.

The Misses Hannon store anticipates an unusually busy Thanksgiving. A number of orders for Thanksgiving decorations have come in from clubs.

Flowers for a smart society wedding at the Fairmount hotel and an unusual number of funerals have kept the MacRorie-McLaren Co. busy.

The Art Floral Co. had good business during election week.

Mrs. R. E. Darbee has had an unusual amount of funeral work.

The elaborate decorations at the Kutter-Block wedding were widely discussed last week. Albert Stein designed and executed the decorative scheme, which transformed the Italian ballroom of the St. Francis hotel, where the banquet took place, into a resemblance of an Alma-Tadema picture of Roman days.

H. Hayashi & Co., of Oakland, are specializing in house plants for the holiday season. They grow poinsettias,

The Market.

Last week was generally satisfactory, but entirely lacking in outstanding features. The first white frost of the season, with its promise of the passing of dahlias and other outdoor flowers, was really the most notable happening. There has been a good run of stock shown here, with enough decorative and funeral work to prevent any losses and a good general business.

almost continuous sunshine and the color of the roses has improved. Premier, Russell and Butterfly were also offered, but there has been a drop in the cut of Cecile Brunner. Columbia is in lighter supply, but plentiful enough to fill orders.

Mums have become the leading flowers of the market and local growers have increased their cuts materially. Large quantities of California mums are still being received and from present indications there will be a heavy holiday demand.

The run on local violas is being shortened and orders for California violet shipments were increased during the last week by most houses. The cut of orchids is light, but ample for trade needs, with lilies still scarce. There is a sufficient stock of gardenias. Bouvardias are an attractive filler on corsage orders. The supply of carnations has shown improvement, both as to quality and quantity.

Various Notes.

Sales of bulbs, especially the winter-flowering sort, are being pushed by a number of the retail shops with good results. Those shops offering stock for spring planting have also been able to report a steady sale.

The Burns Floral Co. has been purchased by Sylvester Muecci, who has until recently been employed by Rosaia Bros., Bert Linegar, and for a number of years by Miss Anna Burns. The new owner has assumed charge of the store, while Miss Burns, the seller, will probably spend the winter in California. The firm name will be continued.

LaVerne Jackson spent three days last week in Kitsap county on a hunting trip. He returned with enough ducks to give a duck banquet to all of the store force at a downtown cafe.

S. A. Dunlap, of the Hollywood Gardens, and Mrs. Dunlap, were hosts Saturday evening, October 30, to the force of the city store at a Halloween party, while the following evening R. G. Slicker, northwest representative of the A. L. Randall Co., entertained about fifteen of the florists at a similar affair. The decoration at the Dunlap home was out of the ordinary. The hall lamp was effectively camouflaged as a witch and one of the larger rooms was converted into a spider's web.

The first of the new crop of narcissi was shipped into the market last week by the Thomas Floral Co.

Last week Rosaia Bros. made up several thousand corsages of violets and small fall flowers for the anniversary

Seed Trade News

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.
President, H. G. Hastings, Atlanta, Ga.; secretary-treasurer, C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O.

C. D. COVENTRY, of the W. W. Barnard Co., Chicago, is on a western trip.

BUYERS of Dutch bulbs are holding off on their orders to see if prices are not lower later.

GEORGE REEVE, Chicago, says onion sets are worth $2 a bushel—but at present it is necessary to sell them for less; quite a good deal less.

It is difficult to figure how the packets can be cheaper, so large a part of their cost is "overhead," but they can be fatter next season.

IN an address to bankers recently Secretary of Agriculture Meredith denounced the "free seed gag," as he called it, saying "it never got one vote for anybody."

THERE are indications that the yield of onion sets in the Chicago district must have been even better than supposed—at least, certain growers who had sold their crops under contract at $1.25 per bushel are making unexpectedly heavy deliveries for their acreage.

THE steamer Rotterdam, which arrived at New York from Rotterdam, October 31, brought the season's largest shipment of seeds. On board, consigned chiefly to forwarding houses on the manifest, were 447 bags of garden seed, fifty of cabbage seed, 1,650 of poppy seed and 2,600 of sugar beet seed.

MORE Holland bulbs arrive with each steamer from Rotterdam. November 4 the A. F. Luckenbach arrived at New York with five cases for the A. L. Randall Co., Chicago, and one each for F. Rynveld & Son and Maltus & Ware. There were also on board seventy-four bags of garden seed for F. Rynveld & Son.

OFFICERS of the Wholesale Grass Seed Dealers' Association are: President, Wm. G. Scarlett, Baltimore, Md.; vice-president, J. Charles McCullough, Cincinnati, O.; secretary-treasurer, Clarence K. Jones, 110 South street, Baltimore, Md.; counsel, Curtis Nye Smith, Boston. The next annual meeting is in June, 1921.

DURING the last two months little movement of timothy, redtop, Kentucky bluegrass, orchard grass and meadow fescue seed from the growers' hands has taken place. Prices have declined rather steadily since the harvest of several of these seeds, but seedsmen are reluctant to buy at present prices, which, however, seem low

MISSOURI SEED CO. BANKRUPT.

A voluntary petition in bankruptcy was filed in the Federal court November 3 by the Missouri Seed Co., 1426 St. Louis avenue, Kansas City, Mo. The company set forth that its debts to banks, seed companies and other corporations amount to $138,949 and its assets $62,434.

John Tobin is president of the company, Thomas Tobin, vice-president, and A. C. Turgeon, secretary and treasurer.

BOLGIANO CREDITORS TO MEET.

Willis E. Myers, referee in bankruptcy, Baltimore, Md., has announced that a meeting of the creditors of J. Bolgiano & Son, adjudicated bankrupt October 27, will be held November 19 at 3 p. m. in the United States District court room, in the postoffice building, when the creditors may prove their claims, appoint a trustee, examine the bankrupt and transact any other necessary business. It is further stated that creditors, to participate in the selection of trustee, must file their claims, properly proved, not later than 3 p. m. November 19. The schedule of assets of Charles J. Bolgiano and J. Bolgiano & Son totals $1,347,247.28.

VICKS HAVE GOOD CROPS.

In spite of the driest June and July on record at Rochester, N. Y., James Vick's Sons report a good crop of aster seed. Some of the early varieties suffered severely, but the main crop and late varieties did remarkably well under the circumstances and made a fine showing this fall. Other flower seeds have turned out well, also. Crops of sweet corn are up to the average yield per acre and the firm believes that sugar or pie pumpkin, Mammoth Jumbo pumpkin, Chicago Warty Hubbard squash and Golden Hubbard squash are all 100 per cent crops.

tion of orders taken, caused by circumstances over which we have no control," is not invalid as lacking obligation on the part of the seller to deliver. So holds the Massachusetts Supreme Judicial court in a late case. Construing such a provision, the court says:

"It means that performance of the agreement by the sellers was not left optional with them, but was an absolute binding obligation to make deliveries to the best of their ability at the time specified in the agreement unless they were prevented from making such deliveries by causes for which the sellers were not responsible and over which they had no control." ## NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSEYMEN.

President, Lloyd O. Stark, Louisiana, Mo.; Vice-president, M. B. Cashman, Owatonna, Minn.; Executive Secretary, John Watson, Princeton, N. J.; Treasurer, J. W. Hill, Des Moines, Ia.

THE Pontiac Nursery Co., Detroit, Mich., announces that it has moved its general offices from the Farwell building to the Chalmers building, Woodward and Parsons avenues, in the same city.

ROBERT BERRY, well known as a landscape gardener, has established a 20-acre nursery at Kingsport, Tenn., to produce planting material for the town, which is to be developed as a manufacturing center and city of homes.

WITH a capital of $150,000, the Meneray Nursery & Seed Co. has been incorporated at Council Bluffs, Ia. The officers for the present will be: President, F. W. Meneray; vice-president, Royal C. Meneray, and secretary-treasurer, E. C. McCarthy.

ANNOUNCEMENT that the Rakestraw-Pyle Co., Kennett Square, Pa., had relinquished its holding proves to be correct only so far as the cut flower business is concerned, the greenhouses having been dismantled. The nursery business is conducted as before.

MODIFY MICHIGAN QUARANTINE.

The following notice has been sent out by L. R. Taft, state inspector of nurseries and orchards for Michigan:

Reports reaching this office from areas infested with the white pine blister rust indicate that it is still spreading in certain sections in New England, New York, Wisconsin and Minnesota, as well as in the province of Ontario, Canada.

However, it would appear that the leading nursery centers in the state of New York, and especially those where the growing of currant plants is extensively carried on, are now practically free from this disease, and notice is hereby given that the Michigan quarantine, No. 1, April, 1918, is modified to permit the bringing into Michigan of red and white currant plants that have been grown in or near Fredonia, Rochester, Geneva, Newark and Dansville, N. Y., provided they are accompanied by a state or federal certificate of inspection.

The quarantine against 5-leaved pines and black currants is still in force, and red and white currants may not be brought into Michigan from New England, New York (the above-mentioned sections excepted), Wisconsin or Minnesota without a special permit.

CALIFORNIA NURSERYMEN.

Hold Tenth Annual Meeting.

Fresno, Cal., attracts much attention among members of the trade this week, for no less than four conventions are in progress there. The tenth annual meeting of the California Association of Nurserymen opened a 3-day convention November 11 and is considering important matters affecting trade conditions and the future of the nursery industry. The Ladies' Auxiliary of the California Association of Nurserymen is holding its fourth annual meeting this week as well. The annual state fruit growers' and farmers' convention and the convention of the State Association of County Horticultural Commissioners complete the total.

The opening session of the California Association of Nurserymen was called to order at Woodman hall November 11 by President J. E. Bergtholdt, who is also vice-president of the Nurserymen's Bud Selection Association, Newcastle. W. F. Toomey, mayor of Fresno, wel-

Ladies' Evening.

For Friday evening, November 12, a musical program is planned, including vocal and instrumental selections. This is to be ladies' evening and Mrs. W. A. Fitzgerald, vice-president of the California Federation of Women's Clubs, will occupy the chair.

Among the speakers scheduled are Mrs. W. A. Fitzgerald, Fresno; Mrs. F. E. Cook, Fresno; Mrs. J. H. Pierson, Fresno; Johannes Reimers, San Leandro; Mrs. H. C. Merritt, Jr., Tulare; Mrs. Robert Hargrave, Madera; A. G. Wishon, Fresno; Jerome O. Cross, Fresno. This session will close with an address by President J. E. Bergtholdt.

The flowers and floral decorations were by Parsons' Flower Shop, San Francisco Floral Co., Rossi-Ferrari Floral Co. and Mrs. M. Simmins. The plant decorations were by Bert Jackson, M. R. Jackson and H. J. Scherer.

Saturday morning, November 13, will be devoted to unfinished business, reports of committees, selection of the meeting place for 1921 and the election of officers for the ensuing year.

The fourth annual gathering of the Ladies' Auxiliary will also be in session from November 11 to 13 this week. The officers for 1920 are: President, Mrs. John Vallance, of Oakland; treasurer, Mrs. Charles E. Jackson, of Cupertino, and secretary, Mrs. Max J. Crow, of Gilroy.

PAINESVILLE, O.

Clay top soil is exceptionally scarce in this vicinity, much of it having been used lately for different purposes.

John Williams, formerly of the J. M. Gasser Co., Cleveland, O., is now with the Storrs & Harrison Co., in the greenhouse department.

Tony Rich, for many years foreman at the Martin Kohankie nurseries, has accepted a position with the Wayside Gardens, Mentor, O.

Mr. and Mrs. Merkel, senior members of the firm C. Merkel & Son, have gone to California to spend the winter months.

J. L. Wetzel & Son shipped a carload of shrubs and ornamentals to Jackson & Perkins Co., Newark, N. Y., last week.

W. F. Bohlender, of Tippecanoe City, was a visitor last week.

The Perry Gardens, at Perry, O., are advertising dahlias and gladioli in the local paper.

J. E. White, in charge of the bulb department of the Storrs & Harrison Co., says the demand for bulbs this year was much heavier than usual. This is due to the uncertainty of the coal situation. As bulbs require little fuel for growing, florists thought it better to be on the safe side. T. J. M.

CLEVELAND, O.

The Market.

With the exception of Saturday, November 6, the first week in November found the market dull. Mums are coming in better. For some reason or another white predominates, while yellow and pink are not so plentiful. The latter, of course, are in greater demand. Some fine disbudded pompons are coming into the market now. Roses are better and a little more plentiful, but almost all the stock is shipped in and must be used immediately.

Various Notes.

Miss Katherine O'Connor has purchased a new delivery truck.

C. E. Barton, of Norwalk, was a visitor last week.

Mr. Johnston, of Johnston's Flower Shoppe, Canton, O., was a visitor last week. W. A. R.

Group Number Four Clement Moore Varieties of Species from 25 to 750 Dollars

When there will be another chance to get hybridizing stock like this, nobody knows. The fame of Mr. Moore as an expert in selecting hybridizing material, is your ample guarantee that every item listed is, in these days of embargoes, indeed a rich find.

There is not a cull among them, as Mr. Moore always discarded everything he did not consider up to his high standards.

PROVIDENCE, R. I.

The Market.

Although business on the whole is slightly better than it was a year ago, there was a slight falling off last week. The social calendar for the remainder of the season gives indications of busy weeks to come. Weather conditions have so far been a continuance of Indian summer and although it is the beginning of the second week of November there have as yet been only a few slight frosts. Prices have sagged a trifle during the last week.

Various Notes.

Thomas H. McAndrew has resigned his position with T. J. Johnston & Co. and is now with the S. S. Kresge Co.

Timothy O'Connor was in New York last week on a business trip.

A. J. Johnson, who has been confined to his home by illness for several weeks, is reported as improving.

Ed. Brooke, of T. J. Johnston & Co., was a business visitor at Boston and vicinity last week.

Miss Nellie O'Connor had a large wedding decoration last week.

M. Sweeney has overhauled his range of houses at the head of Pine street.

One of the large furnishing stores had a special sale of 2,500 Boston ferns in pots at 25 cents each, November 6.

BELVIDERE, ILL.

The salesroom and conservatory of Lyon & Anderson were filled with flowers November 5, when their chrysanthemum show opened. For two days the store was visited by hundreds of people. Banked about the show room were masses of chrysanthemums, including white and yellow Turner and pink and white Chieftain, with bunches of pompons here and there. There was also a generous display of roses of the popular varieties. A 4-piece orchestra furnished music each evening of the show.

Winter-Flowering Roses

We still have left the following varieties, in approximate quantities in good strong plants, in 3 1/2-inch pots, ready for immediate planting, and offer same as long as unsold:

1000 Francis Scott Key, 1000 Frank W. Dunlop,
1000 Silvia, 1500 Hadley,
1000 American Beauty, 1500 Columbia,
2000 Ophelia,

And one or two hundred Hoosier Beauty.

Greenhouse Heating

SUBSCRIBERS are invited to write the editor of this department with regard to any details of greenhouse heating that are not understood. When information is desired regarding the capacity of boilers, or the amount of radiation required for a greenhouse, the needed temperatures should be stated in the inquiry, as well as the amount of glass in the side walls, and the dimensions and general arrangement of the greenhouses. It is often helpful, also, to have a sketch showing the location of the houses.

INSULATE THIRTY FEET.

I am installing a Giblin No. 70 hot water boiler for my four greenhouses, 20x150 feet. Instead of putting up a building next to the greenhouses for the boiler, I intend to put the boiler in the basement of my residence, which is about thirty feet from greenhouse No. 1. The floor of the basement is five feet below the floors of the greenhouses. The top of the boiler is on a level with the floor of the greenhouses. Can I run a pipe from the boiler on a level with the ground outside to the nearest greenhouse, and then elevate the pipe and run it on a slope to the end of the greenhouses and bring the returns back underground to the boiler, boxing both pipes with asbestos to keep in the heat? What would you suggest?

G. F. M.—Cal.

There should be no difficulty in running the flow pipe as outlined above. Unless it is possible to locate the expansion tank in the greenhouse above the highest point in the flow pipe, an air valve will be necessary. The expansion tank may then be connected with the flow pipe before it is carried outside of the basement. It should, of course, be located at a level higher than the highest point in the system. If the flow and return pipes are properly insulated, the loss of heat between the residence and the greenhouses will be negligible.

HEATING WITH STEAM.

I am sending sketch of my two greenhouses. What would be the best way to run the pipes in them? I have an American Radiator Co. steam boiler No. 207, rated at 2,000 feet, which is also used to heat my residence. Also advise as to the proper size of pipe. I have a quantity of 1½-inch pipe on hand, which I should like to use as far as possible. I wish to maintain a temperature of about 60 degrees in both houses.

H. E. V.—Mich.

From the sketch it appears that there are two connected houses, each 13½x40, with sixteen inches of glass in the side walls. While it would be preferable to use 1½-inch or 2-inch pipe for the flows in both houses and 1¼-inch or 1-inch pipe for the returns, it will be satisfactory if 1½-inch pipes are used for both flows and returns.

For 60 degrees it will be necessary to use one 1½-inch flow pipe and either five 1½-inch, six 1¼-inch or eight 1-inch returns in each house.

It is stated that one house has raised benches and I infer that the other house has solid beds. The flow pipes should be one foot below the ridges and

TO THE MAN WHO NEEDS A BOILER

"The customer's interest first"—is the basis of the KROESCHELL standard. This principle makes the KROESCHELL Policy the most liberal of all in the Greenhouse Boiler business. The great variety of boilers that we make places us in a commanding position. It is the KROESCHELL principle to supply only the type of boiler best suited for the conditions. For this reason we always furnish the most efficient boiler unit in every case.

The KROESCHELL has proven its worth in many of the large establishments in this country. It has frequently been selected by the most careful buyers in competition with all other types of boilers. Its efficiency and capacity are completely beyond any other boiler.

KROESCHELL BOILERS have no bulky, soot accumulating surfaces—you avoid the disagreeable work and trouble indispensable to cleaning boilers with complicated and tortuous back and forth passages.

The superiority of our boilers has resulted in the removal and abolishment of hundreds of cast iron sectional boilers—in every instance KROESCHELL BOILERS give more heat with the same piping with less fuel.

Help Save the "White Coal of Industry"

The boiling hot water resulting from condensation in your steam lines is worth money. You have paid for it in terms of coal. It contains valuable heat units.
It is the "White Coal of Industry"—it should not be wasted.

And it need not be wasted. The Morehead Back-to-Boiler System will save it for you by returning it to the boiler at temperatures as high as 400 degrees Fahrenheit. It reduces coal consumption an average of 20%. At the same time your steam will be "drier" and more efficient; your production speeded up and profits increased.

"X" BOILER LIQUID FINDS AND FIXES LEAKS IN THE GREENHOUSE HEATING EQUIPMENT

WHAT losses in a greenhouse a faulty heating system may cause!

Even if leaks do not cause the shut-down of the plant, they make it necessary to burn more coal.

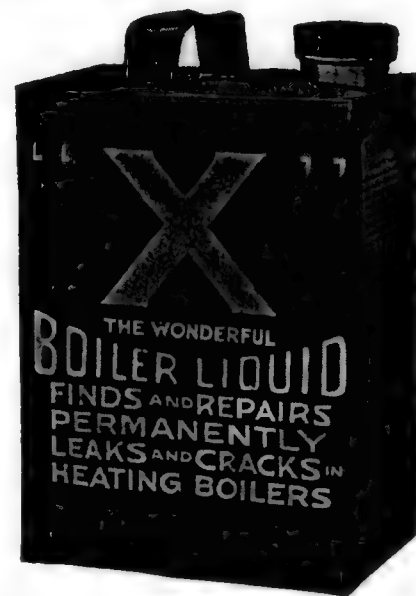

Scale and rust in the system also use up more coal—25% more for every one-eighth inch of scale.

PREVENTION against leaks, rust and scale is the best and cheapest insurance.

Add "X" Boiler Liquid to the water in the boiler. It works from the inside, keeps the heating system clean and repairs all leaks instantly. A permanent, metal-like repair in half an hour which will stand 500 lbs. pressure.

Keep "X" Boiler Liquid in the heating system constantly for insurance and economy.

Get "X" Liquid from your steamfitter—or we will ship direct, postage prepaid, on receipt of price. $6.00 per quart. $10.00 per half gallon.

Pacific Coast Branch, 450 Rialto Bldg., San Francisco, Cal.

house is 18x75 feet, with three feet of concrete and thirty inches of glass in the sides, and ten feet to the ridge.

I intend to grow a general line of potted plants for the retail trade. We have a temperature sometimes as low as 10 degrees below zero. I want a boiler large enough so that I can add a propagating house, 10x20 feet. A. R.—Ill.

To heat the residence, the office and the three greenhouses, about 2,000 square feet of radiation will be required and to carry it with economy I advise the use of a boiler rated at 2,500 square feet, or slightly more.

The residence will require about 350 square feet, the office 150 feet, the smaller greenhouse 700 feet and the larger one 750 square feet, for 60 degrees. These figures may be reduced about one-fourth if a temperature of 50 degrees will answer.

To heat the greenhouses to 60 degrees, you should use three 2½-inch flow pipes and nine 2-inch returns. In case 50 degrees will suffice in zero weather, only six returns will be needed. In the propagating house use one 2½-inch flow pipe and five 2-inch returns.

SIZE OF PIPE.

I am building a greenhouse 18x50 feet. It is nine feet high at the ridge and four feet at the eaves. The north side is of wood and the south side of glass. The house is protected on the east by a residence and on the west by the boiler room. I have an 8-horsepower upright tubular boiler and should like to heat to 60 degrees. Please inform me what size of pipe to use, how many mains and returns, and what arrange-

NEWARK, N. J.

The Market.

Frosts have killed most of the outdoor flowers, thereby increasing the demand for greenhouse blooms. While there is a fair demand for flowers now, the winter season for florists has not yet begun.

The scarcity of coal, plus the difficulty of securing it, has a tendency to reduce the amount of cultivation under glass. The decrease for this reason, however, will not be large.

Various Notes.

Charles Luthy, 363 Springfield avenue, reports that business is quiet.

Thousands of persons have visited the annual fall exhibition of chrysanthemums and begonias at the greenhouses at Branch Brook park. There were 2,000 mums exhibited, ranging from the stately William Turner to the tiny golden pompons. There were 1,500 begonias on exhibition. R. B. M.

East Peoria, Ill.—John Schmidt is building an up-to-date greenhouse here and has entered the florists' business.

The Market.

Business conditions again changed during last week. In fact, the demand has been good and stock has been moving quite satisfactorily. Some fine chrysanthemums and pompons are to be seen in this market, and roses of all varieties are coming in nicely. It appears, however, that there may develop a shortage of roses. Some good sweet peas are coming in daily. Carnations are also coming along nicely and will continue to improve as the weather keeps cool. Chrysanthemums are now the most popular flowers and are arriving in large quantities.

Various Notes.

Joseph Dilloff, of Wertheimer Bros., New York, stopped at Pittsburgh on his trip to the west.

The Pittsburgh Florists' Association held a meeting at the Seventh Avenue hotel, Thursday, November 4, at 7 p. m. There were twenty-seven florists present. As the organization has not been active for several years, reorganization was given careful consideration and, after each member present pledged himself to support the new organization, the chairman, Ira C. Harper, suggested that the election of officers take place for the ensuing year. The following officers were elected: President, Ira C. Harper; vice-president, Harvey Sheaff; secretary, E. E. Ludwig; treasurer, G. P. Weaklen. The organization expects to take in all florists within a radius of sixty miles from Pittsburgh. The surrounding suburbs and towns were well represented at this meeting.

Emil Winter has just been granted a permit to erect a greenhouse at Lyndhurst, on Beechwood boulevard. It is understood this is to be the largest privately owned greenhouse in this district.

T. P. Langhans, secretary of the Pittsburgh Cut Flower Co., left Monday

CHREYSANTHEMUMS ON LONG ISLAND.

Mr. Benjamin Hammond, Beacon, N. Y. Woodside, L. I., N. Y., Oct. 20, 1913.

Dear Sir: I find your Thrip Juice No. 2 a good thing to use on Chrysanthemums. Kindly send bill for the last gallon shipped, and oblige,

Yours respectfully. (Signed) VICTOR S. DORVAL SONS.

THRIPS ON CARNATIONS.

"Dear Mr. Editor: Please advise how to remedy the trouble affecting Carnation buds mailed under separate cover. Kansas. F. W. F.

Ans: "The Carnation buds are badly infested with Thrips. Upon opening up two or three of the buds we found them alive with these pests. Thrips are one of the worst enemies that Carnation growers have to deal with, and the only way to fight them successfully is to get after them by spraying the plants regularly with the Nicotine preparations as soon as they are planted into the houses from the field and keep at it continually until weather conditions will allow for fumigation. For stubborn cases we spray with HAMMOND'S THRIP JUICE No. 2, applied as per directions on the cans. This is an oily substance and will cause the foliage of the plants to look a lighter green, but we have never found it to harm the foliage at all. C. W. JOHNSON."

THRIP JUICE NO. 2 ON ROSES.

Hopeland Estate, Staatsburg, N. Y., Dec. 20, 1913.

Hammond's Paint & Slug Shot Works, Beacon, N. Y.

Dear Sirs: I have used your THRIP JUICE No. 2 on outdoor Roses, also Roses indoors, as well as Bay Trees and other hard-wooded stock, and can say it is a most efficient remedy for Scale, Mealy Bug and Thrips. Very truly yours, (Signed) CHAS. HARMAN, Supt.

Kansas City, Mo., Oct. 7, 1914.

Col. Wm. Sharp, for more than twenty-five years grower for Samuel Murray, says: "I have found THRIP JUICE No. 2 very effective for White Scale on Cattleys and variegated Pineapples, Brown Scale on Ficus and Palms.

While several applications may be necessary, it is cheaper in the end than Nicotine and far more effective.

Springfield, Ohio, Feb. 17, 1915.

Schmidt & Botley Co. endorse THRIP JUICE No. 2 for killing the White Fly. They believe in prevention, and took steps at once to destroy it.

Gustav Schneider says he uses THRIP JUICE No. 2 regularly, more as a preventive, and never had a finer lot of Chrysanthemums than last season. At one time the plants were affected with rust, but one or two sprayings brought them around.

Charlotte, N. C., Nov. 14, 1914.

Robert Lockerbie, many years with the Robt. Craig Co., and now grower for the Charlotte Cut Flower Co., says he has used all makes of Insecticides and is now using THRIP JUICE No. 2 for Thrips on Chrysanthemums and Carnations. The dilution of one to forty is proper. Sprayed on cloudy days, every week or ten days, left on foliage for 48 hours, it never fails to kill the insect and the slight discoloration on foliage is offset by its usefulness. W. M.

of a women's clothing shop. G. L. Bates has been added to the sales force at this shop, taking the place made vacant when P. F. Case left the florists' trade to give full time to his conserve plant.

A nice run of floral work for the last fortnight is reported by Kenney's Home of Flowers. This shop has made a fine showing of potted cyclamens.

The Orpheum Floral Co. has been featuring baskets of the smaller dahlias and pompons to good effect. It also reports good sale for Bonnaffons.

The Woodlawn Flower Shop reported a number of table decorations for home and club events during the last week. Miss Zula Green, bookkeeper for this firm, has returned from an extended eastern vacation trip.

Owing to delay in the completion of the building at Fourth avenue and Pine street, Carl Melby is still unable to occupy his new shop there. This was to have been completed about October 1.

The Art Floral Co. has been making special displays of potted ferns of late and has been able to report especially good sales of the smaller ferns sold in odd-shaped jardinières.

Local friends were shocked last week to learn of the sudden death of William M. Goodchild, nurseryman and landscape gardener. Friends heard a dog barking strangely in their front yard and investigation showed that Mr. Goodchild had fallen dead of heart disease, while on his way to visit them.

Felix Rosaia reports a number of church decorations for weddings lately. He has used Bonnaffon and Turner mums for most of these events. H. M.

NEWPORT, R. I.

Leikens, of this city and New York, decorated for the wedding of Miss Ruth King, in New York, November 4, the arrangements being quite elaborate. Mrs. Joseph Leikens came to Newport election day for the purpose of casting her vote. She said that she was proud to cast her first ballot in Newport, where her husband claimed residence.

Why Not Get It Off Your Mind So You Can Spend Your Evenings In Comfort Between Now and Spring?

Of course, you've said yourself, half a dozen times if you have once—"Sooner or later I'll have to look into this Skinner System of Irrigation."

"It's making money for other florists, why not for me?"

All of which being so, it's surely better to look into it sooner.

In fact, there's no other time quite so good as now.

First, because that's the only way of being sure of getting your equip-

The Market.

Stock has been plentiful. Chrysanthemums have been arriving in large supply. The majority of these were of excellent quality and in good demand. Plenty of the large types are available in yellow and white, but pink blooms are a little scarcer. Pompons, singles and the smaller types are available in large numbers in pink, yellow and white. The bronze and red are slower in appearing. Yellow and white Turner are beginning to come in. These are excellent blooms and bring from $7.50 to $9 per dozen. Other types range from $1.20 up per dozen.

Before election, business was dull, but it has opened up since. Although considerable stock has been coming into the market, there has not been a great waste.

Carnations are in large supply. Considerable funeral work has helped utilize them. Good stock has held at $3 and $4 per hundred, although poor stock can be had at almost any figure.

Roses are scarce. This is fortunate, as the demand for them has not been brisk.

Potted plants have been in good demand. Chrysanthemum plants are in special favor. Some attractive plants of the Caprice family are being offered.

Various Notes.

E. H. Lane, of the Lindley Florist Box Co., Marion, Ind., called on the trade last week.

Bertermann Bros. Co. had three large wedding decorations last week.

There were a number of large chrysanthemums peddled on the streets Saturday, November 6, for the football game.

The Smith & Young Co. has put Mr. Fox on the road selling its goods. His territory will be the state of Indiana.

Indianapolis was represented at the Indiana State Florists' Association meeting at Richmond, Ind., Monday, November 8, by the following: John Hartje, Len Elder, Henry Rieman, John Grande, Carl Sonnenschmidt, O. E. Steinkamp, A. F. J. Baur, William Roepke, Martin Nelson, Thomas Hepler and E. E. Temperley.

Mr. Kirman, of the Knightstown Greenhouses, was a visitor November 6.

The local florists extend their sympathy to Earle Williams upon the death of his father, George Williams. Further notice will be found in the obituary column this week. E. E. T.

ELECTION DAY CLEARS MUMS.

A record sale of mums was the result of a little wide-awake advertising on the part of the Excelsior Greenhouses, Excelsior Springs, Mo. The town in which they are located happens to be much interested in political matters. The day before election this firm started a publicity campaign, persuading the populace that if they were for Cox they should wear a white mum and if for Harding, a yellow mum. The slogan was, "Show your colors on election day."

They did. Excelsior Springs holds loyal followers of both parties and the wearing of the flowers gave everyone an excellent chance to display his loyalty. Every man who wore no mum in his buttonhole was asked by jesters if he was ashamed to show his colors. It followed that nearly every man wore a mum, and the direct result to the originators of the idea was that Excelsior Greenhouses completely sold out their large stock of mums.

Permanite

A D A P T A B I L I T Y

The outstanding feature of PERMANITE is its adaptability to serve the particular purpose for which it is especially manufactured.

PERMANITE is primarily a glazing Cement. It can be used for other purposes as well, but since the materials incorporated into the manufacture of PERMANITE must be of the very best to enable it to stand up under all sorts of conditions, PERMANITE is TOO GOOD to be used for any purpose except glazing. Surely you realize this!

PERMANITE, besides making your Greenhouse permanently tight and reducing your coal bill to a minimum, will also greatly reduce glass breakage.

Beware of "all-purpose" materials! Each Garland Product has its own duty to perform.

HOTBED SASH

We will admit that you can buy cheaper hotbed sash; that is, cheaper if you consider first cost only.

The cheaper hotbed sash will not last as long as ours. We have been making hotbed sash for over fifty years and have seen instances again and again where cheaper hotbed sashes have rotted out while ours were still as good as new.

The reason for this is simple. We use only sap-free Red Gulf cypress and we put in the very best of workmanship. Whenever a sash has sap in the lumber it rots out quickly and the average florist is not enough of a lumber expert to tell sap in cypress. He finds it out, however, when the sash decay in short order.

We carry a large number of hotbed sash in stock and will welcome your order.

50-foot 8-inch House

This house being sort of a mid-width between the narrow and the wide ones, it has been extensively adopted.

It is about as wide as it is safe to build, without trussing the rafter between the center columns and side walks.

The center space between columns is 27 feet 8 inches.

Between columns and posts, 11 feet 6 inches.

The usual bench arrangement in a house of this width is 8 benches, each 4 feet 5 inches wide.

The sides are 7 feet high.

The height to ridge, 19 feet 9 inches.

RED RIBBONS

Our salesroom is now ablaze with the good Red things for the holidays. Everything imaginable in Red and Green. Make up your usual Christmas items now and book advance orders.

Redberry Ribbon

(Cotton Back)

A nice heavy, lustrous satin ribbon—good tying qualities—just the right holly red color. Especially fine for wreaths, baskets and the little holiday novelties. Redberry has been a favorite for many years.

A Word to the Wise is Sufficient

Fresh Giganteums are scarce, owing to very short crop—consequently there will be little or no cold storage stock for 1921. Be one of the wise ones, have Lilies when your neighbors have none, by placing part of the fresh stock in storage and growing cold storage stock for the early Easter.

Mostly Dark Stems

$47.00 PER CASE
Less 5% for cash with order

FORMOSUM LILIES throw more flowers than any other variety. Plant as late as January for Decoration Day. Grow cool; need no forcing. Put your Giganteum in storage, as the new crop is very short. If you desire to take advantage of this low offer on FORMOSUM, we will place same in storage and deliver to you as wanted. FORMOSUM do well when planted as late as May. The fact that Giganteum are so scarce will prove this to be a good purchase.

Lilium Giganteum, 7 to 9, 300 to case, $45.00 per case

All advance orders have been filled. We can now accept additional orders and ship immediately. Lilies started cool, with good root action, can be forced harder than late planted stock. Write us your order and we will ship same day.

New Carnations

To keep abreast of the times, you must buy the new varieties as they are offered. We are offering three varieties that we feel sure you will plant sooner or later. We suggest that you stock up with them while they are still in robust health and vigorous in growth.

Let us book your order NOW.

Harvester is a white that will give you a continuous cut of first quality blooms ALL THE TIME. Propagates easily, makes a fine field plant, comes into crop quickly and KEEPS AT IT.

Edna Nic Zweifel's scarlet. We believe that this fine red will please those growers who have been in search of a red that is healthy, that blooms freely, that does not go off color, that keeps well and does not split the calyx.

Maine Sunshine is already well known as the best yellow in every respect that has ever trotted down the pike.

Come and see these varieties growing here.

Why cyclamen purchased from us will give entire satisfaction and make you the most money:

Our Shipping Facilities:

Exceptional facilities for southern and southwest points. Express Office in our packing room insures less rough handling. Main lines New York Central Lines and Pennsylvania for east and west shipments, and C. & E. I. and Illinois Central for north and south shipments.

Plants Now Coming Into Bloom Strong.

Large stock to select from; first come, first choice. The most discriminating buyers are inspecting, buying our stock and giving us repeat orders. (We have the varieties and the quality.)

NO PACKING CHARGE.

What our customers say about our quality and packing:

From North Carolina:

"It is with great pleasure and satisfaction to report to you that the shipment of cyclamen reached me in first-class condition. I give you full credit for the way you packed the shipment. That's the way to pack plants, and not just slap them in like so many shippers are doing nowadays. Everyone seems to be mighty anxious to sell goods and get the money, but don't give a rap how goods reach the buyer. Enclosed find check for additional order."

From Arizona:

"Duplicate our order of the 24th; did not think shipment could be made this far."

"Received 400 cyclamen from the east and they can't touch yours."

"Cyclamen arrived; well pleased with quality and they were packed fine."

"Enclosed find check for $360.00; cys arrived in fine shape and we are well pleased with the stock."

Not the cheapest that are offered, because quality stock cannot be had cheap. Nor the highest prices, because we have a large quantity and can afford to share profits with you; just the best that can be had for the money.

FILLING THE FALL WINDOW

Opening the florist's season, autumn likewise brings to him abundantly the wherewithal to decorate his store window in a manner that is artistic in appearance and profitable in pulling pedestrians in his direction. If you haven't taken advantage of the season's opportunities, read this article.

EVER during the year has the florist a greater abundance of material with which to make artistic and attention-arresting displays. The resources at hand are so large and full of opportunity for the ingenious decorator that one wonders why more use of them is not made. Many florists accomplish striking results at this time of year, both in beautification of their store windows and in attracting transient trade. When the advent of cold weather has put an end to garden flowers the time is auspicious for the retailer to draw the public's notice to the greenhouse product. Though he may do so in other ways as well, he is overlooking one of his best mediums if he neglects his show window.

Advertising men tell us that illustrations reinforce reading copy and are often of more importance than the latter in carrying a selling message. We all of us admit the force of this assertion and recognize its truth from our own experience. Since that is the case, the display window, which is one step, at least, better than an illustration, presenting the real product, instead of its picture, to the eye, should be of even greater advertising value. And it is, as those florists who have devoted thought and effort to this branch of their publicity—for as such it should be considered—will bear witness.

Value Demonstrated.

It is not easy to count returns in dollars and cents from the investment of employees' time, money for accessories and stock from the ice-box which is put into a window display. But it has been frequently demonstrated that it has a decided ability to bring buyers into the store. Moreover, those florists who have once undertaken the effort and expense necessary to stage pretentious displays in their windows in no case have discontinued such effort and expense from a conclusion that they are unprofitable. Rather have they progressed to more and more elaborate and ambitious outlays in this direction. This fact should be enough to persuade any backward individual florist of the wisdom of utilizing his store window as a trade-getter. And at this time of year the many materials at hand for this purpose should be a particular urge toward such action on his part.

Season Offers Aid.

The harvest season brings a generous variety of outdoor aids to window dressing, while the arrival of cold weather increases the contribution, in quality and quantity, of the greenhouses. Chief among the latter, of course, are chrysanthemums, whose wide range of colors makes them particularly valuable for this kind of work. After the small flowers of summer, the big exhibition blooms of the queen of autumn are themselves enough to draw many passers' gaze. The colors of both these and the smaller singles and pompons afford splendid opportunity for artistic effects.

But there is much more than this particular flower to beautify the show window and draw notice to the florist's wares. The vivid foliage of fall may be used, as it has often been, to strikingly picturesque effect. In late years this material has found an increasingly important place among the florist's resources for various sorts of decorating. The range of natural tones has been augmented for the trade's use by prepared material, which, of course, is available at other seasons also. In many ways both natural and prepared foliages aid the decorator, and may be put to use in widely various manners in the window. From outdoors at this time also come the corn shocks and pumpkins that have assisted in filling many a florist's window for harvest season, Halloween and Thanksgiving displays.

But more important are the many resources in the florist's own stock that afford the finest sort of displays. Chrysanthemums have been noted. A basket of big William Turner never fails to draw admiring passers-by. Of smaller blooms many color combinations can be made which are exceedingly effective. Pink and bronze varieties may be used strikingly.

Combine Colors.

Pot mums serve as a background or, by proper color combinations, may be made into a picturesque composition of hues. The results to be achieved in this manner are almost infinitely various, depending upon the individual florist's ingenuity and eye for color schemes.

Nor is the list exhausted for ways of filling the fall window in a manner that will advertise the florist and sell his flowers. It has only been begun here. There are many novel ideas and many more which, though not novel, are nevertheless effective for the florists' use. The football season in the college town brings its suggestions. Thanksgiving ideas were touched upon in these pages last week. Experienced decorators could suggest as many more ideas as have been presented here. Enough has been said—has it not?

to indicate how generous are the opportunities presented at this season for decorating flower store windows. At the threshold of a new season those florists who have neglected this means of promoting their sales should take advantage of the autumn's materials to fill their windows with a real display. In the words of the football coach, "Let's go!"

SAAKE'S SIMPLE SETTING.

The illustration on the preceding page indicates how excellent an opportunity the display window of the latest type of flower store gives for presenting an attractive exhibit to the public. This particular style of store front aids the window artist materially, for the glass on one side makes the range of observation along the street decidedly greater. The finished effect produced by the tiled flooring, the valances above, and the covered lights furnishes a setting in which simple arrangements produce interesting and attractive effects. No matter how simple they are, the difference between them and the too frequent fern-filled window is vast, not only in appearance but also, and more decidedly, in advertising value.

The material included in this window display of O. C. Saake's is not extensive or complicated. The few vases of chrysanthemums, the two or three ferns and palms, the "lucky weegee" birds and their cages, with the aid of a cloth drape in the center, are simply arranged, yet interestingly. The eye finds something there to hold it. It is interesting to note, if you are good at that kind of observation, how the eye, though it rests first, perhaps, upon the weegee birds and their cages in the foreground, eventually travels to the group of big mums at the back of the window. And once the eye has reached those blooms the other parts of the window take a secondary place, as do the lesser objects in a picture. In this ability to lead the eye of the beholder to a desired object lies the real art of the window dresser.

This window is one instance of the art that has made O. C. Saake one of the leading Los Angeles florists. He is, in fact, the oldest established retailer in that city, having started in 1894. In addition to this view of his store front, at 215 West Fourth street, the interior of his store is shown in the illustration on this page.

JAEGER'S TELEGRAPH WINDOW.

Whether it is autumn or spring, winter or summer, window displays presenting to the public florists' facilities for sending orders by telegraph are always timely. And now, as well as at any other time, such a window is a profitable one for a florist. Many examples of this sort of display have been published in The Review. One that is commendable is reproduced on page 21. It was staged by F. C. Jaeger & Son, of San Francisco.

The essential parts in the composition of this display are ascertainable from the illustration. The reproduction does not plainly show the names of the florists on the tags fastened to globes at points representing the principal cities of the country on the map. In each case the name, street address and city of the correspondent of F. C. Jaeger & Son are noted on the tag. The ones given are Henry Penn, Boston; Geo. M. Stumpp, New York; Gude Bros. Co., Washington, D. C.; Mills the Florist, Jacksonville, Fla.; E. C. Ludwig Floral Co., Pittsburgh; Franklin Park Floral Co., Columbus, O.; Honaker the Florist, Lexington, Ky.; Charles Eble, New Orleans; John Breitmeyer's Sons, Detroit; Bertermann Bros. Co., Indianapolis, Ind.; A. Lange, Chicago; Grimm & Gorly, St. Louis; Lang Floral & Nursery Co., Dallas, Tex.; Huddart Floral Co., Salt Lake City; John H. Bath, Omaha, Neb.; Swanson's, Inc., Minneapolis, Minn.; Geo. H.

Cooper, Denver, Colo.; State Nursery & Seed Co., Helena, Mont.

Placards explaining the telegraph service occupied conspicuous places in front of the map in a group of Japanese dwarf firs and other foliage plants, which gave the necessary floral tone to the display.

ARMISTICE DAY IN BOSTON.

Returned Soldiers Remembered.

Boston florists are showing the way to create a demand for flowers November 11. They began last year by setting the public a good example—giving flowers away to the wounded soldiers and sailors in Boston's 125 hospitals. They showed their future customers what Armistice day should stand for.

President Henry Penn, Secretary E. S. Gorney, Financial-secretary Frank Edgar and Treasurer William Stiekler, of the Retail Florists' Association of Boston, this year arranged with the growers for quantities of blooms of all the autumn varieties. November 11, 125 boxes, each containing from 400 to 600 flowers, were packed in thirty automobiles, loaned by the florists for making the deliveries.

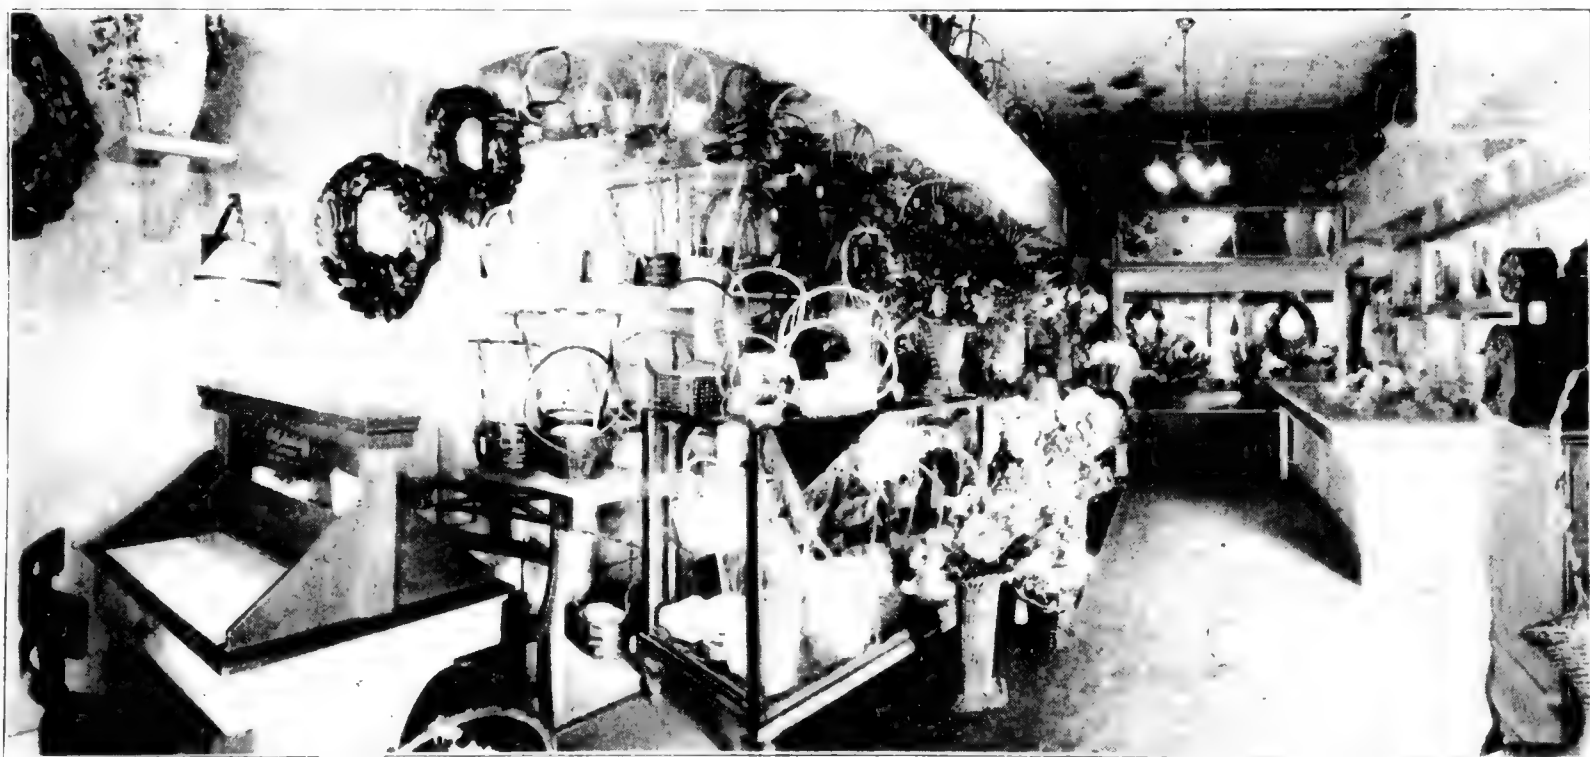

The cars in line, decorated with pennants, then formed a procession which paraded through streets of the Hub, disbanding at Copley square to go their separate ways to the various hospitals. It was a successful demonstration, and the results of its yearly repetition can already be seen.

Possibilities of Big Day.

E. S. Gorney, secretary of the association, expresses his opinion of the possibilities for the trade in the future development of Armistice day as follows:

"There is no reason why we cannot have another flower holiday on Armistice day, by advertising collectively, urging grave decorations and memorial services, sending flowers to the sick soldiers and also by inducing everybody to wear a flower.

"I would suggest that the women wear a yellow chrysanthemum and the men a yellow pompon, as at this season of the year chrysanthemums are quite plentiful. Yellow being a symbol of gold, every chrysanthemum worn would be a gold star in memory of the boys who gave their lives.

"Next year we hope even to improve on the parade of this year by having a few floats and announcing in advance, through the newspapers, that flowers will be distributed along the route of the parade.

"I have had several letters from different parts of the country, asking why Memorial day is so much observed in New England. It is because we took advantage of the sentiment of the people and urged grave decorations for the Civil war veterans. I believe that in a few years Armistice day will be as great a flower holiday as Memorial day, if the florists do their duty.

"Get together and start planning now what you will do to encourage flower buying on next Armistice day."

JOYS ENTER ATLANTA.

A few months ago The Review printed an editorial paragraph to the effect that there were fewer first-class flower stores in Atlanta, Ga., than in any other city of equal size in the United States—with the result that Atlanta is to have another good store. It will open within a few days. Joy Floral Co., of Nashville, having recently established a successful branch store at Chattanooga, are ready for another extension of their business. They investigated trade conditions in Atlanta and other places and decided that nowhere in the southeast is there a better prospect than at Atlanta. A first-class location was obtained and equipment was ordered from Chicago. The opening will be within the next few days and, as at Nashville, the business will be built up on quality lines.

PROVIDENCE MUM SHOW.

A large combined exhibition, given under the auspices of the Rhode Island Horticultural Society, Providence Chamber of Commerce, Providence Market Gardeners' Association, Rhode Island State Board of Agriculture, Rhode Island Corn Growers' Association; Rhode Island Fruit Growers' Association and Rhode Island Poultry Association, was given in the spacious state armory November 13 to 16, and all available space was filled with exhibits.

Chrysanthemums, both cut and in pots, were largely shown in the horticultural section. The flowers were of grand quality, the Turners and Yellow Turners particularly so. The leading prize-winners for cut flowers were John S. Doig, head gardener to F. S. Peck; Maplehurst Greenhouses; C. O. Childs, Peace Dale, R. I., and Munro's Greenhouses, Westerly, R. I. In pot plants John S. Doig showed strongly, winning not only for specimens, but having also the best of three fine groups of chrysanthemums and foliage plants arranged for effect. T. J. Johnston & Co. won for the best basket of chrysanthemums with a charming arrangement of pink; Eugene McCarron was second.

T. J. Johnston & Co. showed, not for competition, a splendid lot of baskets of roses, foliage plants and chrysanthemums. A splendid collection of pot chrysanthemums and foliage plants was staged from the Rhode Island hospital.

G. Cornelius Hartstra, gardener for Fred S. Davis, Pawtucket, had a delightful group, which included some fine standard fuchsias, begonias, cactiums and chrysanthemums.

Douglas Eccleston, superintendent for A. C. Burrage, Beverly Farms, Mass., staged a handsome group of choice orchids, which proved a center of great attraction to the crowds of visitors.

Munro's Greenhouses and John S. Doig had excellent displays of cut roses, and, showing the extreme mildness of the season, up to November 12 there were excellent lots of both dahlias and gladioli staged.

L. F. Kinney, of Kingston, R. I., had a large group of rhododendrons, junipers and other evergreens. R. & J. Farquhar & Co., of Boston, showed numerous choice evergreens, specializing in Picea albertiana, Juniperus virginialis and its golden form; also single and pompon chrysanthemums, palms, etc. C. S. Strout, Biddeford, Me., showed grand vases of the popular carnation Maine Sunshine, also Rosalind, Improved Ward and White Delight.

In addition to flowers and plants, there were large displays of fruits and vegetables and, with free admission, many thousands of visitors attended a show which was one of the most extensive and interesting ever held in Providence. W. N. Craig, Brookline, Mass., judged the horticultural section.

LIME ON LONGIFLORUM BULBS.

I find on digging some longiflorum bulbs in my field that some of them have started to rot at the base. There are many angleworms in the soil and on some of the bulbs I found small winged worms with many legs on their bodies. Could I rid the soil of these worms by using lime? Would lime hurt the bulbs?

H. C. O.—Cal.

Lime will not hurt the lily bulbs and will help to keep worms away. In replanting the lilies, lay them in a little cushion of sharp sand and scatter this sand over them to fill the vacant spaces between the scales. Probably the cause of the rot was that the ground was too damp and sour. Lilies of nearly all varieties need good drainage, and all garden lilies must have it.

DISEASED PRIMROSES.

I am sending you a few leaves from my primroses, which are affected with some disease which I cannot control. Please tell me what the trouble is. I have tried spraying with nicotine and smoking with tobacco stems, but to no avail.

F. G. C.—O.

Some of the leaves show traces of sun scalding, while others clearly have disease. Fumigation will be of no value in fighting disease; neither will nicotine spraying, although these methods are effective against insect pests. Give the plants a spraying of Bordeaux mixture or Fungine, both of which are good fungicides. Do this in the evening and repeat ten days later. Give the plants a little shade during the heat of the day.

WHAT THE LEADERS IN THE TRADE ARE DOING

HOUSING PLANTS.

During Winter Months.

There is perhaps no single feature connected with the florists' business that proves more unsatisfactory to all concerned than the housing and care of house plants during winter. I am sure that everyone who reads this article can recall some unpleasant experience connected with this part of the business. There are many who will not handle this class of business under any circumstances; they have simply made a rule not to do it, and live up to that rule. This sometimes means that they incur the ill will of a good customer and in many cases lose that customer. But their argument, which is a good one, is that it is a fifty-fifty chance that they would have lost the customer anyhow, even though they had cared for the plants through an entire winter, if, when spring came, they had not a much better plant to return than was received in the fall. In fact, I know of numerous cases, involving a good customer, when a perfect plant was substituted for a half-dead, scrawny-looking specimen when the boarders were called for in the spring. This is one of the modes of business that have been practiced by florists that has helped to keep the trade where it is in the eyes of the public.

Taking Chances.

In these days when we hear so much of quarantine and its strict enforcement, do we ever stop to think of the chances we are taking when we take a palm or a Boston fern that has been exposed to all sorts of conditions into a house of healthy stock? Who can tell what pests we are importing into our houses and the amount of trouble they will cause? Yet, in nine cases out of ten, it is because the plant is sick and not presentable in the house that it is sent to the florist, with the idea that in a few months it will be returned a better and finer specimen. I have seen plants sent to a florist that were just covered with scale and mealy bug. The first thing the florist was required to do for his own protection was to clean them. Now, the point I wish to impress is this: You are caring for a sick plant; does your charge warrant you to render this professional service, or should you charge extra for it? You will say that if you charged for every little thing, customers would soon realize that it would be cheaper to throw their old plants away and buy new ones. And that is just what you want them to realize, for this is a fact, for the old plant under the most favorable conditions and care will never again be a perfect plant. But the point for the florist to look at during the high cost of labor is that you are paying for every five minutes spent upon that plant.

Labor Charges.

After over forty years' connection with the florists' business, I do not believe that there is another industry in the world today in which so little attention is paid to labor. Did you ever stop to think that if something goes wrong with the plumbing system in your home and you call a plumber, he charges from the time he leaves his shop until he gets back, and they are not pikers when it comes to charging. But the point is, who would expect them to do otherwise just because you happened to be a good customer? The public is educated to plumbers' charges, as they are to other mechanics' charges. What is the reason for this? Well, there is a reason and one that we, as a trade, have to face. The mechanics were paying mechanics' wages when the florists were getting well trained men for anywhere from $10 to $25 and board per month. In other words, the mechanic was obliged to be careful in his charge for every item of labor.

How many are there reading this article who cannot remember the time when a customer came to your range and bought an order of plants and you were only too glad to hook up a horse and send a man to plant them? Your man's labor was never counted, but could you, with the high cost of labor and gasoline, afford to do that today?

Figure Cost.

But to get back to housing plants over winter. It was my privilege to be in a company of florists recently when this question was discussed and it was most interesting. One man, who has been most successful as a grower, said that he thought seriously of inaugurating a "Bertillon system" in his business; that is, to take a photograph of the plant when it was received and, if there was any question, produce this when the plant was called for. But there was a man in that company who is a statistician; he knows the cost of production of everything on his place; he has the housing of plants figured down to a daily rate. I shall just use one illustration: For plants in 6-inch or 8-inch pots, the charge is 2½ and 3 cents per day for the number of days they are in his charge, payable monthly. This is for space and ordinary care; all other charges, such as repotting, pruning, etc., are extra. This man says that he has no trouble and at these figures it pays. Tate.

PENN'S THANKSGIVING AD.

Thanksgiving day has a stronger appeal in New England than in any other part of the United States, for not far from Boston was the first Thanksgiving day celebrated, 299 years ago next Thursday. Perhaps there is more sentiment attached to the holiday in that section on that account and perhaps, as a consequence, more flowers are sold there for the day than are sold elsewhere. Or perhaps the sale of flowers at Thanksgiving is the result of forceful advertising, in quality and quantity, by florists there.

An example of it is reproduced on page 22, that of Penn the Florist. This advertisement is being run in the Boston newspapers this month. The space devoted to Thanksgiving day advertising by Penn is greater this year than ever before. The day has been a good one from a florist's point of view in past years, but Henry Penn thinks it may be made a better one.

SCHILLER HOLDS OPENING.

Friday and Saturday, November 12 and 13, the big conservatory just completed at the north side store of Schiller the Florist, at Broadway and Kenmore avenue, Chicago, was formally opened to the public. The occasion was made a notable one in the busy Wilson avenue district. An orchestra played during the afternoons and evenings and refreshments were served to visitors. Each fair guest was presented with a bunch of violets to wear.

The conservatory, which fills the space formerly occupied by the greenhouses, between the flower store on the acute-angled corner and the neighboring building, was constructed by the American Greenhouse Mfg. Co. At the same time, the store was altered to make some improvements. The total cost was in the neighborhood of $30,000, according to General Manager George Asmus.

For the opening the store was filled with a big display of fine cut blooms, including not only all the staple lines but also some novelties to interest visitors. In the conservatory was an exceedingly extensive array of chrysanthemum and foliage plants of all descriptions, for the structure requires a large outlay to fill its ample proportions.

The conservatory covers an odd-shaped piece of ground, about fifty feet wide at one end and eighty feet at the other. Since the ends are not parallel, the length of the greenhouse is sixty feet on Broadway and ninety-five feet on Kenmore. The problem of covering this odd piece of ground was solved by making a double-decked greenhouse, with a portion of the roof flat and a smaller greenhouse erected on top of this flat portion. The sides of the house are twelve feet in height, and from the ground to the peak of the roof is thirty-two feet. Eight main columns support the center and seven columns support the sides between the center and the wall. The building has a red cement floor. It is heated by hot water. The Broadway side is of plate glass and the roof is  $\frac{3}{8}$ -inch ribbed glass. A large plate glass partition divides the store from the greenhouse and allows a view from end to end of 120 feet. It is planned to further beautify the conservatory with rockwork, waterfalls, fountains and bird cages.

FUNERAL DELIVERY VIA AIR.

To make haste in the delivery of flowers to Marseilles, Ill., for the military funeral of Private George Adler, who died in Luxemburg in the fall of 1918, W. H. Lohr, at Ottawa, Ill., engaged an aeroplane to take himself and several large bouquets to the funeral. Chrysanthemums were dropped from the plane along the pathway of the funeral and on the grave.

MORE MEDALS

E. G. HILL HONORED.

Columbia Rose Wins Medals.

Columbia, the prize rose of E. G. Hill, Richmond, Ind., won for Mr. Hill fresh laurels November 9 at the range of the Joseph H. Hill Co., Richmond, when he was formally presented two gold medals, one from the American Rose Society and one from the city of Portland, Ore., and also a bronze certificate, the gift of the city of Portland.

All the awards were based on the result of a 3-year competition for roses submitted for tests in the International Rose Test Garden at Portland. In this competition there were entered roses produced in the United States, England, France, Canada, Australia and other countries.

The presentation of the medals and the bronze certificate took place at noon Tuesday, November 9, in the presence of Mr. Hill's family and about 100 members of the Richmond Rotary Club. Following the presentation address by Jesse A. Currey, representing the city of Portland, and a response by Mr. Hill, a dinner was served in the potting house.

On the tables were large bunches of Columbia rose, and the color scheme of the other decorations was largely carried out in the pink shade of the Columbia.

Letters of Congratulation.

After Mr. Hill had been presented with the medals and the bronze certificate, which is framed to be used as a desk ornament, Mr. Currey read letters addressed to Mr. Hill and written by Robert Pyle, president of the American Rose Society; H. J. Blaessing, president of the Portland Rose Society; George L. Baker, mayor of Portland; S. E. Pier, commissioner of finance and parks, Portland, and C. P. Keyser, superintendent of parks, Portland. Mayor Baker's letter follows:

Permit me to offer my congratulations on your having been awarded a gold medal for the best rose tested in Portland's International Rose Test Garden in the years 1918 and 1919.

You, as a rose grower, of course appreciate a stamp of merit from the test garden of the City of Roses, as perhaps few people do at this early period in the history of the garden. As time goes on and other awards are made, the value of the medal you received will be greatly enhanced.

Rotarian Rose.

Mr. Currey stated that while walking through the greenhouses of Fred Lemon, of Richmond, a son-in-law of Mr. Hill, he had discovered a new red rose, produced by Mr. Lemon, which he regarded as one of the most beautiful blooms he had ever seen. Learning that the new rose had not been named, he requested Mr. Lemon's permission to bestow a name on the bloom, which request was granted. In the presence of those who had gathered to honor Mr. Hill Tuesday, Mr. Currey announced that the new rose had been christened the Rotarian, which announcement brought great applause from the assembled Rotarians.

Florists at Presentation.

Alexander Montgomery, of Hadley, Mass., graced the occasion with his kind and lovable personality and gave the guests a pleasing after-dinner talk.

Gustave Mickley, the well-known Cincinnati florist, arranged the decorations, which called forth much favorable comment, in the potting house of the Joseph H. Hill Co.

Chas. E. Critchell, of Cincinnati; E. H. Mann, F. H. Lemon and George R. Gause, of Richmond, were among other florists present.

The Fox Motion Picture Corporation took views of the presentation and of the greenhouses for use in current film news.

VIOLET GROWER ADVERTISES.

Not often do flower growers make use of printers' ink to sell their blooms. Usually they are content with established connections with wholesale houses in the urban centers for their outlet. Only a few find occasion to break into print to sell their stock, most frequently in the trade press, and still fewer resort to direct mail methods.

From such a class of nonadvertisers one would therefore not expect the same effectiveness, when one of them does indulge in publicity, as from the other branches of the trade more experienced in that field. Nevertheless, Elmer Coon, head of the Rhinebeck Floral Co., at Rhinebeck, N. Y., has sent out a good piece of direct-mail advertising in search of orders for double violets for this season. It is in the form of a single large sheet, 17x18 inches, which folds conveniently to fit a No. 10 envelope. The statement of prices, the presentation of sales arguments and the detachable order blank in one corner all have been prepared to hit the nail on the head and get the recipient's order with the greatest ease. Clearness and simplicity mark the entire copy.

Mr. Coon has been growing violets at Rhinebeck for nearly twenty years. That he has won a place for himself in that community is attested by the fact that he is president of the board of education and a director of the local savings bank.

Mr. Coon's advertising sense is evident from the opening of his circulars, calling attention to Penn the Florist's featuring of violets. This reads: "Do you know that real fresh violets are your biggest builders of reputation? What does Penn of Boston feature throughout the year? Isn't it 'Strictly Fresh Violets'? Read below how you can do the same thing."

MUMS CHANGE COLOR.

I noticed an article in The Review for October 28 under the heading "Ever Hear of This?" which complained that bronze mums were turning white. Last spring I ordered some Yellow King Humbert cannas for some customers and I had about twelve left over, which I planted. They came up in fine style, but some had particolored green and red leaves; one root produced two stalks, one red and one green; one stalk bore two flower heads, one red and one yellow, and some of the others had part of the flower red and part yellow. These colors were not blotched, but solid or shaded. I am going to save all the roots for next year. H. W. Peterson.

THE BEST CUCUMBER.

What variety of cucumber is the most profitable to force in a greenhouse and when should the crop be started? Any information you can give us on this subject will be greatly appreciated.

J. A. R.—Wis.

White Spine is the variety principally grown under glass. Sometimes it has another name because a seed house has made a selection from the original variety. Practically every seedsman catering to the market gardeners' trade offers a carefully selected strain of White Spine cucumber for forcing. H. O.

SECRETARY OF SIX

IMBUED with an idea and gifted with genius for the management of business by modern methods, Paul E. Weiss, of Maywood, Ill., has become known far and near as the trade's greatest little secretary. Jokingly referred to by his friends as the "Syndicate," he includes in his secretarial duties record-keeping for four greenhouse corporations, of which he also is the directing head, a coal company and a big wholesale cut flower house.

No doubt other florists are familiar with the law of diminishing return, mostly, perhaps, with the manifestation rather than the theory; but Mr. Weiss is probably the only grower who has thought out and applied a definite method of defeating the operation of this well known rule of economics.

For the benefit of those whose student days are in the distant past, here is the law of diminishing return as stated by Webster: "The observed fact or law that in any given stage of the arts an increase of labor or capital applied beyond a certain point in the cultivation of land causes a less than proportionate increase in the produce raised from a given area." Watching the operation of this law in the greenhouse business, Mr. Weiss came to the conclusion that there comes a time at which it is more profitable to start a separate establishment than to add to the glass of one already in operation.

Vital Decisions.

Just where that "certain point" is, must always be more or less a matter of opinion and it is apparent that Mr. Weiss revises his own ideas on the subject, as he is at present adding an L. & B. house 70x400 to the first range in his string. Apparently he now considers 200,000 to 250,000 feet about the right unit for operation to the best advantage.

The first range of glass Mr. Weiss built was only 10,000 feet. It was at Maywood, where he grew carnations and sweet peas from 1911 to 1913. In the latter year he sold this place and organized the Weiss-Meyer Co., his associates being his father, F. H. Weiss, and Henry Meyer. As a start 50,000 feet of glass was erected at Maywood, devoted entirely to American Beauty.

Discarding American Beauty.

But the Beauty already was past its zenith and as more glass was added hybrid teas were tried, with such good success that Beauty was dropped in 1917 and the range, which will cover 150,000 square feet of ground when the new house is up, is planted exclusively to Columbia and Premier. Mr. Weiss is secretary of the corporation and manager of its business.

Mr. Weiss was one of the first to recognize that the approaching end of the war would be the signal to go ahead with plans for the development of the business. Associating with himself some half dozen other well known florists, he organized the $200,000 corporation now known as the Premier Rose Gardens, becoming secretary and general manager. David Lundin is the resident manager at the greenhouses, which were erected on a 20-acre tract just north of Maywood, on the Soo Line railroad. Four iron-frame ridge-and-furrow houses, 36x400, were erected in the early part of 1919. In 1920 the range was doubled by the erection of the two big detached steel-framers shown in the foreground of the illustration on page 26. There are only two varieties of roses grown in this range. They are Premier and Milady.

By the time the Premier Rose Gardens were in operation it had become easier to buy than to build—cheaper and, of course, much quicker. So when the majority interest in the Batavia Greenhouse Co., at Batavia, Ill., was offered, Mr. Weiss and some of his associates took it up, Mr. Weiss again becoming secretary and general manager. Gottlieb Schott, also a stockholder, remained as resident manager. The range, which consisted of a dozen good-sized greenhouses in miscellaneous crops, was overhauled and put in first-class condition, the crops being gradually worked over to the newer varieties of roses.

In these three ranges, all within fourteen to thirty miles of Chicago, there are only three varieties of roses, Columbia, Premier and Milady, not counting some of the newer sorts, like Butterfly, planted only in quantity for trial.

Basis of Action.

Mr. Weiss is a close student of the market and a careful accountant. There is nothing hit-or-miss about his method. He is a willing listener as well as a keen observer, but it is on figures that he bases his action. He knows what it costs to run his places and to produce flowers of various grades and varieties. He limits his varieties because he knows those varieties pay him best and he grows good stock because he knows it is the only kind on which a substantial business can be built and maintained.

As a student of

Paul E. Weiss.

Premier Rose Gardens, Maywood, Ill.

the market Mr. Weiss early came to appreciate that a well balanced supply is essential for the sale to best advantage of each item in that supply. So he joined with some of those associated with his other enterprises and bought one of Joseph Hill's places at Richmond, where carnations are grown. The Richmond Greenhouse Co. was organized. W. J. Keimel is president, Mr. Weiss again becoming secretary and general manager. The resident manager is Lawrence Lahmann. There are 75,000 feet of glass in excellent condition, among the varieties being the largest block of Dörner's Laddie that has ever been worked up.

Organizing a Coal Company.

But these are not by any means the total of this young man's activities, though they would be plenty for one less skilled as a manager. Coal always is near to the first place in a grower's thoughts and another energetic young man in Maywood had a thorough knowledge of the coal business through years of activity in it. He had sold fuel to so many growers that when one of them spoke of "the coal man" the chances were good they meant George F. Stahmer. So these two joined forces in organizing the Fort Dearborn Coal Co. Mr. Stahmer became president and manager and Mr. Weiss, from force of habit, assumed the secretarial duties.

And then, only a few weeks ago the E. C. Amling Co., which handles all the cut flowers produced by the companies with which Mr. Weiss is associated, needed to enlarge its staff of officers, so what could be more natural than that Mr. Weiss should be drafted for the job of keeping the stockholders' minutes-book and the seal? Six secretaryships! Count them. Six!

Of a Family of Florists.

It may be that many of those who have watched the recent rapid development of the Weiss corporations do not appreciate that he comes of a family always up and doing. Mr. Weiss was born in Milwaukee, August 7, 1889. His mother was one of the Amling girls, a sister of E. C. Amling, of Albert F. Amling and of the late W. H. Amling. That ties him up pretty closely with some of the largest florists' interests in the middle west, not to mention his own. In the schools of Milwaukee the lad received a better than average education. His first job was as messenger on the Board of Trade there, then in a bank, and at 20 he was private secretary to a banking official. It was a business training that was to be of great value. Many visits were paid to his uncles' places at Maywood and Chicago and two years were spent in an apprenticeship in the greenhouses before he made the start for himself, in 1911.

Always progressive, Mr. Weiss is a great believer in advertising flowers. He was one of the first to advocate the cooperative plan of trade publicity and all the companies with which he is associated are members of the Allied Florists' Association of Illinois. Mr. Weiss himself is an active worker in many trade organizations and is an ardent supporter of the national publicity campaign. Note the "Say It with Flowers" signboard facing the highway in the Premier Rose Gardens picture. He is just completing a term as treasurer of the Chicago Florists' Club, is a member of the National Growers' Association, the S. A. F. and others.

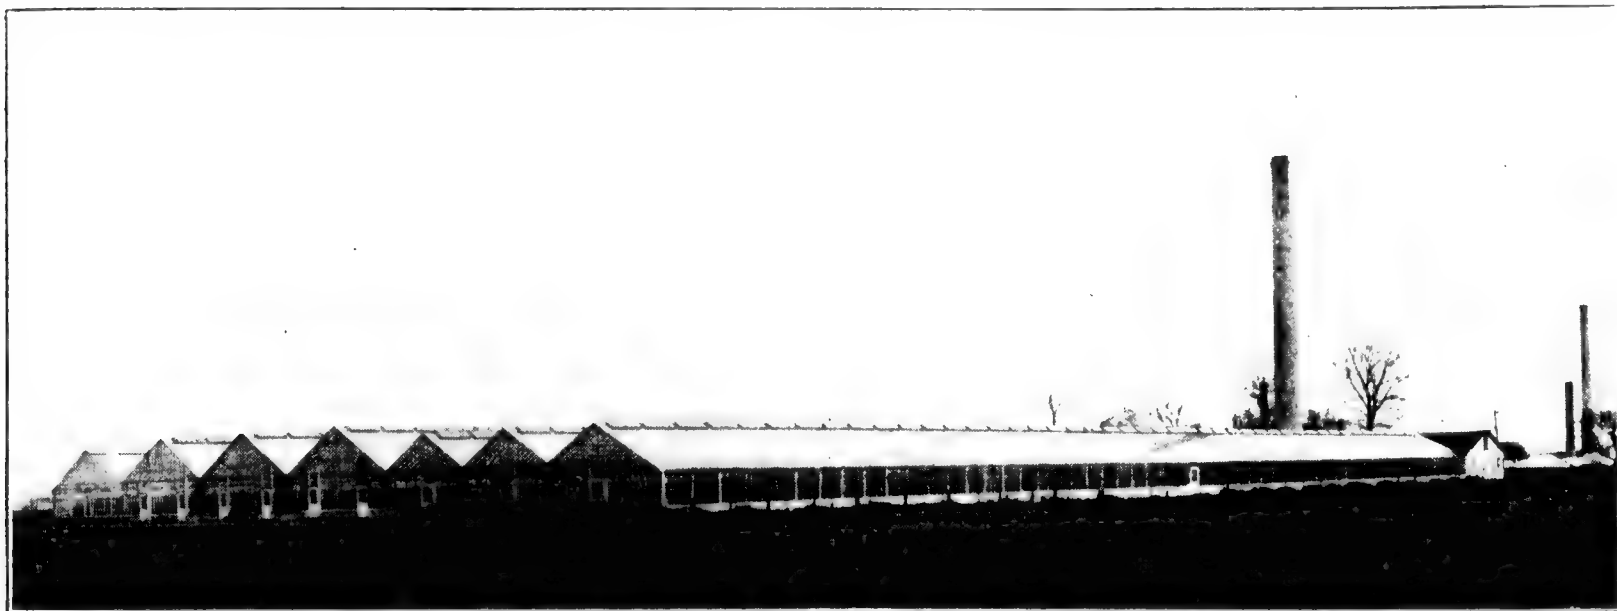

At 31 Mr. Weiss carries the duties of the secretaryship of six corporations, of four of which he also is general manager, but he has time for ideal home life. He and Mrs. Weiss have three children, a boy and twin girls. Their home as well as the general office of the four greenhouse companies is on the grounds of the Weiss-Meyer Co., at Maywood.

GOODS TO BE "DELIVERED."

A decision of the Court of Appeals at Springfield, Mo., probably accords with common understanding in holding that a contract to sell goods "delivered" requires the seller to transport them to the town or city where the buyer lives and not merely to put them on board cars at the place where the shipment originates. This case is known as Mayo vs. J. L. Price Brokerage Co., 218 Southwestern Reporter, 932.

Richmond Greenhouse Co., Richmond, Ind.

The court also aligns itself with other judicial authorities by reaffirming the rule of law that damages assessed for nondelivery of goods contracted to be sold are to be measured by the excess of the market value of the goods at the contract time and place for delivery above the contract price. #### COMMITTEE ON QUARANTINE.

Makes Preliminary Report.

The executive committee appointed at the conference of representatives of horticultural societies held June 15, 1920, at the American Museum of Natural History, New York, to consider the situation in regard to Quarantine No. 37, has made its preliminary report in the form of a leaflet entitled, "An Appeal to Every Friend of American Horticulture."

After citing the various steps leading up to the issuing of Quarantine No. 37, the report puts the situation briefly as follows: "Designed for the admirable purpose of protecting the United States against the admission of additional insects and diseases injurious to plant life, the regulations promulgated from time to time under the quarantine have in effect acted as an embargo, preventing the importation of any plants or seeds except those permitted by narrow and seemingly arbitrary rulings. Further, permits to import under these regulations have been granted or refused in such fashion as to make the Federal Horticultural Board the controller of horticultural research and commerce in a way hard to square with the necessities of an adequate quarantine."

Examples of Obstacles.

The report illustrates this as follows:

Under these regulations all importations of plant material, whether received at Boston or New Orleans or New York or San Francisco, must first go to Washington for examination and fumigation, being then forwarded to the consignee at his expense, and the delays incident to this procedure and the treatment to which the plants are subjected have in some cases injured them and in some cases completely killed them.

While it is true that the Federal Horticultural Board theoretically will issue a permit to anyone for the importation of plants he may desire, it is also sadly true that in certain cases either such permits have been arbitrarily denied or so long delayed that the opportunity has passed. It is also a fact that the requirement of a bond to follow the importations for two years operates as an effective embargo to plant importation by amateurs.

The official acting for the Federal Horticultural Board determines the quality of any plant which in his wisdom it is proper to admit for propagation purposes, and there seems to be no logical basis for his determination.

The report states that "few realize that the present quarantine was issued after the bureau of plant industry, February 26, 1918, had submitted to the Department of Agriculture a report in which it was stated that in order to protect the country against dangerous plant pests and diseases the time seemed to be at hand for the inauguration of a policy that would gradually result in the exclusion of all foreign nursery and florists' stock."

Sentiment of Conference.

The report points out that, individual attempts to correct the faults of the quarantine having failed, the conference referred to at the beginning of this article was called, at which forty-five societies were represented, including practically all those interested in horticultural advancement. The committee says:

The general sentiment of the meeting was in favor of an adequate and reasonable quarantine, but strongly opposed to inequitable regulations, and to the practical imposition of an embargo against plants from abroad. The discussion showed great respect for the probity of the Federal Horticultural Board, but it was believed that this board did not adequately realize either the ultimate result of the quarantine as enforced or the fact that the quarantine was in effect an embargo rather than a quarantine.

The outcome of this meeting was the appointment of a general committee, consisting largely of private individuals interested only as amateur horticulturists, which appointed a small executive committee to consider the situation and to formulate a report and a definite plan of action.

America Needs Foreign Plants.

The committee takes the stand that "it is important to prevent the importation into his country of insects and diseases injurious to vegetation." It believes that "necessary and reasonable regulations will be obeyed and supported by all patriotic citizens, but that if such regulations prove, in practice, to be drastic, unreasonable and not actually essential to the end in view, and definitely damaging to the progress of horticulture in America, they should be modified."

After a comparison of horticulture in America with its more advanced development in Europe and Asia, the report continues, "With the contemplated total embargo in force, it would never again be possible to secure for the United States any newly discovered, rare, interesting, valuable exotic fruit or ornamental plants, whether species or hybrids."

Committee's Proposals.

The proposals of the committee are contained in the following extract from the report:

It should not be difficult to show the necessity for modifying a quarantine which prevents the importation in any quantity of plants with sand or soil on their roots, no matter how carefully they have been inspected, fumigated and treated abroad, and yet which takes no account of shiploads of soil brought in as ballast from any port, tropical or otherwise, regardless of the fact that this soil is never inspected, fumigated or treated, and may contain insects and germs of diseases dangerous to human beings or plants.

If, as we believe is the fact, a sane and efficient quarantine is desirable, the officials of the government owe the people a whole duty and not a half duty. A quarantine defined by carefully studied law and not by incidental official regulations established under a broad law, protecting not merely through the exclusion of incidental plants but through the exclusion or treatment of other disease and insect-bearing media, would, if properly proposed, be supported by the people. If the necessity is shown, we believe that the Federal Horticultural Board, or some other executive agency, will be provided with funds to establish quarantine stations at enough ports of entry adequately to protect the nation and to serve at the same time the proper desires and convenience of its citizens. It is our confident belief that well equipped and carefully administered quarantine stations should be established at a certain number of ports of entry, such, for example, as San Francisco, Seattle, New York, New Orleans and Boston. Unless some such action is taken, the extension of the present system of exclusion by regulation under a blanket law will undoubtedly result in the total embargo against further horticultural progress in the United States which the report of the bureau of plant industry above referred to seems to have had in mind.

Time has been lost and animosities engendered, and valuable imported plants and seeds have been destroyed since the quarantine became effective, because no well prepared and adequate presentation of the facts has been made to the officials of the Department of Agriculture, and it is no reflection on those officials to propose for them assistance in the gaining of information, which must be gathered slowly, carefully, and at different times and places, to show the facts and the effects concerning this plant-quarantine which is so dangerously near to plant-exclusion.

It is, therefore, the proposal of this committee to send a capable investigator, furnished with all requisite entomological, pathological and other expert assistance, wherever it may be necessary to gain information, interview individuals, compare notes and obtain statements and affidavits, upon which the facts can be adequately presented to the federal authorities at Washington.

It is the purpose of this committee, when such information has been gathered and when the law under which quarantine regulations have been promulgated has been carefully studied in connection with the situation, to arrange for such argument and presentation, in the belief that there should result a modification in some respects, and an extension in others, of the quarantine regulations, tending to place horticulture once again on a firm footing with relation to the rest of the known world, and to make it possible for any citizen of the United States, willing to provide the necessary safeguards, to import such plants as he may reasonably require.

To accomplish the objects of the committee, the Massachusetts Horticultural Society, the Horticultural Society of New York and the Pennsylvania Horticultural Society have made substantial subscriptions, believing that those interested will provide the considerable additional amount required.

"It is confidently believed," says the report, "that those who are opposed to a Chinese wall plant policy for America, who think that we are entitled to other plants which may be discovered anywhere as valuable to us as have been the apple, the lilac, the potato and countless other familiar but exotic plants in use today, will aid the work of this committee in contributions and in effort."

Subscriptions and Information Wanted.

Subscriptions should be sent to the treasurer of the committee, T. A. Havemeyer, 50 Broad street, New York. Communications and information may be sent to any member of the committee or to its secretary and attorney, Herbert W. Schlaffhorst, care of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society, 300 Massachusetts avenue, Boston, Mass.

FRENCH FLOWER FESTIVAL.

Unlike American Shows.

The Paris fall flower show, which was held in the Jardin d'Acclimatation, a large public greenhouse in the Bois de Boulogne, was primarily a chrysanthemum show, but was also advertised as a horticultural show, including fruits, vegetables and trees. The show, held from October 27 to November 5, was an event of the social season.

I was somewhat disappointed in the show, from a florists' point of view, especially because I believed the exhibitions would be equal to the retail florists' show rooms. The retail florist simply was not in it; it was a growers' show from beginning to end. The ribbon man, the basket man, the supply man, seemed not to exist.

Exhibits in Ground.

The flower show proper was laid out as any garden might be, with a little winding stream of water playing through the center of the exhibition. Probably the reason for my disappointment was because most of the flowers were placed in the ground, and seeing specimen mums in such a way made me overlook their real beauty. Mums, roses, carnations and plants all were practically planted in the earth.

For chrysanthemums, Mrs. Maurice Martin, of Champigny sur Marne, won the first grand prize of honor. Jules Ragot won a gold medal for his mums, and Albert Larquet, a private gardener, also won a gold medal for mums. Leveque & Sons, large displayers of mums, roses and carnations, won a gold medal. Their sport carnations seemed fine.

Mr. Debau, of Lyons, displayed several varieties of American carnations.

Arthur Billard won a gold medal for a superb collection of begonias, having over thirty-six varieties.

Aubert-Maille, of Tours, won the gold medal for a fine collection of cyclamens.

Millet & Sons won prizes for a fine showing of single dahlias. These seemed to be unusually fine and in great variety.

New French Mums.

Vilmorin-Andrieux & Co., of Paris, had the largest display of mums, covering more ground than any other exhibitor. They, alone, showed the new mums of the season. The best one was Riquet a la Houffe, a lavender. Others were Peau d'Ane and Chat Botte, two light pinks; Petit Poucet and Chaperon Rouge, both bronzes, and Clendrilla, a nice white. Their feature display was a pyramid arrangement of 300 or 400 mums in one tub and the same in pompons.

Turner Only American.

The best looking mums in the show were Rigby, a big yellow, and Mrs. Gilbert Drabble, a big white. Both of these resemble our William Turner, which, by the way, was the only known American mum displayed. The African, a big bronze, was also well displayed. Of the pompons, Orchard Tints, a yellow flower, seemed to be the best.

I must say a few words on the fruits displayed, for they were a feature. Fruit growing is one of the things a Frenchman does well. Pears, some weighing over two and one-half pounds, sell at 900 francs ($60) per hundred and 100 bunches of grapes sell at 750 francs. This gives some conception of what fruit is worth when well grown. There were displays of home-canned or bottled fruits and vegetables, which interested the housewife.

Probably the most interesting of the side shows was an exhibition of several hundred paintings in oil and water color of fruit and flower scenes. These were for sale, and attracted much attention among the flower and the picture lovers.

Salesmen Outside.

Outside of the exhibition house was a rendezvous for the side-line men. Garden pottery, statuary, summer houses, furniture and greenhouse material were exhibited.

As there was no night session, about 5 o'clock the visitors were ready to go home, and as I, a foreigner, look back at the scene when thousands of people were making their exhibit, I wonder whether I am now as disappointed as I first was, because, after all, it is so new, so different from what we have in America.

MUM SOCIETY MEETS

WASHINGTON FLOWER SHOW.

Largely Local.

The national capital chrysanthemum show was staged November 10 to 14 by the florists of Washington, under the auspices of the Chrysanthemum Society of America, at the Old Masonic Temple. It contained as fine a collection of flowers as has been seen in the national capital. Though it compared favorably with flower shows staged in the past in other parts of the country, it was not on so large a scale.

A feature of the show was a large anteroom which was decorated as an Italian garden, with a rustic bridge over an artificial pond and artificial pond lilies. "Say It with Flowers," in letters made of small, yellow pompons, was displayed on a background of southern sheet moss. An electric fountain and a Red Cross tent completed the garden. Music was furnished during the afternoon and evening sessions of the show, and Friday night, November 12, the attendance reached its height when a ball was given.

The show was opened November 10, the guest of honor being Secretary of Agriculture Meredith, who made a brief address, largely a résumé of the work of the bureau of plant industry in coöperation with florists. The commissioners of the District of Columbia and other local officials were also guests.

Decorative Displays.

There were seven decorative exhibits, which were as follows: Z. D. Blackistone, a bridal aisle of white chrysanthemums and a shower bouquet of pompons and Sweetheart roses; Joseph Manda Co., West Orange, N. J., booth decorated with cypripediums; George C. Shaffer, Washington, dinner table of orchids and chrysanthemums; Mrs. Geo. H. Cooke, Washington, dinner table of palms, oak leaves and chrysanthemums; Gude Bros. Co., Washington, dinner table, with electric fountain as centerpiece, of anthurium, roses, ferns and chrysanthemums; Henry A. Dreer, Inc., Philadelphia, Pa., booth decorated with foliage plants; Dupont Flower Shop, Washington, mantel and a picture and frame made of yellow chrysanthemums, violets and other flowers.

A chrysanthemum, a huge yellow bloom, was named for Mrs. Warren G. Harding; another, a white, was named for President-elect Harding; one for Mrs. Calvin Coolidge, and a bronze for Vice-President-elect Coolidge.

Winners of Exhibits.

There were eighty-eight classes in the regular exhibits. Prizes were awarded as follows:

Twenty-four blooms, one variety, long stems—Charles H. Totty, first; Gude Bros. Co., second.
Twenty-four blooms, twenty-four distinct varieties, one bloom of each, long stem—Charles H. Totty, first; Gude Bros. Co., second.

Eighteen blooms in six varieties, three flowers of each—Gude Bros. Co., first.

Eighteen blooms in three varieties, six flowers of each—Gude Bros. Co., first.

First prizes for display of ten blooms in various colors were awarded as follows: White, Gude Bros. Co.; pink, Washington Floral Co.; yellow, Gude Bros. Co.; crimson, Theodore Diedrich; bronze, Elmer D. Smith Co., Adrian, Mich; in variety, Gude Bros. Co.

Gude Bros. Co. took first place in the classes calling for six blooms each of white, pink, yellow and bronze.

First prizes for six blooms of the Japanese anemone type were won by Charles H. Totty in the classes calling for white, yellow, pink and bronze.

Firsts for vases of single varieties containing ten sprays were awarded as follows: White, Charles H. Totty; pink, Gude Bros. Co.; yellow, Charles H. Totty.

Other chrysanthemum awards were:

Vase of anemone-flowered varieties—Charles H. Totty, first.

Vase of hairy and plumed varieties—Charles H. Totty, first.

Vase of single varieties—Charles H. Totty, first.

Best collection of twenty vases—Chas. H. Totty, first.

Best collection of pompons, ten vases—Charles H. Totty, first.

Twelve blooms, one variety, long stems—Mrs. E. B. McLean, Washington, D. C., first.

Twelve blooms, in twelve distinct varieties, one bloom of each, long stem—Mrs. C. J. Bell, Washington, D. C., first.

Roses and Carnations.

For the best twelve blooms of American Beauty, Gude Bros. Co. took first prize.

Displays of twenty-five blooms of roses were judged as follows: Pink, Charles H. Totty, first, and Gude Bros. Co., second; white, Gude Bros. Co., second; crimson, Gude Bros. Co., first; any other color, Charles H. Totty, first, and Gude Bros. Co., second.

First place in displays of fifteen blooms in yellow and crimson was taken by Mrs. E. B. McLean.

In carnations the best vase containing twenty-five blooms was staged by the Washington Florist Co. Gude Bros. Co. was second. For the best three varieties, twelve blooms of each, Mrs. C. J. Bell was first. For the best vase of one variety, twelve blooms, Mrs. E. B. McLean was first.

Special Awards.

Certificates of merit were awarded as follows: Theodore Diedrich, for undis-seminated seedlings; Joseph Manda, for orchids; Industrial Home School, for chrysanthemums; Harry Lay, collection of ferns; Mrs. C. J. Bell and Mrs. E. B. McLean, for foliage and blooming plants.

Honorable mention for table and wedding decorations was given to the Dupont Flower Shop, Z. D. Blackistone, George C. Shaffer, Mrs. George H. Cooke, Gude Bros. Co. Henry A. Dreer,

S. S. Pennock.

(Newly Elected President of the Chrysanthemum Society of America.)

Inc., was given honorable mention for its collection of foliage plants.

Other special prizes were awarded as follows:

C. S. A. silver cup for the best seedling chrysanthemum not disseminated, six blooms, one variety on long stems—Baur & Steinkamp, Indianapolis, Ind.

C. S. A. silver cup for the best six vases single chrysanthemums, six varieties, twelve sprays, not less than eighteen inches long, to a vase—Charles H. Totty, Madison, N. J.

Lord & Burnham Co. prize for twelve blooms, twelve varieties of chrysanthemums on short stems—Charles H. Totty.

Naperville Nurseries gold medal for the best collection of seedling pompon chrysanthemums not disseminated; to be shown in separate vases, not less than three sprays to a vase or more than one vase of any variety—Charles H. Totty.

Hitchings & Co. silver cup for the best six vases pompon chrysanthemums, six varieties, twelve sprays, not less than eighteen inches long, to a vase—Charles H. Totty.

The judges were William Feast, Baltimore, Md., and A. B. Cartledge, Samuel S. Pennock and Alexander B. Scott, of Philadelphia.

The officers of the show were highly complimented on its success. They were F. H. Kramer, chairman of the executive committee; Z. D. Blackistone, vice-chairman; O. A. C. Oehmler, superintendent of exhibition. The executive committee consisted of: George V. Schultz, secretary; A. E. Gude, treasurer; hospitality, William F. Gude; finance, C. L. Jenkins; program, J. Harper Hetherington; entertainment, George C. Shaffer; private gardeners' exhibits, G. E. Anderson. T. O. M.

CHRYSANTHEMUM SOCIETY.

Meets at Washington.

The Chrysanthemum Society of America held its annual meeting at Washington, D. C., Thursday, November 11, in connection with the chrysanthemum show held there last week under its auspices.

The officers elected for the ensuing year were:

President—S. S. Pennock, Philadelphia.

Vice-president—N. J. Wietor, Chicago.

Secretary—Charles W. Johnson, Rockford, Ill.

Treasurer—Charles H. Totty, Madison, N. J.

In response to the invitation of the Chicago Florists' Club, it was decided that Chicago should be the next meeting place of the society. The meeting is scheduled for early in November, 1921, although the exact date is to be fixed later.

President's Address.

Thomas W. Head, who was unable to be present, sent his presidential address to be read at the meeting. In it he said:

"I exceedingly regret my inability to be with you at this convention, as I had looked forward with a great deal of interest to this meeting and had expected to take an active interest in the matters that are to come up, but having just recently changed my position, I find it impossible for me to get away.

"The exhibits that I have seen this fall have not been up to those of pre-war times. This is due to the fact that experienced labor has been hard to get and that many estates are still retrenching and have closed the greenhouses for the winter. The coal situation has had a little to do with it also; yet the public could be seen clamoring to get in to see these fine flowers, showing they were still as fond of them as ever. The scarcity of large blooms was noticeable. Visitors seemed to favor the medium-sized flowers as being much better to arrange for effect in their homes. But as long as we are supplied with such splendid novelties as C. H. Totty, T. W. Pockett, E. D. Smith and W. Wells have been giving us we may expect them to show these large flowers to let us see what perfection they have arrived at by their hard and zealous work in hybridizing.

Trying Times.

"This year has been a trying one for the proper development of the flowers, as the warm fall seemed to take the life out of them and made them useless for showing. It is a pleasure to see so many of the recent introductions doing so well with us, giving the introducer great encouragement in his work and also inciting new blood to the work, as there is a great field open in this line. Our worthy secretary, C. W. Johnson, has been working for several years along learn to produce, and 'Say It with Flowers' to the world."

Secretary's Report.

Secretary C. W. Johnson presented his report, which was as follows:

"The eighteenth annual meeting was held in conjunction with the annual fair of the American Institute of the City of New York at the Engineering building, New York. There was a creditable showing of fine blooms exhibited by the members of the society, consisting principally of the standard exhibition and commercial varieties, but few seedlings or new varieties. The lack of new seedlings at our exhibitions brings to the mind of experienced exhibitors the difference between the shows of today and those of former years, when the greatest interest was centered on the seedlings and novelties, and now that we can not depend on foreign importations to create this interest, it is a challenge to the members of the C. S. A. to demonstrate their ability along the lines of producing new varieties. There was a strong showing of the pompon and single varieties, which attracted the attention of the visitors, showing how popular these varieties are with the general public. The secretary was in attendance at the show and a report of the proceedings has been printed and mailed to all members of the society.

"Your secretary has noticed most particularly during the last year the falling off in the support the society is receiving from the private gardeners. This may be due to the conditions as they exist on private places following the war, but as the C. S. A. has drawn its strongest support from the ranks of the gardeners, we can ill afford to lose it.

Commercial Plantings Larger.

"The planting of chrysanthemums for commercial cut flower purposes is larger than ever this year, especially the pompon varieties, but up to the present time the demand has kept pace with the supply throughout a greater part of the country. In the eastern states the unusually fine weather for this time of year has advanced the flowering period of most of the varieties so that the season will be shortened considerably; otherwise the chrysanthemum grower has little to complain of.

"Owing to the increased cost of printing, everything connected with the secretary's office along the lines of stationery has been more expensive. Examining the committee's scoring sheets and the annual report cost more than in preceding years, but all of these items have been attended to as heretofore. The examining committees have continued to be efficient in their work in the judging of the new varieties submitted to them. The trade papers, as heretofore, generously published all notices sent to them from time to time during the year, for which we owe them a vote of thanks.

"Your secretary wishes to acknowledge the kindness of Elmer D. Smith in furnishing him with a complete list of varieties disseminated in 1919, which was a great help in getting up the annual report."

Treasurer's Report.

Following is the report of Charles H. Totty, treasurer of the Chrysanthemum these lines and his hard work has certainly been rewarded with excellent novelties that he has originated.

"There is still a growing demand for hardy flowering chrysanthemums, and this year has been favorable to test some of them out, but as yet the varieties to choose from are not plentiful. I think there is a great field open here, as so many of these flowers can be used in our borders for fall effect. I notice that many of the landscape architects are giving these flowers more attention and I myself have received numerous letters this year asking for a list of the really hardy mums for certain sections. So I hope we shall be able to improve on these as time goes by.

"It is to be regretted that the flowers have not been seen at the shows as before the war, but without the interest of the people who can afford to grow these fine flowers, how can we expect to keep the others interested or bring new enthusiasts into the field? This all helps to improve the gardeners' position by showing the public that it takes a man of experience and a man who loves his profession to produce excellent flowers. So it is up to us, one and all, to encourage these public exhibitions and advertise ourselves as well as our products, which we have spent so many years to

D. Blackstone, vice-president of the C. S. A., and other speakers.

LOOKING DOWN ON ARMACOST'S.

How do greenhouses look from above? Readers of The Review have seen many sorts of landscape from the aviator's view—photographs of razed towns and scarred battle fronts in France, the top view of their own cities, perhaps, and other rather usual pictures. But have they had opportunity to see how a range of greenhouses looks from high up in the air? That on this page, it is believed, is the first published view of a florist's establishment from an aeroplane. It shows the houses of Walter Armacost & Co., at Sawtelle, Cal., one of the largest ranges on the Pacific coast.

And, to add to its interest, this photograph was taken by a florist. He is well known as a high flyer—aeronautically speaking. H. Reeve Darling, of Los Angeles, has been interested in aerial craft since their inception. He frequently makes excursions over the Armacost houses and on a recent one he took the photograph here reproduced.

GROWING LILY OF THE VALLEY.

Will you kindly inform us how to grow lilies of the valley and whether the climatic condition of the state of Michigan is suited for the growing of them commercially? What kind of soil do they need? Should they be grown in the shade?

W. N.—Mich.

There is no good reason why you cannot grow lily of the valley successfully outdoors in your state. The plant is of comparatively easy culture and not fastidious as to soil. I find it succeeds especially well in a stiff soil to which considerable sand is added, but I know of others with quite light soil who grow it successfully. To produce good pips and large spikes, it is necessary to enrich the soil well with rotted manure and a top-dressing of this on the beds each fall makes a noticeable difference in them.

Plant in rows eighteen inches apart, setting individual pips five to six inches apart. Planting is best if done in the fall, giving the beds a mulch of some light material when the soil becomes frozen hard. Frequent cultivation is necessary to keep the beds clean and the plants growing well. Valley prefers a little shade, but succeeds well in the open. The flowers will keep much better in partial shade. Replanting should be done every third or fourth year, when the strongest pips can be selected for forcing and the smaller ones replanted. There is no reason why excellent forcing pips cannot be produced in your state. I should, however, test out in a small way and experiment before planting heavily.

Sweet Peas

SELECT VARIETIES THAT SELL.

[This is the last in the series of articles on sweet peas by George J. Ball, of Glen Ellyn, Ill., previous installments of which appeared in the October 7 and 21 and November 4 issues of The Review.]

A great deal of actual money is lost in growing unsuitable varieties of sweet peas. The kinds that sell in quantity have clear, attractive colors. For midwinter use I find the number of varieties limited to a bare half-dozen. On looking over commission houses, quantities of uncertain colors can frequently be seen that sell only in limited numbers, particularly in midwinter. With the beginning of spring, these novelty colors are in better demand, though even then the buyers are discriminating. It is in selecting colors for midwinter that the grower must be conservative, for the lack of abundant sunshine makes most of the novelty colors entirely worthless at that time. I shall treat varieties in the order of their value, as I have found them.

Pink and White Leads.

What is known as Pink and White, or Blanche Ferry Pink, heads the list. With its rose-colored standard and white wings, it presents a most delightful combination of colors, resembling the old Blanche Ferry. The difference between this old favorite of long ago and a well grown winter-blooming Pink and White, as it is known for want of a better name, illustrates what a quarter-century of plant breeding has accomplished for sweet peas. It is safe to say that one-third of all the winter peas grown are of the one variety, Pink and White. It holds its color well in midwinter, but in the hot days of spring the colors are inclined to run together.

Most growers have found the variety Columbia the most profitable in this color. It represents a type between the early and late, producing a heavier growth than the early variety, consequently a larger number of flowers. Because of this heavier growth, it is several weeks later in getting into crop. As late as several seasons ago, most strains of Pink and White produced an unprofitably large number of poor colors, but the painstaking work of seed growers has put most strains in excellent shape.

Pink Colors Second.

The pink colors, represented by Rose Queen, easily hold second place and among Chicago growers this representative variety continues to rank high, although it was among the first of the winter-blooming Spencers to appear. It is a large flower with a beautiful, soft color during the winter months, although, in common with all varieties, too much dark weather will affect the color. Zvolanek's Rose is a larger flower and of a darker color than Rose Queen, but commission men are responsible for the statement that when buyers have their choice the soft color of Rose Queen gives it the preference. We place this variety in our novelty list.

Whites and Lavenders.

White is probably next in order and in this class we have Snowstorm crowding Snowflake for first place. It is fully as large as the latter, with a better form. Snowflake produces a heavy, soft growth that affects the keeping quality of the flowers, particularly during the spring months.

It might be of interest to growers who have experienced trouble in germinating the white-seeded varieties to know that seed should be sown in a medium that will retain moisture until they have germinated. Watering the seed is certain to start decay; the outer coating of the seed is thin and they swell promptly, but why they are so susceptible to excessive moisture we do not know. Perhaps some reader of The Review can tell us.

There are a number of fine lavenders to select from. Our choice, among standard kinds, is Princess. It has a clear, dark color and is extra early in getting into flower.

Asta Ohn, a lighter shade, is a suffused rose. A desirable characteristic is its restricted growth, only about one-third the usual head room being necessary.

We have been fortunate in making an advance trial of the new light lavender, Harmony. This is the most attractive one in this class and has an extra strong growth.

Bluebird Exclusive.

Next in order, I should say, are the blues, and in this color Bluebird has the field to itself. It is a strong, easy grower and throughout the middle west the color is in active demand.

The foregoing list represents the best of the midwinter kinds, which are started in August. Some of them are not so desirable for late planting as those in the novelty class. With the coming of warm spring weather the bicolors of the Blanche Ferry type run together. Rose Queen loses both size and color and Bluebird loses its even blue and becomes darker. The lavenders and whites are equally desirable for either season.

The Novelty Colors.

The novelty colors, which are planted later and grown cool during midwinter and throughout the spring months, provide a riot of colors and become an important item in the cut flower market.

True Blue is what its name implies. This color becomes more attractive as the weather warms up.

Wedgwood is a fine-flowering, even blue, but not so large as True Blue and a shade lighter.

Heatherbell is an attractive, rosy lavender.

Of the rosy purple shades I believe Glorious is the best.

Aviator is a rich scarlet, but this is a color that can be easily oversupplied.

Fordhook Rose is an attractive rosy carmine that sells well.

Ynes Gilbert is a glowing, orange scarlet.

I was privileged to try out Glitters during the last season and found it the most glowing orange I have ever seen. It has a telling color, but, like all in this class, it requires full spring temperatures in order to attain full development.

Zvolanek's Rose I prefer to place in the novelty class, because it does not develop its great size under midwinter conditions.

Hercules is a fine, clear color for any season, but its even pink color seems to develop particularly well during early spring.

Yarrowa is still one of the best of the novelty colors. This list can be greatly extended, but every variety I have discussed will be found safe and distinct.

Odd Colors Useful.

Among people of correct taste there is a demand for odd colors, to be used in carrying out color schemes, and it is the business of growers to keep up the supply. We frequently meet people who are amazed at the existence of such colors as are represented by Nubian, Belgian Hero or Serbian Prince. There are always people who are looking for something original or different and, while these novelty colors are not large sellers, they attract attention. Too many new kinds are offered in this class. Most of them merely add to the long list. For midwinter only strong, clear colors can be used. However, we must not forget that all our money-making standard kinds were at one time in the novelty list. In order to get a Rose Queen or a Snowflake, we should be glad to test a few novelties that may prove to be failures.

SPIDERS IN GREENHOUSES.

What can we do to exterminate a pest which is in the dark corners of our greenhouses and around the premises? It appears to be a spider, although it jumps like a grasshopper and has long legs. It is brown in color and is never to be found with other members of the spider family. We have not noticed any particular damage from them, except that they eat at vegetables. We have tried lime to exterminate them, with no effect. What would you advise us to do? K. & S.—Wis.

Lime would be of no value in clearing out such pests as you describe. Try Hammond's Slug Shot, sprinkling it about their habitats. This remedy has proved successful in many similar cases. Should Slug Shot fail, I should recommend a fumigation with hydrocyanic acid gas. This remedy should be carefully used, but it is usually reliable for cleaning out all forms of insect life. In cool weather damage to plant life, as a result, is reduced to a minimum. C. W.

AMERICAN CARNATION SOCIETY.

New Varieties Registered.

The following new carnations have been registered with the American Carnation Society by H. C. G. Schwarz, of Central Park, N. Y.:

Glow Worm: Seedling cross; brilliant red; size three and one-half inches; clean grower, producing finest quality flowers the entire season; never splits the calyx.

Resolute: Seedling x Enchantress; pure white; size, four inches; extremely prolific; flowers have great substance; unusually long stem.

Spring Glory: Pink Delight x seedling; size, four inches; deep pink, verging on red in winter and changing to rose pink with deeper center in spring.

Mrs. H. C. G. Schwarz: Pink Delight sport x seedling; shell pink; size, four inches; exceptionally strong grower with wide foliage; extremely long, straight stems.

A. F. J. Baur, Sec'y.

GROWING ENCHANTRESS.

I am sending you a few stems of Enchantress and White Enchantress. They are making a strong growth, but the leaves are getting light spots on them. I also notice that some of the lower leaves get brown or black later. A few of the leaves have spots with a kind of web on them. Kindly let me know what this is, for this is the first time I have grown carnations.

A. L.—Mo.

Those brown spots with the powdery substance are the common carnation rust. Pick off what you can and spray thoroughly with Bordeaux mixture. Keep the plants dry overhead as much as is practical. Water carefully, though not sparingly, at the roots. Give abundant ventilation on all favorable occasions. Paint one of the heating pipes in each house with lime and sulphur in equal parts, mixed with water. Keeping a dry, buoyant atmosphere will help the plants to outgrow the disease.

The light spots in the leaves are caused by bacteriosis. Most varieties of carnations are, in time, attacked by this disease and sooner or later succumb to its ravages. There has been much difference of opinion as to just what causes this disease, the most commonly accepted theory being that it is caused by the punctures of insects and poisons entering at these punctures. The Enchantress varieties have been in cultivation an unusually long period and although they have shown the effects of this disease in increasing quantity, they are still doing well, showing a remarkable degree of vitality. Careful culture will assist greatly in reducing the ravages of this disease, as is proved by the varied amount of this disease on different places. It might be said that anything that will promote a soft growth will aggravate the disease, while culture which produces well matured leaf growth will assist the plant in resisting the disease. That means that you should water carefully, allowing the soil to dry out fairly well before each watering. Avoid fertilizers which are excessive in nitrogen. Give abundant ventilation on favorable opportunities and carry an even temperature. Later on, when taking cuttings for propagation, avoid those plants showing these light spots as far as possible. Keep the young plants growing along steadily in a cool, light position, which will help to build up the vitality of your stock.

A. F. J. B.

THRIPS SPOIL BUDS.

I am sending you a few carnations. What is the cause of their opening in the manner shown, and how can I prevent it?

A. E.—Pa.

Your carnation blooms are being injured by thrips. These tiny insects puncture the tissue of the petals while they are still in the bud, causing these white spots, which are really dead tissue. Usually these spots are brown on the bloom of light shades of color and white in the dark-colored varieties. The presence of these insects proves that you have been lax in your spraying or fumigating. You should spray or fumigate regularly once each week, even though you may not see any indication of thrips or aphids. It is far easier to keep them away than to get rid of them after they have a foothold. Now that you have them, apply the remedy two or three times weekly until you have cleaned them out. Do not increase the strength of the doses, but repeat the applications oftener.

A. F. J. B.

PEST IS SOW BUG.

There is something wrong with our carnations. The leaves are turning brown and seem to dry up and are full of holes. I found some small worms, like angleworms, in one of the dead plants. We found them in the soil around the plants, too. What is the best and quickest way to get rid of them?

H. W. B.—Ia.

Your main trouble is probably with sow bugs. Drop a pinch of Slug Shot here and there on the edgeboards of your benches. If you have none on hand, take granulated sugar and mix enough Paris green with it to make it deadly and drop it along the edgeboard. It will require considerable persistence to get rid of this pest.

BLACK ROT OF GERANIUMS.

Our geranium cuttings turn black and rot over night. What is the cause? We have tried Grape Dust.

R. & S.—Mich.

Outdoor geranium cuttings do not, as a rule, root as readily as those from indoor-grown stock. The fall growth is apt to be soft and, in the absence of bottom heat, they damp off. Indoor-grown cuttings have the advantage of being better matured and can be left on the plants until firing has commenced and bottom heat has been provided.

A. F. J. B.

VARIEGATED GERANIUM.

We are sending you two plants. Would you kindly tell us their names? One is a geranium we have grown for several years. Our first plant was given us under the name of the Kansas geranium. It has proved a good, strong grower, with bloom much like the General Grant. The leaves are usually mottled with white and are sometimes entirely white. It is a good seller, as the foliage is handsome.

E. W.—Kan.

The geranium is unknown to me. I have seen the same variegation among the standard varieties, but do not consider it of any great value.

The name of the other plant is streptocarpus, or cape primrose.

M. P.

GERANIUM DRYDEN.

I am sending a geranium leaf and flowers. Two years ago I discovered just one plant of it. It is a quite slow grower, but a good one. Can you tell me the name of it?

C. E. S.—O.

The flower of the geranium arrived badly crushed, making it difficult to tell its name, but I believe it to be the variety Dryden.

M. P.

GERANIUM CUTTINGS ROTTING.

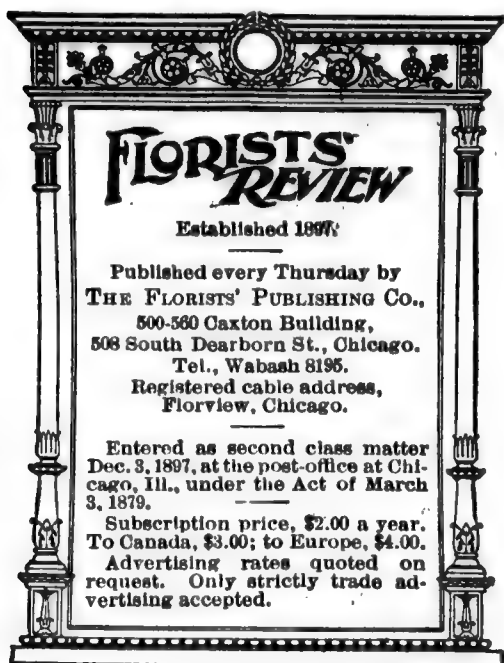

Please tell me why my geranium cuttings rot and turn black in the sand boxes. I am having a great deal of trouble in that way. I have to throw out whole boxes.

S. L. J.—Ill.

The trouble is due to weather conditions and to the fact that the cuttings were too soft when taken. The trouble generally happens to cuttings taken from the field in August and early September. Those taken later in September or early in October are harder and do not suffer so badly. Care in watering is desirable in order not to get the sand too wet. Water only to prevent the cuttings from wilting.

M. P.

RESULTS.

We give them. You get them.
We both have them.

THE first fall of snow tightened coal prices somewhat, but there are indications that they will be lower.

A TIME has come in which we need no longer put up with what we can get. Once more he who pays may pick and choose.

BANKS are increasing pressure on customers who have not reduced loans. Florists should do the same with all who have not paid.

WHAT are you doing to boost Thanksgiving day sales? Send clippings of your advertisements or photographs of your window display to The Review, telling us about it.

To close down glass now is refusing the opportunity to make money three or four months hence. Neither the high cost of coal nor the business situation warrants it.

IN order that The Review may reach its readers at the usual time, the forms of the issue of November 25, Thanksgiving day, will close one day earlier than usual. Contributors and advertisers should send their material to reach this office not later than November 20.

THOUGH prices in other lines continue to fall, florists need not and should not ask less for what they sell. So far were florists from profiteering during the war that they did not, as a rule, charge as much as they should, even when prices were highest. Though raw materials and labor are lower in other lines, flowers do not cost less to grow, and the florist who lowers prices does so at his own expense.

SOMETIMES one hears complaint that a florist does not receive so many telegraph delivery orders as he thinks he should, but usually it develops that the number of orders received is at least as great as the number sent out. There is just one way to build up a good volume of incoming transfer orders; it is to work up among one's customers a good volume of these orders to send out. Every order sent out sooner or later results in one coming back. Get some orders to transfer to florists in other cities and there soon will be orders coming back, a fair exchange all around.

THE flower business in the country towns has been affected scarcely at all by the deflation process now, we hope, approaching completion.

THE growers who produce the best stock were the least backward about paying a high price for their coal. Practically all have a full supply or plans for obtaining it.

As employment becomes less in other fields, former workers are returning to the greenhouses. It would be a mistake, however, to lower wages on that account. Let us build up our working forces now that we have the chance.

IN the last six to twelve months there have been enormous losses on stocks of sugar, tea, coffee, leather, wool, silk, seeds, to mention only a conspicuous few. Florists have been fortunate; nothing of that kind has occurred or can occur in our field.

LONG ago a popular philosopher remarked that if a man made a better mousetrap than any other, even though he made his home in the woods, the world would beat a path to his door. That was before the days of modern selling methods and national advertising; today the man would move out of the woods, blazon the merits of his mousetrap and make a fortune large enough to build a concrete automobile road to his country residence in the woods instead of letting the public beat a mere path with their feet.

CORRESPONDENTS WANTED.

If your city is not represented in the news columns of The Review and you would like to put it on the map, write the editor of The Review. Members of the trade who are in contact with the florists of their city will find the sending of a weekly news letter a pleasant and not difficult undertaking. There are openings in the following cities particularly:

Detroit, Mich.	St. Paul, Minn.
Buffalo, N. Y.	Louisville, Ky.
Omaha, Neb.	Toledo, O.
Minneapolis, Minn.	Memphis, Tenn.

The ability to gather news is of more importance than dexterity with a pen.

A LITTLE IN FRONT OF THE NEXT.

And they asked me how I did it,
And I gave them the Scripture text:
"You keep your light so shining
A little in front of the next."
They copied all they could follow,
But they couldn't copy my mind;
And I left them, sweating and stealing,
A year and a half behind.
—Kipling.

Isn't that a great bit of verse? Good thing for a fellow to think about and even to recite aloud if he can back it up with results.

"Keeping a little in front of the next" is more than beating your competitors in business. Simply to take business away from your neighbors by price cutting is destructive, but effort to keep ahead of them in the creation of new ideas in flower arrangement, display and selling tends to speed up and improve your service and that of all those in the trade who see your progress.

COAL MEN NOTE IMPROVEMENT.

Continued improvement in the soft coal situation was noted in a review of the industry issued at the beginning of this week by the National Coal Association, in terms that give comfort for those growers seeking further fuel supplies. The association said it had no reports of any "immediate shortage" from any section of the country.

"Great manufacturing plants in dire need of soft coal early in the fall now have an ample supply on hand," the review asserted. "Public utilities everywhere have had their immediate wants filled, while many of them have been able to provide stocks for the winter."

Decreased prices have resulted as a natural consequence of the improved situation, the review declared, adding that in many places the decline had been "from twenty-five to fifty per cent below prices which prevailed up to six weeks ago."

The government geological survey's weekly report estimated bituminous production during the week ending November 6 to have been only 11,500,000 tons, due largely to loss of time on election day and on religious holidays in the coal fields.

HAVE YOU HEARD OF IT?

"This is a new one to us," writes W. E. Kemble, from Oskaloosa, Ia. "We wonder if you have ever heard of it before, or if other florists know of anything like it and what they think about it. We have our own opinion, but should like to know what others think."

Being in the same situation and of the same mind as Mr. Kemble, The Review prints the clipping from an Oskaloosa paper which explains the novelty that caused his wonderings:

Leo and Art Baldauf, nephews of the late Aaron Rosenblatt, also W. S. Oberfelder, a relative of the family, have instituted a Memorial Flower Fund in Oskaloosa by a money contribution to the local Social Service League and by their suggestions the Social Service Board has established "The Memorial Flower Fund" and is following up the ideas of older organizations in the manner of handling this fund.

In the case of the death of a friend you may give this lasting tribute by notifying the Social Service League that you wish to contribute a definite amount to the Memorial Flower Fund in memory of your friend. The secretary then informs the immediate family that in memory of the departed one a contribution to the Memorial Flower Fund has been made by the above individual and that the name of the loved one thus remembered will be included in the Memorial Flower Fund list in the next report of the Social Service League.

This fund, of course, is used for the relief of the ill and the poor, and the sentiment conveyed in furnishing flowers for such occasions is carried out in the desirable manner described above.

In the near future the Social Service League will have the necessary printed blanks, including letter that will be sent by secretary to the immediate family, and will be very glad to have these on display for information and approval.

POINTING A MORAL.

Anyone can print a newspaper—as long as his money holds out—but it is quite another matter to get that newspaper read. One can even get people to subscribe to a publication without reading it—you can lead a horse to water, but you may not make him drink. That is the test:

I consider every issue of The Review worth the subscription price for a year and never get too busy to read it every week.—Darwin Z. Curtis, dealer in Bulbs, Plants, Seeds, Ypsilanti, Mich., November 8, 1920.

The advertising manager of the paper that is read has the softest snap on earth—results bring advertising faster than anything else ever will:

Continue the same Display ad to December; it is doing good work.—M. D. Preston, Highland View Gladiolus Gardens, Cuyahoga Falls, O., November 8, 1920.

Please discontinue my Classified ad and hold balance to my credit till some future time; sold out.—Mumma's Greenhouses, Leesburg, O., November 4, 1920.

If you hear a man complain of the cost of advertising you can be pretty certain he spends a good bit of money elsewhere than in The Review.

The Market.

A slight improvement was noticeable in the cut flower market last week, supply and demand coming more nearly together by the close of the week. This condition was more apparent Saturday, November 13, when arrivals cleaned up better than for many days. Violets on that day were interesting subjects, owing to an expected demand incident to the Yale-Princeton football game, which always brings a call for these flowers. The supply was not large; consequently the business was not heavy, and the range of prices was on the quite satisfactory basis of $1.50 to $2 per hundred. Had it not been for the warm weather experienced of late, which shortened the picking, such prices would hardly have been possible.

Chrysanthemums continue to dominate the market. The late varieties are pretty nearly all in and, with the mid-seasons not yet out, arrivals are heavy and accumulations present clearance difficulties. A killing frost has destroyed all outside flowers, and this condition will favor the movement of chrysanthemums from now on; in fact, Monday, November 15, the demand for these flowers was stimulated and $9 per dozen was obtainable for the best of the commercial varieties, although plenty of flowers good in quality were to be had for much less. Singles and pompons are also stronger in price, due to lighter shipments.

Roses are in good supply and meet a somewhat better demand at stronger prices. American Beauty is not particularly plentiful and moves within a price range of $50 to $75 per hundred for the best of the special grades. Hybrid teas are in about normal supply for the season, and prices are settling to something like a normal range on account of quality, which is good. The price range Monday was about $2 to $20 per hundred, with one or two varieties exceeding the top mark, Francis Scott Key coming into the American Beauty class.

There is little change in the carnation situation, except as to quality, which has improved a trifle and is likely to improve from now on. Much short-stemmed stock is arriving, a condition due, no doubt, to a generally late benching necessitated by labor shortage.

Cattleyas are in fairly good supply and are meeting with a better demand, their movement being within a range of $75 to $150 per hundred, the latter price including hybrids. Cypridiums continue to arrive in limited quantity.

The supply of Easter lilies is short and prices have moved up, with a demand that just about takes care of arrivals. Lily of the valley is in only moderate supply. White bouvardia sells fairly well at 25 to 50 cents per bunch. The supply of Paper White narcissi is increasing and moves slowly at 50 cents per bunch. Arrivals of sweet peas are larger and are moved freely.

The supply of miscellaneous flowers is lighter and includes mainly snapdragons, calendulas, pansies and callas.

Various Notes.

Monday, November 15, saw the opening of the social season, which this year is full of promise for the florists. The horse show opened in the morning, for a week's run, and a large list of functions in connection with it, including many luncheons and dinners, furnishes a good prospect for business during the week. The interior of the huge Madison Square Garden, where the show is held, has been transformed into a replica of an English village on a fête day, the boxes decorated with plants and flowers so as to harmonize with the general decorative design. H. H. Burns had the contract for the decorations. The opening of the opera season at the Metropolitan Opera House took place Monday evening, November 15. A number of balls are to take place within the next two weeks, the largest of which will be the Midshipmen's ball, to be held at the Hotel Commodore, following the Army-Navy football game, Saturday evening, November 27, at which will be present members of both houses of Congress, the diplomatic corps, the cabinet, and officers of the army and navy. The much heralded "Venetian ball" is to take place at the Ritz-Carleton November 23. An important charity ball, at the Hotel Plaza, was the prominent so-day evening, November 15, at the same hotel, for the purpose of electing officers and taking action looking to a broadening of influence of the association. A number of those present pledged themselves to bring at least two new members into the organization at the next meeting. G. E. M. Stumpp presided and Wm. A. Phillips acted as secretary.

A killing frost during the night of Friday, November 12, ended the cut of outdoor flowers, which this year was prolonged to a remarkable extent. On the morning of that day cannas, dahlias and other tender flowers were in evidence in the gardens of suburban New York, nearly a month after the time when killing frost is expected in this latitude.

The annual dinner of the New York Wholesale Florists' Protective Association is to be held Saturday evening, November 20, at the Hotel Breslin.

J. H. P.

Beautiful flowers and elaborate decorations now grace the walls of what was once the Hesterberg cafe. Not long ago, when liquor could sharpen the wits of the patrons, the political destinies of New York were molded by the would-be politicians, who gathered in this very room. It is now a flower store. Jack Trepel, the owner of nine stores in Greater New York, transformed this place from a saloon to a beautifully decorated flower shop. It is situated at Flatbush avenue and Lenox road.

CHICAGO.

The Market.

The business is gaining momentum with each passing week. While the city trade is uneven, being marked by frequent dull days among the busy ones, shipping trade is increasing steadily and the volume of sales in the market again generally exceeds the records of last year. It is apparent that chrysanthemums are approaching the end of their season earlier than in any recent year, not only in Chicago, but throughout the entire section which draws its supplies of cut flowers from this market. As the mums are cut out, the demand for roses and carnations is on the increase. The wholesalers note that the demand is much more active in certain sections than in others, or perhaps it would be more exact to say that the demand is not so strong in certain cities as it is generally throughout the middle west. The manufacturing centers seem to be less active than the agricultural centers. But if city business were relatively as strong as shipping demand it would be to the advantage of this market.

There are not half as many chrysanthemums on the market as was the case a year ago this week and the supply of pompons is even smaller. In a general way it may be said that the big mums are unusually good and everyone notes that the fanciest stock is in best demand. Pompons are selling at much better prices than last year, more because of the difference in supply than because of greater demand.

Rose crops are not heavy. Most of the growers are looking forward to Christmas and they are not cutting much just now. The result has been some improvement in the value of practically all grades and varieties. The market never cial feature in the entertainments for the evening of November 16.

Whether or not the local publicity campaign now in course of promotion is being anticipated by the New York newspapers is hard to say, but it is significant that the big New York Times, which is not noted for its interest in matters concerning the florists' industry, devoted almost a column of space in its issue of Sunday, November 14, on the page facing the editorial page, to an interview with Max Schling, in which he put over a lot of facts in regard to a proper and wider use of flowers and floral decorations. In the same issue is reported an interview with Oscar Meyer, in charge of the flower shop at the Hotel Pennsylvania, at which was discussed the plant embargo under Quarantine 37, particularly as regards the orchid situation.

There was a well-attended meeting of retail florists, called by the Retail Florists' Association, through Vice-President E. J. Hession, at the Hotel Pennsylvania, Wednesday evening, November 10. The matter of the proposed local publicity campaign was discussed at considerable length, and it was unanimously decided to meet again on Mon-had better roses at this season of the year.

The supply of carnations is much larger than a year ago, but the demand and the prices have improved with the decrease in the supply of pompons. Sweet peas are not abundant and are selling briskly. Violets suffer in the competition. There is an occasional shortage of valley, and cattleyas have advanced in price because of reduced supply. The demand for Easter lilies is increasing with the decrease in the supply of chrysanthemums, but the wholesalers find it difficult to advance the price of the lilies beyond $15 per hundred; a higher price chokes the demand.

The price of ferns has been generally advanced to $4 per thousand, the highest price ever known at this time of the year. The eastern shippers say the supply will not last through the season if the demand keeps up. On the other hand, there is more plumosus than ever. Boxwood is coming freely.

Thanksgiving Prospects.

There is a general belief that the Thanksgiving business this year will show another good increase, but that it will be stopped by any attempt to advance prices, except on one or two short items. There will be fewer chrysanthemums.

mums and pompons than in any recent year, but larger supplies of other flowers. A number of advance orders have been booked, and they nearly all call for the medium grades of stock. The retailers say the Thanksgiving demand is principally for the purchaser's home use and that in the majority of cases moderate sums only will be spent. The big, fancy late chrysanthemums, like Chadwick and Helen Frick, however, are an exception. For these the buyers seem willing to pay higher prices than ever before.

"Better Than a Flower Show."

"Say It with Flowers" week occurred on the dates once used for the annual flower show in Chicago. "As a business booster for the trade 'Say It with Flowers' week was far better than any flower show we ever held in Chicago," said C. J. Michelsen. "No event in the history of the trade here ever caused so much talk of flowers among the public, no matter how much the trade spent, and the cost of this demonstration was less than the aggregate sum the trade spent on each flower show in the old days. Besides, this time the expense was more equally divided; a larger number contributed, individual contributions were smaller and in exact proportion to the benefits derived; being indirect, many contributors did not realize that they had paid part of the cost of the publicity." The bills were paid out of the percentage collections of the Allied Florists' Association and the total expenditure was only about $5,500. Experienced publicity men, noting the results, thought the cost must have been several times as much. "The slogan sure is a winner," said Mr. Michelsen; "it sticks in people's minds and has become a part of the slang of the day."

November 12 the Daily News used the slogan as the title of its front-page cartoon. Money won't buy front-page advertising in that paper. Over 400,000 copies printed. Reaches four-fifths of the homes in Chicago.

"Say It with Flowers" Dance.

The social prestige of the Chicago Florists' Club was raised another notch by the "Say It with Flowers" dance at the Hotel Randolph Friday evening, November 12. Nearly 250 florists and friends, according to President Waters' count, were present to dance, or play cards, or enjoy a social chat with their fellows, crowding the capacity of the Colonial ballroom to its utmost. So successful an event had not before been staged in the club's history, according to Secretary Lautenschlager, who, with the other officers of the club, was active in seeing that everyone had a good time. They are the more pleased because the affair was all arranged in a week's time, being first suggested at the club meeting November 7. The treasury of the club, as well as its reputation as a promoter of enjoyable entertainments, benefited by the event.

The ballroom was profusely decorated, quite in keeping with the title of the dance. A bank of palms from Wittbold's screened the orchestra. Strings of smilax were festooned across the ceiling and baskets of chrysanthemums made bright spots in the setting. On the tables were vases of roses, contributed for the occasion by several of the wholesale houses. The music was excellent, and the pleasure of the participants in the entertainment was evidenced by the late hour of their departure.

In the course of the evening President Waters introduced some Red Cross emissaries to the assembled florists. The success of the society's drive for subscriptions was enhanced by the generous contributions of the trade, all of whom wore buttons ere the ladies ceased their rounds among them.

Various Notes.

The committee, composed of N. J. Wietor, Fred Lautenschlager and C. W. Johnson, appointed at the last meeting of the Florists' Club to invite the Chrysanthemum Society of America to Chicago for next year's meeting, was successful in its mission. C. W. Johnson's presentation of the invitation at Washington met with the society's acceptance.

The Commercial Flower Growers of Chicago met at the Hotel Randolph Thursday evening, November 18, to consider raising the growers' assessment collected by the wholesale houses to five-eighths of one per cent on sales in order that the extra one-eighth might be paid to the Commercial Flower Growers to cover local dues and dues in the National Flower Growers' Association. Discussion of President Kohout's article on stabilizing market conditions published not long since in The Review formed a feature of the evening.

some good customers. He is there this week to attend the meeting of the Tennessee State Florists' Association.

The Chicago Flower Growers' Association obtained the use of its new space November 15, adding 3,500 square feet to the facilities of the shipping department.

Andrew Benson has returned from his trip east, more than ever satisfied to resume rose growing here.

Edward Goldstein will celebrate his thirty-fourth birthday anniversary November 19.

Checking up the records, P. C. Schupp, of the J. A. Budlong Co., says he finds prices now are running about twenty-five per cent below the values of the same goods last year. From this he deduces that the florists' business is in about the same condition, as far as prices go, as other industries. He thinks the difference is due to increased production rather than a decrease in the demand, because he finds his own sales running to a little higher total, day by day, than they did a year ago, which indicates handling considerably more stock.

A. Miller was at the Twin Cities last week on a hunting expedition—with a gun, not an order-book. He is at Memphis this week, having a place on the program of the Tennessee State Florists' Association.

Most of the local growers now use Illinois coal, but Wietor Bros. have stuck to Pocahontas, having found that while it costs more, it still is cheapest in the long run. In the good old days of peace and plenty mine run Pocahontas cost 90 cents a ton at the mines and $3 per ton on track at Rogers Park. Today it costs $4.90 at the mines and $8.55 at Rogers Park. When one considers that Wietor Bros. need 5,000 tons for an average winter, the magnitude of the large growers' fuel problem can be appreciated.

Chicago friends of William Werstler, formerly with Schiller the Florist, now store manager for Thomas Franks & Son, of Champaign, will be interested to learn that he was married in that city November 10, his bride being Miss Edna Stipes. Mr. and Mrs. Werstler are on an extended honeymoon east and south.

the various Harvard football games. Carnations are doing somewhat better as their quality improves, and prices now vary from $3 to $5 per hundred. Roses remain somewhat unwieldy in number; they will not really come into their own until the mum wave starts to recede.

Violets still remain slow sellers, although they are not at all abundant. Pansies are exceptionally fine and move at better prices than violets. For sweet peas there is a good demand at higher figures than a week ago. Calendulas go somewhat sluggishly, as do bachelor's buttons. Pink snapdragons sell well, but Paper White narcissi, which could not be retarded in so warm a fall, are druggy. There are not so many lilies, but the call for these and callas is not robust.

Of cattleyas the supply is declining and prices show a slight hardening. A good crop of cypripediums is now coming in. Of bouvardia nice bunches of several colors come in, the white selling best. Good stock of such flowering plants as chrysanthemums, cyclamens, begonias and Erica melanthera are coming in and the sale of these, berried solanums, ferns and various foliage plants is improving.

Various Notes.

There was a rather small attendance at the annual meeting of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society, November 13. The sum of $6,000 was appropriated for a spring show of orchids and roses, and $1,000 for four additional shows during the year in addition to the income from the various special funds, and $300 for a children's exhibition. Officers were elected as follows: President, Albert C. Burrage; vice-president, Thomas Allen; trustees for three years, William C. Endicott, Walter Hunnewell, Thomas Roland and Mrs. Bayard Thayer.

a. m. and reaching home in a semi-frozen condition at 8 p. m.

The National Grange P. of H. has been in session here since November 10 and it has brought tens of thousands of Grangers to Boston. November 12, at the afternoon and evening sessions, no less than 9,800 candidates received the seventh, or highest degree in the order, the largest initiation of any fraternal order at any time in the United States. As flowers were used freely, the sessions must have stimulated cut flower business. A number of florists were noted among the visiting Grangers. A superb exhibition of New England products was given in Mechanics building. Fruits, vegetables, flowers—everything produced from the soil, of the highest quality, was to be seen.

Mrs. E. K. Farr, of Stoneham, has a splendid bench of her new semi-double begonia of Vernon type, which is a constant bloomer, never exceeds seven inches in height and blooms equally well outdoors and under glass. It will be shown before various clubs and societies and disseminated the coming season.

Thomas Roland has already sold several hundred of his high-grade cyclamens, which are better than ever this season. He is still cutting some fine nerines at Nahant, while from Revere come excellent shipments of Premier, Columbia, Crusader, Ophelia and Double White Killarney roses.

M. W. Farr, of the West Street Greenhouses, Reading, has a splendid house of sweet peas in full crop. There are some fifteen varieties, including some of the newest and best, and no better flowers ever came in here at this season.

The Massachusetts Horticultural Society is mailing to many clubs, societies and individuals a statement of what is being done by the special committee appointed in New York last June to secure necessary modifications of Quarantine 37. The committee has been active for some time and has recently secured the services of a special secretary attorney to secure statistics, etc. The fight against the exclusion act will be pushed with all possible vigor and, with A. C. Burrage a leader in the movement, it steadily gains momentum.

The first cold snap of the season found growers in this vicinity pretty well equipped with coal and, as many had also laid in stocks of wood, the outlook is quite encouraging. The anthracite situation is bad, but will steadily improve from now on, as restrictions on

The Market.

Chrysanthemums are approaching the height of their glory for the present season and now hold the center of the local stage. They are in good demand, with the supply about normal, especially fine white, yellow and pink varieties being on hand. Sprays find ready sale at moderate prices and bunches of pompons are popular. Medium-sized blooms have been unusually abundant in the hands of the peddlers.

Roses are in fairly good supply, but they are somewhat eclipsed by the mums. Carnations are beginning to show marked improvement, but are not pushed especially hard by local growers until the passing of the mums.

Various Notes.

Samuel Resnick, with Joseph Koppelman, has the sympathy of the trade in the death, last week, of his 14-months-old son.

The demand for bulbs has been unusually brisk in this city so far this fall.

The new Colonial Flower Shop, on lower Westminster street, which opened a fortnight ago, reports exceptionally good business.

Frederick Dietz was a business visitor in New York last week.

Timothy O'Connor has returned from a visit to New York and Atlantic City. Lawrence Hay has been reelected a member of the East Providence school committee.

Edgar L. Noek has repaired the damage done by hailstones to his greenhouses, on Wheeler avenue.

Smith the Florist reports good business at the branch store opened in the Washington market, corner of Washington and Union streets.

John G. Jensen has commenced the erection of a brick and concrete garage, at the corner of Broad and Byfield streets. W. H. M.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Market.

The second week in November was quiet. Both supply and demand were light, much lighter than usual at this time of the year. The first really hard freeze of the season came the night of November 12. The mercury the following evening marked 20 degrees Fahrenheit. Usually the fate of the dahlia is linked with the first frost, but this season it made no difference; the dahlia has been out for two weeks.

The first of the late chrysanthemums have come—Eatons, Chadwicks and Seidewitz. The evidence is strong that chrysanthemums will be more plentiful the coming fortnight than they have been during the last. With the exception of the outdoor stock, pompons have been doing well. Most of the outdoor stock of pompons, however, has been killed by the frosts.

Carnations have been selling better than they did a week ago. Well colored Wards have moved up in price and even whites sell now.

Single violets have jumped in price and not many are available now. There are fewer grown and the extremely fine fall has forced them ahead and out of bloom before their time. Double violets have arrived on the market.

Easter lilies are firm, even though it is chrysanthemum season. A few gardenias have arrived. Orchids have been reinforced by Cypripedium Sanderi. Bouvardia Humboldtii is about over. There are some sweet peas in all colors. Cosmos is over.

The Mule Farm.

The Mule Farm is the plaything of one of the brightest minds in Philadelphia. A man who made and spent money as few of us can do, derived delight from blooded cattle, from poultry and from flowers. When reverses came he leased the greenhouses. So it came that the visit was made.

Something like twenty miles out of town, three miles from a railroad station, the Ellenwood Greenhouses are situated in the midst of beautiful country. A year and a half ago they were leased by Alfred M. Campbell, who was quick to see their commercial possibilities. He placed William Lausterer in charge and set about getting the place in shape. Although cleaning was only accomplished by a lot of hustling, the entire place was planted with roses in rich, mellow soil. Three varieties were selected, Premier, Ophelia and Double White Killarney. No space was wasted on odds and ends. The practical, businesslike view—when you are going to grow roses, you had better grow roses—was followed. Pink, being the most popular color, was given half the space. The other half was divided between yellow and white. The place holds 20,000 plants, so there are 10,000 Premier and 5,000 each of Ophelia and Double White Killarney.

The plants are the same today as when they were planted. The stock has been well cared for, rested and cut back. The Double White Killarney has, evidently, yielded a good crop in October and will do so again in December. The Ophelia is in full crop now. The Premier has been timed for Christmas and January and promises well. A pile of Westmoreland coal, salvage of the Radner wreck, is steaming splendidly.

Over near the east end of the armory, beyond those exquisite standard heliotropes, was an unusual exhibit. It was a vase of Purple King iris arranged with grasses. The exhibitor was a girl. The exhibit came from this city, yet if you were on the ground you would hardly believe it possible that you were in Philadelphia, so far away are the built-up sections. It is historic ground, too, for this tract of land belonged to Robert Logan, secretary to William Penn. It remained in the family ever since, with little change. The exhibitor cultivates flowers for sale in a fine effort to do her bit.

The new orchid with which Mrs. Fitz Eugene Dixon captured the Pennsylvania Horticultural Society's gold medal has been christened Warren G. Harding.

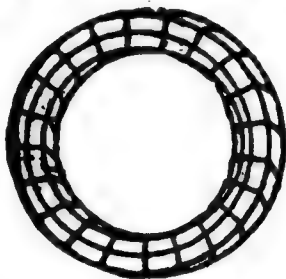

The vegetables were the feature of the later additions to the show. It has been a wonderful growing season, affording an opportunity that has been improved to the utmost by the society's skillful growers. Such potatoes, beets and eggplants were a treat to see.

terest in the rose exhibit. One was the contest between a veteran and a youth in the regular contest for gardeners. The veteran came out ahead, but the youth did well, taking one first. The other was the seedlings. There were two Ophelias; both showed promise. One was Robert Scott & Son's deep pink, Mrs. Prentiss Nichols; the other, Edward Towill's cerise pink, here christened American Legion. Mrs. Prentiss Nichols looked even better at the exhibition than at home a year ago, creating enthusiasm among the experts. American Legion has met with much commendation, encouraging its aspirations to a place beside American Beauty.

Taken all together, the Pennsylvania Horticultural Society has accomplished something noteworthy in putting up such a good exhibition. Returning to the center of the city after an absence of three years, it was no small achievement to fill the armory with a good selection of well grown stock. To measure the show on prewar standards is absurd. We have given our country our best; we have given our men and our coal and our money. Now we are starting afresh. The show was a good show; next year we shall have a better.

Protests False Reports.

An open letter to the secretary:

To Mr. David Rust,
Secretary Pennsylvania Horticultural Society
406 Finance building,
Philadelphia, Pa.

My Dear Mr. Rust:

I was greatly pleased with the exhibition given by the society last week. Under postwar conditions, it was most creditable.

I have one criticism to make—that the descriptions of the show published in the daily press are injurious to horticulture. "A chrysanthemum plant with 1,000 blooms," "Two thousand American Beauties," and so on, were the expressions used. These statements do harm. They are unworthy of our profession. Occasionally they are the result of overenthusiasm or they may be errors. Generally, they are preventable.

Should you agree with me in this matter I feel sure that you will take measures to discourage inaccurate reporting.

With kindest regards,

I am very truly yours,

John Welsh Young

flower beds between the sidewalk and the curb. They are pulling out the old plants that have almost dried up, scratching the soil and planting pansies and geraniums. Christmas is the time for the great outdoor flower festival. By Christmas they hope to have their outdoor plants in full bloom. Flowers are plentiful in the west. I saw more flowers in one florists' shop there than I have seen in half a dozen flower shops here. They use flowers everywhere, in the hotels, in the restaurants and in the cafeterias. They grow roses under glass, although there is little or no severe weather. I saw fancy Columbias in one store. Prices seemed to be moderate. I was interested to see the oil stoves in the orange groves, to ward off stray light frosts. We came back by way of the Northern Pacific railroad to see this country and to stop at Banff and Lake Louise."

The Germantown Show.

The spirit of the Germantown show was its most delightful feature. It was the spirit of comradeship. Men and women, boys and girls, all joined in enjoying the flowers and in having a good time. The auditorium in the Library building in Vernon park was well filled. Fear was expressed lest there should not be room for both the audience and the exhibits, but it seemed to have been managed quite nicely. The big room was full, but not overcrowded. Taking the audience first, the old guard was out to a man. The president, calm and unruffled by the excitement of the big meeting, sat near the desk. The secretary showed a friend an object of special interest. The chairman of the committee on awards introduced a friend whose father kept a flower shop opposite John Wanamaker's, years ago. Another great man explained to a reporter the principles of gardening, while the society's advertising manager tells me there are exhibition!—no, beg pardon, hundreds of exhibits.

This is literally true, one specimen chrysanthemum plant being heralded as possessing no less than 150 blooms. There are finely shaped chrysanthemums and big specimens and little pompons and a lovely fern decoration. Most interesting of all was the exhibit of apples—good fruit from a reclaimed orchard near Media, which had expert care since March. So much accomplished in six months, what will another show?

Various Notes.

Professor J. G. Sanders, of the state agricultural department, has written from Harrisburg to growers in this section, warning them that the Japanese beetle has appeared in Pennsylvania and asking them to check its spread.

It is estimated that decreased production is due, in part, to decreased labor. ## Special Attraction Offered to all Florists' Clubs---Gratis

We have had made two hundred and fifty Lantern Slides pertaining to our retail advertising, which should prove instructive as well as beneficial for the meeting of any Florists' Club desiring to feature Publicity and Advertising. We will be pleased to have the Florists' Clubs throughout the continent have the use of these slides without charge. The slides have been shown before the Florists' Clubs of Buffalo, Philadelphia and Baltimore, with telling results. Have the Club Secretary arrange for booking dates for the coming season.

Special Attraction Offered to all Florists' Clubs--Gratis

We have had made two hundred and fifty Lantern Slides pertaining to our retail advertising, which should prove instructive as well as beneficial for the meeting of any Florists' Club desiring to feature Publicity and Advertising. We will be pleased to have the Florists' Clubs throughout the continent have the use of these slides without charge. The slides have been shown before the Florists' Clubs of Buffalo, Philadelphia and Baltimore, with telling results. Have the Club Secretary arrange for booking dates for the coming season.

MOTT-LY MUSINGS

If you have any flowers worth giving,
Stick them under my nostrils today;
The smell of one bud while I'm living Knocks the spots off the finest bouquet
That you at my corpse may be sipping
When you find I have passed on my way.

"This is sentiment practically expressed," said George B. Cannon, of the Quality Flower Shop, Stamford, Conn., who was the manager of the exhibition given by the Stamford Horticultural Society, November 5 to 7. Benjamin Hammond, of Beacon, N. Y., officiated as one of the judges in the exhibition and, in commenting on both the floral and vegetable exhibits, said he saw a decided advancement, rather than a decline, in the quality of production during the last few years. He urged that the exhibition be made an annual event.

Valentin Burgevin's Sons, Kingston, N. Y., held their usual chrysanthemum show, and their greenhouses and store were filled with a fine quality of trained specimens and single blooms of the popular varieties. A traveler who had just visited the annual show at Tuxedo Park felt like handing the palm to the Burgevins, as all the exhibitors at Tuxedo Park were amateurs with professional gardeners. "In any case," observed George Burgevin, "it is publicity and display which tend to boost business."

Conrad C. Gindra, Poughkeepsie, N. Y., finds much enthusiasm among the college girls, who are his leading patrons. The usual inauguration of autumn's queen was held and, from the way business has begun, a profitable winter seems in sight.

The veteran head of the Saltford Flower Shop, Poughkeepsie, N. Y., is, as usual, justly proud of the fine stock produced. "Talk is cheap," said Mr. Saltford, "but if one has not the goods and a good business, it is so much vapor."

Henry Hansen, Catskill, N. Y., observed that his business is regular all the year. The resort trade in the summer helps him when business is inclined to be dull.

"Has it ever occurred to you," said Willis S. Pino, Providence, R. I., "that the decrease in the number of birds may be due to their continually absorbing poison through eating foliage which has been sprayed with poisonous insecticides, and that the trade can render a good service in recommending non-poisonous material?"

Warburton's, Fall River, Mass., inaugurated the season with an informal flower show which was appreciated by

Thanksgiving and Friendliness 1620-1920

THREE HUNDRED years ago this Fall, the Pilgrims set aside a day to return thanks to God for bringing them safely to this land of freedom, peace and plenty.

It was a day of thanksgiving, of joy and of friendliness.

As the pilgrims greeted each other on that first happy Thanksgiving day, they gave their friends, with their "God bless you," a sprig of barberry or of juniper, as an earnest of goodwill—So it has been always.

And now another Thanksgiving Day, with its wealth of beauty, happiness and goodwill, is soon to be with us.

Hearts glow with friendliness and people turn again to flowers as the most expressive and beautiful of message carriers.

Let us show our wisdom as well as our friendliness in business by making the fullest use of the F. T. D. this Thanksgiving.

the public in a practical manner. "The majority of our patrons," observed Chatterton Warburton, "are mill workers and good spenders while they have the money, but flowers are among the first of the articles that feel a retrenchment in their financial condition, as at present, when the mills are all running on short time. While we do not look for as good prices as last year, we believe we shall do well, especially by keeping figures as reasonable as possible. The time for inflation is past; we believe the best form of publicity is to let our patrons know that they may rely upon our doing business in sym-

The Market.

At the various wholesale markets last week seasonable cut stock was plentiful in all grades, but there was no glut in any one variety. The demand for choice stock has been excellent all the week and the leading florists carry a great deal more stock since trade has become steady. According to the daily press, society events will include many weddings, balls and social functions during the remainder of the month and especially Thanksgiving week.

The stock coming to this market daily includes quantities of fancy cut mums in all the leading varieties. Among those in great demand are Bonnaillon, both white and yellow. White and Golden Chadwicks are great sellers, as is also Chieftain. A great assortment of fine pompons is disposed of each day.

Roses are in great abundance, but suffer somewhat in demand, as chrysanthemums have the call at present and only prime stock in Premier, Russell, Columbia and Milady are sold readily. American Beauties were scarce in this market last week. The market had a good supply of White Killarney, which sold well.

Carnations are arriving in fine shape and the market has plenty for all demands. Some splendid blooms of all the leading varieties were seen daily. Valley is down in price and $10 per hundred

Club Meeting.

The St. Louis Florists' Club held a most interesting meeting November 11 at the greenhouse establishment of the Bourdet Floral Co. The meeting was attended by sixty-five members, President W. A. Rowe being in the chair and all officers present. After disposing of the usual opening business, the chair called for reports of all committees.

Chairman L. Baumann, of the trustees, said that the trustees have advised giving a dance for the members and their families and asked the club for permission. After a lengthy discussion it was moved that the trustees proceed with arrangements for such an event, each the applications of H. Ochs, A. Bender, J. Heil and P. Kohl reported favorably and they were elected unanimously to membership. All delinquent members, four in number, were dropped from the rolls of membership for nonpayment of dues. The committee on reprinting the by-laws and also a membership roster was ordered to proceed with its work.

The treasurer's report was encouraging, as the club's finances have greatly improved of late. Dr. Brix, son of Adolph Brix, asked permission to speak on the coming festival of the American Legion. The talk greatly interested the members and at the conclusion of his address it was moved to endorse the movement in every way and to help in any activities of the American Legion. Fred Mueller, assistant supervisor of school gardening for the board of education at Washington University, spoke on gardening at the university and asked that anyone present who wished to join a class in gardening notify the club's secretary.

Vincent J. Gorly was then asked for a talk on "The Birthday Flower." Mr. Gorly, in his 30-minute talk, made an excellent impression on the members. After he had shown them what a great benefit it would be to the trade throughout the country if the list as it appeared in The Review recently were adopted, the members moved that the St. Louis Florists' Club endorse the project of birthday flowers and Mr. Gorly's list on which appeared the name of a flower for each month in the year.

A rising vote of thanks was extended Mr. and Mrs. L. Jules Bourdet for the splendid afternoon's entertainment. After partaking of a most enjoyable lunch, with refreshments and cigars, the meet-places all the advertising, showed some attractive advertising to be used, which the publicity committee endorsed. Plans were discussed to bring into the fold all retailers and growers who do not contribute to the publicity fund. It was decided that the next regular meeting of the publicity committee would fall on Thanksgiving evening.

The chrysanthemum show at the Missouri Botanical Garden had an average attendance for the first week of 10,000 people daily and drew exclamations of admiration from the many visitors. The members of the Florists' Club who visited it in a body November 11 say it is the best ever staged at the garden.
The 15,000-bloom single-stem display was a great attraction; as well as the great specimen plants. Messrs. Pring and Jensen, who have charge of the exhibition, say it will continue throughout the rest of the month.

The opening of the new addition of the Stix, Barr & Fuller department store, last week, created a big demand for flowers, and the opening day it looked more like a flower show than a department store. A number of eastern florists sent telegraph orders to local florists for designs and plants.

W. J. Staples, representing the Jefferson Seed Co., Jefferson, Ia., visited the various seed stores last week.

Thomas Carr was confined to his home last week, but from late accounts he is improving and expects to be out by the end of this week. His store has joined the movement to close on Sunday.

sery Co. is under the management of Oliver K. Sanders, who says the season has opened in fine style and business has become steady since the cold weather set in. This store is one of the attractions in the west end and is in the midst of the fashionable residence district.

Vincent J. Gorly, of Grimm & Gorly, left for Memphis, Tenn., November 15 to be present at the Tennessee State Florists' Association meeting. He is to give a talk on "Birthday Flowers."

The E. G. Hill Co., Richmond, Ind., which ships to H. G. Berning, consigned a big supply of splendid blooms in roses and mums last week.

J. F. Ammann, secretary of the National Flower Growers' Association, who was a visitor last week, left the night after the meeting of the Missouri growers, November 16, to attend the meeting of the growers of Iowa, November 17.

Joseph Witek and his assistant, Robert Holmes, are showing artistic and attractive windows at the McPherson avenue store. They report excellent business.

The Market.

Outdoor stock is over and the market is fast getting down to normal. The supply of mums is the only thing that prevents a shortage. The end of the mum is now in sight, and as the growers have been holding everything back until they are over, if the crops of roses and carnations are not timed right there is going to be a big dearth of stock in a few weeks. Extra mums are in good supply, but mediums have been running short; this may be due to the fact that the season is nearing the end. It has been a wonderful mum season, for, while the crops came upon the market almost at once, they sold up fairly well; the only complaint to be heard is that prices were not so good as they might have been.

Pink mums have been scarce all fall. When such a shortage occurs everyone goes in for that stock and the next season floods the market. It might be a good idea to try and find out the quantity of pink mums that will be grown next season and regulate your crop accordingly.

Roses, while they are not in large supply, are in sufficient quantity to meet the demand; as to quality, they could not be better, and the varieties cover a large range. The same thing might be said about carnations; the only thing now is to hurry them along; the first of December is going to be a good time to have a crop of either to cut. From the looks of the market at the present time, growers will be getting as good prices at this time as later in the season.

Violets are not plentiful as yet, and this may account for what few are on the market selling well, as the demand for them is not heavy. A few Paper Whites are to be seen, and the market indicates that if any bulbous stock can

BALL FLORAL COMPANY

Club was held November 8, this being the first meeting since "Say It with Flowers" week. The evening was spent in discussion and tying up any loose ends of this celebration. Every member of the club was of the opinion that it was the greatest stunt ever pulled off by the florists of this city, and they were unanimously in favor of holding another next fall. President Robert L. Graham, Jr., announced an executive committee to have charge of this, with Joseph Merritt, a boy who never tires when work is to be done, as chairman, and twenty-five of the best workers in the club to help him. This committee will be divided into sub-committees, each with a special feature to work out.

The idea for next year, concurred in by everyone, is a mammoth free flower show for a central feature, and everything else during the week radiating from that. This will require a hall like the Armory, where sufficient space may be given to all the florists to hold their fall openings instead of at their own stores. Staging such exhibits as, for instance, a dining room setting to be furnished as elaborately as the exhibitor may see fit, with all interior decorations, such as table decorations and mantel; or a parlor, with a bridal corner arranged. A dozen such spaces so arranged would be one of the best educations Baltimore florists could give the public, and by seeing them all together the public would learn that there are more than one or two florists in the city who can do this work in an artistic manner. The plan is to have such an exhibition each fall, and see to it that the public attends it, and then no man in the city can afford to stay out, for the public will recognize creditable work. Another feature that will be worked out is the street parade, for it special car on the W. B. & A. to visit the show of the Chrysanthemum Society of America and to attend the banquet of the Washington club, held in the Franklin Square hotel. When the car left the Liberty street terminal there were forty-five florists and ladies on board. This was one of the times when there were nearly as many ladies as men. The party left Baltimore at 1 o'clock and reached Washington at 2:30, where they were met by W. F. Gude and Otto Bauer. From that time on it was a personally conducted tour, with these two men in the title role. The first visit was to the chrysanthemum show, which we found to be more of a local than a national show. Too much credit cannot be given to the Washington florists for the support which they gave the Chrysanthemum Society of America, for Charles H. Totty and Pitcher & Manda, the orchid specialists, were about the only out-of-town exhibitors. Mr. Totty had a display that would have given any competitor a good run for his money.

From the show a visit was made to some of the stores. At Z. D. Blackstone's and George C. Shaffer's the ladies in the party were given large mums to wear at the banquet. After a most enjoyable afternoon everyone got to the hotel about 6 o'clock to rest up for dinner.

At 8 o'clock Mr. Gude led the march to the dining room. A splendid dinner was served. Mr. Gude made a happy toastmaster, and the whole affair was just a big family party, for, aside from the president of the district commissioners, no one responded to toasts but florists. Mr. Gude made one departure from the usual routine when he called upon Mrs. Mary Johnston to tell them how she had built up one of the largest florists' businesses in Baltimore. She was too embarrassed to reply, but the crowd would not have it that way, and after much applause she arose and said that "it had been by much hard work and close application." Mr. Totty, who followed her, said it was the best speech he had ever heard, for in those few words she had said all of it.

Among those in the Baltimore party were the following: Charles Patterson and wife, R. Vincent, Jr., R. A. Vincent, Miss Grace Vincent, William F. Keys, John DeGroot and wife, Mr. Williams, William F. Buschardt, Fred Bauer and ### Retail Florists' Club Meeting.

One of the largest meetings of the Toronto Retail Florists' Club was held in the club's rooms Monday evening, November 8. Silas McFadden, president, occupied the chair. There was an excellent program, consisting of a song by James McBean, reports of the Indianapolis convention by George M. Geraghty, Mrs. Percy Waters and L. Waters; southern stories by Harry W. James and sleight-of-hand tricks by Mr. Watson. There were over thirty present from the Hamilton club and their president, Clarence Price, made a happy speech, telling of the benefits obtained from the visiting of the Toronto and Hamilton clubs.

The feature of the program was an address on advertising by W. F. Ralph, of the Norris-Patterson Advertising Agency. In his address he stated that, outside of the problems of management, there was the question of extending the market for cut flowers, potted plants and the like. It is in the solution of this problem that advertising is of such material assistance. Advertising which educates is the kind that really pays dividends. The modern conception of advertising is to create in the mind of the reader a new desire and so extend immeasurably the product advertised. He spoke of the value of cooperative advertising. This is not a substitute for individual advertising, which should supplement cooperative publicity.

He listed many examples of cooperative advertising. It takes time to educate the public. Advertising requires courage, for nerve and for the expenditure of money. The important influence of flowers on character should be one of the keynotes of cooperative advertising. The delivery of flowers by telegraph should be more widely advertised. The public should be taught something about the cost and difficulties of growing flowers.

The address was well received and brought forth many kind remarks and a hearty vote of thanks. Supper was served afterwards and this was followed by a happy hour of dancing.

College Holds Show.

The department of floriculture of the Pennsylvania State College held its annual flower show November 6 and 7. The motif was strictly Japanese. The walls were embellished with brilliantly colored oak leaves, illuminated Japanese screens, lanterns and dragons. The department displayed a large collection of pot chrysanthemums arranged for natural garden effect. The members of the classes in floriculture exhibited baskets of various sizes, which were tastefully arranged with sweet peas, roses and chrysanthemums. The classes also exhibited various funeral pieces and bouquets. The show was of the highest class and considered by all to be the best ever held at State College. The department was greatly indebted to many commercial growers, who generously contributed to the great success by sending flowers. The number of visitors who attended the show was estimated at 5,000, among whom were several growers.

Medals were awarded to the following: Elmer J. Weaver, Ronks, Pa., for Snowstorm sweet peas and seventy-five Pilgrim roses; Charles M. Weaver, Ronks, Pa., for the best collection of small chrysanthemums; Elmer D. Smith & Co., Adrian, Mich., for new introductions of chrysanthemums; Pittsburgh Cut Flower Co., Pittsburgh, for a display of chrysanthemums and roses; S.

S. Penneck, Philadelphia, for a display of chrysanthemums and roses; Crissman Greenhouse Co., Punxsutawney, Pa., for a vase of twenty-five Golden Eaton chrysanthemums; H. S. Brandt, York, Pa., for five Jerusalem cherry plants.

The two most attractive features of the show were the large basket of October Herald grown by the department of floriculture and Mr. Weaver's vase of seventy-five Pilgrim. Prof. E. I. Wilde is in charge of the department at the college and through his efforts the show was made possible. He was ably assisted by Joseph W. Dean, who was formerly connected with Mr. Croll's establishment and who is now a student assistant at the college.

MONTGOMERY, ALA.

The Market.

The first freeze of the season came November 13. Up to that time there had been an abundance of outdoor roses and mums, which had caused a slight slump in sales. From now on, however, sales will pick up and pass previous years. Not everything was killed, but stock was so badly damaged that it can not be used and the buying public will have to resort to greenhouse-grown flowers from now on.

Carnations are arriving in winter form. The blooms are large and are beginning to come with long stems. Roses are coming in fine shape. Cutting back for Christmas has started and prospects for an enormous crop at that time are assured.

Business has been a little slack for the last two weeks, due to a lack of funeral work and the amount of flowers to be found outdoors. However, it will now pick up.

Various Notes.

Rosemont Gardens are cutting some fine mums, such as Golden Wedding, Business has held up quite well during October and so far in November, but the prospects for December are uncertain, as the factories here have laid off a number of workers and those who have not been laid off have had their wages cut materially.

Albert Nodine met with some hard luck Sunday morning, November 7, when his greenhouse was partly destroyed by fire, caused by spontaneous combustion in a heap of soft coal near his work shed. The damage was estimated at about $3,000.

George T. Ryan, of Ryan & Powers, was a candidate for representative on

The autumn season this year has been unusual in this section of the country. The weather has been ideal. The fall flowers, cosmos, dahlias and calendulas, have had a chance to develop as they never have before. It was not till last week that there was frost enough to do much damage. Mums are in the market in quantity and are of good quality. In some cases the growers report that the warm weather has brought their blooms on too soon. However, now that the outdoor flowers are past, they will move rapidly. Good prices are obtained for them. Violets have made their appearance in time for the Yale football games. Roses and carnations are improving each day in quality. In pot plants, ferns and cyclamens are in the lead. A few potted mums are seen occasionally.

Various Notes.

The Florists' Club of Hartford held its regular meeting at the City Club Tuesday evening, November 9. An excellent dinner was served, after which President Joseph F. Coombs called the meeting to order. Five new members were elected. The new advertising schedule was read and was satisfactory to everyone present. A committee was appointed to call the florists of the state together with the idea of forming a Connecticut State Florists' Club. As a state organization we shall be able to do more in the way of legislation and advertising than is possible for a city club to do. S. S. Skidelsky gave a few interesting remarks as to the trade conditions about the country.

before J. Albert Brodrib's window, where he is showing some unusual fish. He has some large goldfish and some climbing perch from India. His flower display is excellent. Last Sunday, November 7, a chauffeur whom he had recently hired took his new delivery truck without permission and, after a ride to Holyoke, wrecked the machine on the return trip. The chauffeur will pay for the damage, which amounted to $400.

Hallgren Bros. have some excellent mums and their carnations are fine in both stem and color. Their delivery truck has just returned from the paint shop and has the slogan "Say It with Flowers" on each side. G. B. M.

The Market.

Business last week was more brisk and stock has been moving in good shape. Cold weather has shortened up the supply a little, but stock is arriving now in much better shape for re-shipping.

Mums of all grades are coming in equal to the demand, but most varieties are about a week or two in advance, due to the warm weather here during October. Most of the late varieties are coming in now, and there will be, no doubt, a shortage of mums for Thanksgiving.

Pompons are also quite fine, and grades and varieties of all colors are in the market.

Roses are choice and equal to the demand. There are also plenty of carnations to take care of the requirements.
The sale of pompons cuts the carnation returns considerably at this time of the year.

Some sweet peas are coming in, but the supply is still limited and these sell on sight. Single violets are also cally each day, but at prices that are almost ruinous to the business. Just what the outcome of this will be, no one can say. Flowers that have been arriving for the last ten days or so were intended for Thanksgiving trade, but now it looks as though it might be necessary to go begging for flowers at that time. Stock, of course, is by no means as firm as it should be and is lacking in keeping qualities. This applies practically to all inside stock. Business comes in spurts and is not at all regular; in fact, it has failed to readjust itself since the election.

There is still, at time of writing, a quantity of outdoor flowers reaching us, although light frosts have killed the greater part of them.

The Market.

Market conditions have changed little in the last week. Chrysanthemums have been arriving in large supply, but there has been no heavy surplus. The demand has been fairly brisk, causing them to be cleaned up daily.

Carnations are plentiful and the majority of good quality. There are, however, some poor ones that can be bought at a low price. Although not in active demand, carnations have suffered little this chrysanthemum season.

Roses have been rather scarce and all those available have been moving well. Neither Easter nor calla lilies are obtainable.

Small pompon mums have been quite popular. Newcomers include a few yellow narcissi and a few more sweet peas. Other miscellaneous stock on the market is mignonette, orchids, calendulas and cut primroses.

Potted plants offered are chrysanthemums, cherries, primroses, begonias and a few cyclamens.

Association Meets.

The members of the Indiana State Florists' Association were the guests of the Richmond florists for the November meeting, which was held Monday, November 8. A considerable number left Indianapolis on the 7:45 special train, while many others motored over.

The train stopped at the E. G. Hill range and considerable time was spent there enjoying the wonderful seedling roses, which were in fine form.

A new greenhouse, built this year, was filled with excellent roses and because of its size, 80x400 feet, it hardly seemed a greenhouse, but like a large rose garden. #### The Market.

Market conditions have changed little in the last week. Chrysanthemums have been arriving in large supply, but there has been no heavy surplus. The demand has been fairly brisk, causing them to be cleaned up daily.

Carnations are plentiful and the majority of good quality. There are, however, some poor ones that can be bought at a low price. Although not in active demand, carnations have suffered little this chrysanthemum season.

Roses have been rather scarce and all those available have been moving well. Neither Easter nor calla lilies are obtainable.

Small pompon mums have been quite popular. Newcomers include a few yellow narcissi and a few more sweet peas. Other miscellaneous stock on the market is mignonette, orchids, calendulas and cut primroses.

Potted plants offered are chrysanthemums, cherries, primroses, begonias and a few cyclamens.

Association Meets.

The members of the Indiana State Florists' Association were the guests of the Richmond florists for the November meeting, which was held Monday, November 8. A considerable number left Indianapolis on the 7:45 special train, while many others motored over.

The train stopped at the E. G. Hill range and considerable time was spent there enjoying the wonderful seedling roses, which were in fine form.

Excellent chrysanthemums of several varieties were interesting features at the range of the Joseph H. Hill Co. A new greenhouse, built this year, was filled with excellent roses and because of its size, 80x400 feet, it hardly seemed a greenhouse, but like a large rose garden. A new, red rose, Red Columbia, looked promising. Preparations were being made for the Rotary Club, which met there the next day.

be done with such a place. Everything was grown to perfection and the place was in immaculate order. Carnations, chrysanthemums, sweet peas, cyclamens, primroses and poinsettias were splendid.

From there the florists went to the Knights of Pythias club rooms, where an excellent dinner was served by the ladies' auxiliary. The meeting was held there afterwards. W. W. Coles presided in the absence of the president.

Three new names were proposed for membership: Carl Rieman, of Indianapolis; C. F. Coffee, of Kokomo, and Mr. McKernan, of Knightstown. W. C. Konzelman, of Greensburg, was elected to membership.

Professor Laurenz Greene, of Purdue University, gave a talk, explaining the proper method of establishing a course in floriculture at Purdue. Other organizations, such as the fruit growers, gardeners, dairymen and cattle breeders, have been successful in establishing courses there and great benefits have resulted. Professor Greene felt confident that the florists could accomplish the same result.

The two "Say It with Flowers" signboards that were given to the association by Max Schling, to do with as it saw fit, were as yet unplaced and Joseph Hill moved that one of these be erected on the Indiana-Ohio state line, on the national road, and the other on the same road, at the other end of the state, on the Illinois-Indiana line. This motion was passed unanimously. It was left with the Richmond and Terre Haute florists to see to their erection.

E. H. Mann, director of the National Flower Growers' Association, explained about the organization in this state and will be no premiums. It is the object of the florists to help make the apple show a success, and in previous years it has had few visitors. In this way they will be able to obtain a donation from the state, similar to the apple societies, to put on an annual show. O. E. Steinkamp also gave a short talk and E. E. Temperley appealed to all present for stock in order to make this a creditable display.

No action was taken concerning the next meeting and adjournment followed, in order to visit other places in Richmond.

At the range of the Fred H. Lemon Co. an interesting feature was the new white rose, Angelus, which is superb. This was also being grown in fine condition by the E. G. Hill Co. and Joseph H. Hill Co. The Richmond Greenhouse Co. had some splendid Laddie carnations.

Various Notes.

Mr. James, of Greene's Flower Shop, is the proud father of a girl.

Joseph Hill and Earl Mann, of Richmond, Ind., went through the Scottish Rite in Indianapolis last week. They are also journeying across the hot sands to the Oasis Murat. Oscar Carlstedt will also be on the same journey through the rite and the shrine.

Joseph Schoey, recently with A. Wiegand's Sons Co., is now with S. T. Hitz & Son.

C. W. Johnson, president of the American Carnation Society and secretary of the Chrysanthemum Society of America, visited Indianapolis November 13.

Baur & Steinkamp won a silver cup with a white seedling chrysanthemum

FRAT-M'S

Frat-Ms are a great help to florists who make funeral work. They are exact reproductions of the official emblems embossed in gold and the different colors as required by each Fraternal and Labor organization.

The florist is saved time and worry in the nuisance of lettering, as well as the keeping of such a stock of wire frames, and different colored flowers. Just use such flowers as you have and then attach a FRAT-M with paste to the chiffon, or by the hanger that comes for each, as a card, and that is all there is to it, excepting the comment and commendatory talk for the florist.

Just pick out a dozen of the most used from the list following, enclosing $2.00 per dozen, and if they don't make you ten times their cost, return those unused and get your money.

Square and Compass, Chapter, Commandery, 32nd Degree, Shrine, Eastern Star, Royal Neighbors, M. W. A., Maccabees, Odd Fellows, Red Men, Knights of Columbus, K. of P., Moose, Jr. O. U. A. M., B. of R. T., B. of R. Clerks, B. of L. E., Br. of Blacksmiths and Helpers, Eagles.

Just give Frat-Ms a trial, you don't have to keep them. We are willing to send them to you and return the money if they don't pay you ten times their cost. Address

Bulis Florist-Boxes

Please the Recipient—Hold Customers

Make your customers remember you for your better parcel post and express service. Use Bulis Corrugated Fibreboard Boxes, so made that they do not crush or gap open in shipment. Your flowers will be delivered fresher and in better condition.

Bulis Boxes are shipped bundled, knocked down flat, and occupy little space. Easy to set up. The covers fasten with Bulis Patented Corner Clasps that never let go. "Fishhook" fasteners hold the corners of the boxes while they are being filled, and reinforce them in shipment. Light weight, strongly reinforced; do not crush under the weight of packages in shipment. Bulis Boxes comply with all parcel post and express regulations. Made in twelve different sizes. Can be returned and used again, many times over, which cuts the box cost. Will stand longer shipments and enlarge the scope of your trade.

G. W. Wilson, of Marion, Ind., sold his greenhouses to Mr. Seabright, of Chicago. E. E. T.

KANSAS CITY, MO.

The Market.

A survey of the greenhouses in this market gives a favorable outlook for Thanksgiving. Growers believe they will clean up on mums and that there will probably be a shortage rather than a surplus. So far there is no overproduction. Iceboxes in the wholesale houses are almost empty after each day's shipping, the shipping being brisker than the local trade, though retailers are far from idle. Prices will be advanced slightly, not so much on the better quality as on the poorer. Orders are being received early, indicating that dealers are preparing for a good business.

Mums are selling this week from $2 to $5, having advanced on the higher grades $1 over a week ago. Roses are from $4 to $15; pompons, 60 and 75 cents; California violets, $2.50 per dozen bunches. Growers are holding their carnation crop for Christmas, so these blooms are scarcer now and are $5 per hundred. Greens are plentiful.

Various Notes.

The William L. Rock Flower Co. is cutting all varieties of mums, anemones and pompons, calendulas, snapdragons and sweet peas. The firm's mums are better this year, being grown on single stems. Last season they grew two on a stem and had large blooms, but not so large as the ones now being cut.

P. A. Manson and William Day are representing the Pinehurst Floral Co. at the Mid-west Horticultural Exposition at Council Bluffs, Ia. Harry Blake, secretary of the company, left Monday, November 15, for Memphis, Tenn., where he will have a large exhibit at the meeting of the Tennessee State Florists' Association.

Herman Mamitsch, whose father is the well-known sweet pea grower of Clifton, N. J., is taking a course in one of the local automobile schools. Before beginning work he visited the greenhouses where sweet peas are grown, comparing methods here with those in the east.

Three thousand invitations have been sent out by the Chandler Landscape & Floral Co. for the formal opening of the new retail store, Saturday, November 20. The store will be open all day and evening. This company has been doing a great deal of landscape work and bulb planting this month.

The T. J. Noll Floral Co. has had a busy week. Christmas supplies are moving well.

Mr. Jacobus, of the Lester Greenhouses, Ottawa, Kan., was a visitor last week.

The Muehlebach Flower Shop has a number of big decorations booked for Thanksgiving day.

The Pinehurst Floral Co. is getting good results on its single disbudded Mensa. The company is also cutting Mensa in yellow and white, a few violets and the first sweet peas.

Lavender mums were the main decoration used by the William L. Rock Flower Co. at the Huttig wedding, at St. Paul's church. Five large arches of greens and mums made an arbor effect in the center aisle, with ten candelabra and bunches of mums. The altar was banked with mums. Orchids and lilies of the valley formed the bride's bouquet and the bridesmaids carried Ophelia roses and pompons.

The Kansas City Wholesale Cut Flower Co. had a big call for mums last week and has had some fancy stock.

J. E. K.

CINCINNATI, O.*The Market.

This market has been unsteady during the last week. Some days there seemed to be a shortage, while on other days there was plenty of stock.

The larger chrysanthemums have been arriving more abundantly and find a ready market. The best are now bringing $5 per dozen, including white and yellow Chadwick, white and yellow Turner and Eaton. So far, there have not been any fancy pink mums, but the season is still early for them.

Roses are moving well, but there is only a limited quantity being shipped in. Snapdragon is arriving in larger quantities and is being sold at $6 to $8 per hundred. Some good cypripediums found a market here and the outlook is good for them, as it is with cattleyas. The first calla lilies of the season went well and Easter lilies are also moving better than they did a week ago.

On the days mums were scarce carnations took a better stride and cleaned up well. Violets are better since the freeze and are selling well at $10 to $15 per thousand.

Exceptionally good leucothoe is arriving at this market. This is something Cincinnati has been without for some time.

Various Notes.

H. W. Sheppard has made changes in the force employed at his store. Ed Huesman, formerly of the William Murphy Co., and R. Phipps are now in his employ. This store has been busy with wedding decorations and debutante parties.

J. T. Conger, of Hartwell, O., has been busy with the sale of fall potted plants and mums.

C. E. Critchell reports having received a shipment of Christmas supplies and also reports a good week in chiffons and southern smilax.

Fred Louis and O. B. Murphy motored to Richmond, Ind., November 14, and report stock there in excellent condition.

J. C. McCullough has left on his annual fishing trip to Florida, where he will remain all winter.

L. H. Kyrk is receiving some fancy leucothoe and December Gem mums.

Ed Murphy, of Price Hill, is recovering rapidly from injuries received in an accident several weeks ago.

The Cincinnati Cut Flower Exchange is receiving some good Golden Wedding pompons from Frank Schuman, Delhi, O.

Among the visitors last week were Julius Dilloff, of Wertheimer Bros., New York; Sam Seligman, New York; George Hampton, of J. G. Neidinger Co., Philadelphia; D. L. Taylor, of the Mono Service Co., Newark, N. J.; D. E. Adsit, Greenfield, O., and John Lodder, Hamilton, O.

PACIFIC COAST DEPARTMENT

Englewood, Cal.—V. M. Christian, formerly an employee in greenhouses here, has entered business for himself. He has built a greenhouse in the last year.

Albany, Ore.—The Albany Floral Co. has changed hands, although it is still under the old name. W. Duncan, the former owner, has been bought out by O. Romaine, who will run the business.

SAN JOSE, CAL.

A. A. Hunt, formerly superintendent of the Arthur Letts estate, Hollywood, Cal., and for several years connected with the California Nursery Co., went into partnership with Arthur Cann at San Jose, Cal., in August. Mr. Hunt manages the landscape department of the business, which he states has been progressing satisfactorily. The firm is known as Cann & Hunt. Mr. Hunt is widely known in the trade, having been located at Millbrook, N. Y., previously, and having been later superintendent of the J. W. Clise estate, at Seattle, Wash.

TUCSON, ARIZ.

John Howe and Mrs. Howe, of 44 Stone avenue, have returned from a trip to Los Angeles and found many orders awaiting them on their return. Mr. Howe says that business has been better this year than any other year since he has been in the trade. He has a large and attractive store.

The Burns Flower Shop is the most recent addition to the retail stores in Tucson, and Mr. Burns reports a satisfactory opening. Flowers for the opening were shipped in from the E. C. Ameling Co., Los Angeles.

Considerable alterations are contemplated by the Tucson Seed & Floral Co.

The Market.

Plenty of good stock and a steady demand for it, is the report from this thriving city. The occasion of the state fair made all the florists busier than usual, many orders having been received from visitors. A great deal of the stock used is shipped from Los Angeles and San Francisco, but there are great quantities of outdoor roses grown here. It is astonishing to see the fine quality of American Beauties grown unprotected from the sun. Both the foliage and the blooms are as fine as indoor stock. These and zinnias are the principal flowers grown here.

Various Notes.

The Donofrio Floral Co. is a busy concern. C. E. Morton and his able crew are always at work. Heavy funeral orders and preparation for the exhibitions at the state fair occupied the attention of the force last week. Several first prizes, including one for wedding bouquets, one for a group of ferns and one for a group of flowers, were awarded to this firm. Henry Morton, son of C. E. Morton, who is employed at the store, stole a march on his friends and was married last week. Plans are being made to enlarge the store in the near future.

The Arizona Seed & Floral Co. had the flower concession at the state fair and had an attractive booth. J. Sievers, formerly of San Francisco, is now managing the floral end of the business. Mr. McNabb reports an increasingly good business in the seed end.

LOS ANGELES, CAL.

Dominic Tassano has returned from the north and reports that he has made arrangements for Christmas greens and berries to be shipped here in large quantities. He says conditions, in regard to labor and quality of stock, were never better than at this time.

While giving Thomas Wright a friendly call, the writer met Charles Gutting, who, by his conversation, is quite ready to handle holly berries, of which he has thirty-five tons to market, the bigger proportion of which is already ordered.

O. C. Saake reports that weegie birds are moving fast, but he has a large supply for the holidays.

A call at the store of the D. S. Purdie Co. showed everyone was busy and that business was rushing.

Frank Lichtenberg says business during the last week has returned to old form and his force is kept busy with funeral work. The opening of the season at the various clubs has added activity and is keeping everyone on the jump. His store is a fine sight for flower lovers. Much credit is due to Mr. Hanson for the way in which he keeps the windows and store decorated.

About thirty florists of Los Angeles, all of whom had subscribed to the recent anti-Japanese publicity fund, had the pleasure of being Thomas Wright's guests at his club for dinner Monday, November 8, and spent an interesting evening. He stated, while sitting at the table, that there were a large number of his friends in the business whom he had failed to get in touch with, or had not thought of until it was too late to have them present. He wished to apologize for the social error and assured his many friends in the business who were not there that it was absolutely an oversight.

(FRASER'S GIANT PICOTEE, PRIZE ZINNIAS)

The blossoms are of new colors, coral-pink, carmine-rose, garnet-red, snow-white, orange and rich apricot-yellow, with various hues at the ends of the petals. Some are tipped with chocolate, terra cotta or rich crimson. This giant strain of ours made its appearance in the Los Angeles market and was highly prized by growers. Highly recommended by William Rapp, President of the Horticultural Society of Pasadena, California. Large trade packet, $1.00; 1/4 trade packet, 50c.

The E. C. Amling Co. reports business better than usual before the holidays.

Albert Goldenson, of Wolfskills' & Morris Goldenson, said that business was improving and that he looked for a good Thanksgiving trade. Orders for fifty dozen mums have already been booked and the outlook is optimistic.

Antoine Soethout, 7427 Sunset boulevard, has sold his nursery business.

SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.

The Market.

Chrysanthemums are stiffening in price a little. The Japanese mums, grown under cloth, are scarcer than they were a week ago, and one or two of the growers say it is difficult to supply them for eastern shipments at the former prices. By Thanksgiving the big mums will be commanding decidedly higher figures than they brought early in the season. The market is still flooded with pompons in a vast variety of colors and sizes. Outdoor mums are much in demand for baskets and for decorative purposes.

Roses are becoming more plentiful and it is gratifying to the growers to note that they are advancing in price, as well as in quantity. In a week it is expected the supply will be still greater. Carnations are becoming more plentiful. Lilies of the valley are coming in fairly well and are showing a larger percentage of buds to the stem than they did earlier in the season. There is just enough valley to supply the local demand.

Violets are abundant and are of good quality. Quantities of violets are being shipped and the local market is consuming them freely. The first California Christmas berries appeared in the market November 10. These are toyon, or Neromeles arbutifolia, which grows

Robert Newcomb has been here on one of his regular visits.

A. Ebel, of Sacramento, has been in town.

A. E. Aldrich, representing the M. Rice Co., Philadelphia, has been calling on the local trade.

J. A. Axell has a large consignment of giganteum lily bulbs on hand, which arrived rather late. He has been disposing of them to his growers, but has been obliged to place a number in cold storage.

Considering the high prices charged for Holland bulbs, they are moving fast, according to C. Kooyman, who received a large consignment some weeks ago.

week and has many orders for Thanksgiving, with three booked already for Christmas. Quaint painted dolls, called "Yaz-Zak" dolls, are a novelty which Joseph's is featuring. The woman artist who designed and is copyrighting them wanted to devise something absolutely new. The material of which they are made looks like fine lawn drawn over fiber, but is really kelp, fished out of the ocean.

Bulbs are featured this week by the MacRorie-McLaren Co. The firm imported a large consignment from Holland and reports a big demand. The landscape department of this firm is rushed with contracts for laying out ornamental gardens for beautiful new homes in various parts of the state, including Santa Barbara, Fresno and Los Angeles.

Autumn tints in flowers and baskets have been featured so much by Podesta & Baldocchi that a rushing trade is reported by the firm in baskets and decorations of this sort. Tithonias seem to be prime favorites to combine with the pale yellows of Santa Barbara poppies and the endless variety of pompon mums.

The Market.

Business last week showed a generally good average, with enough funeral work to keep the market clear of all lines except local mums. California shipments are still arriving, but the cuts from local gardens have been arriving so abundantly that there has really been an oversupply of the smaller types of mums. This led to somewhat lower prices, the only case where a notable change in the selling list was seen for the entire week.

Some of the finest Bonnaffon ever shown here are on the market now. Local Turner is also of good quality. Mums and roses are the leading sellers, although carnations continue the most desired flowers in the market. The local crop of carnations has not developed as expected and each day the growers are unable to fill orders.

There is going to be a heavy demand for yellow and white mums of the larger sizes the last week of this month, when the University of Washington will formally open its new concrete stadium, Local growers are sending in only a few violas, but the lower prices on California violets enable the trade to fill all orders without trouble. The cut of orchids is increasing and some shipping business was taken care of last week. There is still a marked scarcity of lily of the valley and fewer bouvardias, while gardenias are in full supply.

age after the end of this year. At Vancouver, B. C., the Imperial Oil Co. has announced that all its contracts expire December 31 and no new ones will be entertained until July 1, 1921. The company states that during this period it will be without crude asphaltum from the American fields. There has been a report among the Washington growers that the Standard Oil Co. will have fuel oil this coming season only for those consumers who have internal combustion engines of semi-Diesel type. Experiments with the use of powdered coal are being planned, it is said.

The Hollywood Gardens made a special window display last week before the Washington-Stanford football game, using pennants with mums and other fall flowers to bring out the color schemes of purple and gold and cardinal and white. A heavy cut of mums is reported and the supply of roses is also increasing.

The Seattle Fern & Moss Co. reports a continued shipping demand for potted ferns, with buyers showing an especial interest in the dagger variety. This firm is already laying its plans to care for the business expected in cedar roping and Christmas greens.

W. E. Hollingsworth, representing the Western Wax Paper Co., of North Portland, was a Seattle visitor last week. William Langhout also called on the local trade.

Repainting and rearrangement of the main part of the shop has been a feature of the last week's activities for the Burns Floral Co.

Kenney's Home of Flowers reports a continued run of funeral work, sending out last week one entire truckload of floral pieces for a large funeral at a near-by town.

Stuber & Richardson last week delivered some fine pink Turner and bronze mums. They expect a big crop of these for this fall. They expect to clean up on greenhouse tomatoes within a few weeks.

McCoy's produced an attractive window last week through the use of mums, lily bulbs and Chinese decorations. The lily bulbs were shown in low basins and on woven mats. Highly colored Chinese corner pieces were used to add color to the showing.

Nice business is reported from the Woodlawn Flower Shop, with sales running ahead of the total for this time one year ago. There have been plenty of weddings lately to allow the development of formal decorative plans.

Seed Trade News

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.
President, H. G. Hastings, Atlanta, Ga.; secretary-treasurer, C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O.

Most 96-page catalogues would sell as much if cut to sixty-four pages.

IMPORTERS who are paying French accounts are getting better than seventeen francs for a dollar.

J. C. McCULLOUGH has left Cincinnati to spend the winter in Florida, where he will spend much time in his favorite sport, fishing.

ROBERT L. LIVINGSTON, of the Livingston Seed Co., Columbus, O., passed through Chicago on his way to Seattle, Wash. He will spend the winter in southern California.

G. D. EDWARDS, who for the last twelve years has been office manager and credit man with C. C. Morse & Co., San Francisco, is now with Randall-McLoughlin, of Seattle, Wash.

It is estimated that 40,000,000 catalogues are issued by the seed houses of this country, an indication of the amount of money that was contributed out of deflated seed prices to inflated paper costs.

HOLLAND bulb exporters who are being paid in money of the United States are reaping a neat additional profit, on top of their high prices for bulbs, through the conversion of their funds into guilders.

AN advertising data book finds the seed industry of the United States and Canada comprises 3,265 commercially rated members, classified as follows: Contract growers, 175; wholesalers and jobbers, exporters and importers, 325; mail-order dealers, 300; retailers, 2,465.

A SEEDSMAN had a nibble last week on a car of beans of a variety of which he happened to have more to offer, so he queried four other houses and was surprised at the variation in the prices at which the stock was tendered. There was a spread of 2½ cents per pound over the four offers.

GARDENERS who have been holding crops of onion sets in the hope the market would rally are in a bad way if they have no storage. With operators well supplied with sets grown on contract, there is no bid price for crops forced on the market by the inability of the growers to carry them over the winter.

THE Wisconsin Canners' Association, comprising the principal pea packers of the United States, held its annual convention at Milwaukee last week with an attendance said to have included more seed travelers than cannerymen. That may be a somewhat exaggerated statement of the case, but it is literally true that there were more pea peddlers than buyers. Nearly every seedsmen has peas to sell this season.

THE extremely high prices that were paid for soy beans and cowpeas last spring do not seem to have had much effect in inducing growers to save a larger proportion than usual of these crops for seed or grain purposes this fall. To judge from reports received by the bureau of markets of the Department of Agriculture during the week ending November 6, the acreage that will be harvested for seed this

VEGETABLE NOMENCLATURE.

Joint Committee Reports.

Official representatives of the American Seed Trade Association and the Vegetable Growers' Association of America met at Washington October 21 to study the problem of vegetable variety nomenclature. Principally through the activity of Francis C. Stokes, of the Stokes Seed Farms Co., Moorestown, N. J., some active work is under way, which gives promise of real progress in the solution of this problem. Members of the American Seed Trade Association will remember that at the last convention a committee on vegetable nomenclature was appointed as follows: Francis C. Stokes, Moorestown, N. J., chairman; Josiah Livingston, Columbus, O.; Calvin N. Keeney, Le Roy, N. Y.; Robert D. Edwards, Philadelphia; F. G. Cuthbertson, San Francisco, Cal.

Preceding the appointment of this committee, at its annual convention held at Detroit in 1919 the Vegetable Growers' Association of America appointed a committee on the same problem, comprising Francis C. Stokes, chairman; J. T. Crow, Guelph, Ontario; H. F. Thompson, Arlington, Mass., and T. C. Johnson, Norfolk, Va.

August 13, Chairman Stokes mailed a questionnaire to members of the American Seed Trade Association. The replies indicate a quite general support of the standardization of varietal names and promise of assistance from seed firms.

Meeting at Washington.

At the call of Chairman Stokes the following men met in joint committee at the bureau of plant industry, United States Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C.: Francis C. Stokes, chairman of the joint committee; Calvin N. Keeney, Josiah Livingston, Robert D. Edwards, T. C. Johnson and H. F. Thompson. Chairman Stokes invited Dr. W. W. Tracy, Sr., Dr. D. N. Shoemaker and John Tracy to join the committee in their study, which invitation they accepted. This committee spent the entire day and evening in discussing the problem, mapping out a plan of work and shaping a code of vegetable nomenclature to be submitted to the American Seed Trade Association and the Vegetable Growers' Association of America.

One of the first problems presenting itself was the necessity of thorough information in regard to the trade names and comparative market quality of the different vegetables and their varieties. It was quite evident that much assistance must be obtained through a wider circle of men to work on this part of the problem. Consequently, the vegetables were grouped together according to their natural relationship, and some twenty-one committees of the leading authorities in the seed trade of America were suggested as group committees and a plan of work was mapped out for these committees. Since the meeting of the joint committee these men have all received notice of their appointment, and a gratifying response has been received, indicating a general approval of the work in hand and a willingness to cooperate in carrying it out. It has been thought best to delay the publication of the individual committees until the replies have been heard from all the men who have been asked to do this work, and any changes made which are necessary.

Follow St. Louis Code.

The men of the bureau of plant industry came to the assistance of the committee in the study of a code of nomenclature and provided a copy of the St. Louis code, adopted by the American growers. The committee's statement of the code reads:

This code aims to establish a simple and exact system of vegetable variety nomenclature that shall be appropriate, dignified and stable. In consonance with this idea it is urged that all persons conferring names upon new varieties of vegetables endeavor to select brief names that are fittingly expressive of some character, quality, place, person or event, associated with the source, time or place of origin of the variety. The paramount right of the originator, discoverer or introducer of a new variety, to name it, within the limitations of this code, is recognized and established.

PRIORITY.

A name once used in a group shall not be used again therein.

This code applies to all vegetables which are grouped together in common usage without regard to their botanical relationship.

The name first published for a variety shall be the accepted and recognized name, except when contrary to the provisions in this code.

Names appearing in dated publications shall have precedence over those undated.

FORM OF NAMES.

Names of new varieties preferably shall be of one word, but must not exceed three words. Valid names of existing varieties shall not be changed in such a way as to lead to confusion or loss of identity. Possessive nouns must be avoided. It is recommended that an imported variety shall retain its foreign name if not objectionable, or its English equivalent.

A recognition of increased value through improved strains shall be obtained by a descriptive phrase, in brackets, immediately following the variety named; i. e., Bonny Best Tomato (Hill Crest grown) if grown at Hill Crest; (Jenkins' strain) if grown by Jenkins.

REGISTRATION.

There shall be a board of registration, whose duty it shall be to make and preserve records and descriptions of all existing valid varieties of vegetables and to register such new varieties as may be submitted to them, provided they find them to be truly new and distinct. This board of registration shall have authority to issue a certificate to the originator or introducer of a new variety, and such variety shall not be catalogued or offered to the public until such a certificate shall be issued.

It is understood that this board of registration shall make every reasonable endeavor to protect the owner or originator in his property rights of samples submitted.

Organization Needed.

It will be easily seen that some organization will have to be maintained for the carrying out of the provisions of the code. The officials of the bureau of plant industry assured the committee that they are ready to do anything in their power to assist in this work. The general sentiment was that there was no agency in the world better fitted to carry on this type of work, properly organized, and that with close coöperation between the seed growers, seed dealers, vegetable growers and bureau of plant industry, more progress could be made than has ever been anticipated, and that the United States would stand to lead the world in this particular phase of the work. Without question the results of careful, systematic effort along these lines would lead to a much higher grade of seeds, eliminate a good deal of trade which is entirely unjustified, uncover opportunities now provided for men who do an illegitimate business, and in every way promote efficiency. On the other hand, it seems clear that the opportunity in the seed trade or in the production of new varieties will be in no way lessened, but the possibility of real progress without waste of effort will be greatly enhanced.

DANISH SEED CROPS SMALLER.

"The decline in seed prices, which made itself felt all the world over already during the 1918 season, and the incongruity it evolved between the Danish seed culture and the other lines of Danish agriculture," state Hjalmar Hartmann & Co., of Copenhagen, Denmark, in their crop report, "has caused farmers to indulge in some unfounded mistrust about seed growing, equaled only by the optimism they felt a few years ago about the same subject.

"The change, as explained above, is chiefly due to the dropping seed prices, to which must be added that, at the same time, the prices for breadstuffs and feeding materials advanced. The incongruity is the more evident, as these latter products require far less manure and labor than seeds. Already this year the reduction of the seed acreages in size

WESTERN SEEDSMEN MEET.

At Kansas City.

The Western Seedsmen's Association held a meeting at the Hotel Baltimore, Kansas City, Mo., Saturday, November 6. Fred Mangelsdorf, of the Mangelsdorf Seed Co., Atchison, Kan., who was elected president of the association last May, delivered an address at the morning session. He outlined conditions of the seed business, particularly during the last six months, giving a comprehensive view of the problems that have confronted the dealers in that time. H. A. Johns, of the Sioux City Seed & Nursery Co., Sioux City, Ia., a former president of the association; F. W. Barteldes, of Lawrence, Kan.; M. Kurtzweil, of the Iowa Seed Co., Des Moines, Ia.; Clifford Corneli, of the Schisler-Corneli Seed Co., St. Louis, and J. C. Robinson, of Waterloo, Neb., also delivered addresses.

Mr. Kurtzweil suggested that seedsmen watch closely the cost of supplies and packets, as there seems no immediate prospect of these items coming down and they must be reckoned with when it comes to quoting prices.

Publicity.

The subject of publicity received considerable attention. This association is connected with the American Seed Trade Association in the publicity campaign, which was the subject of a talk by A. M. Eldridge, of the Henry Field Seed Co., Shenandoah, Ia. Mr. Eldridge is the representative of the Western Seedsmen's Association in the publicity campaign. He told the members that the next few months would bring forth considerable advertising of garden seed, and newspapers are to be used as an advertising medium. The success of the florists' slogan, "Say It with Flowers," and the amount of advertising they have done has spurred the garden seed dealers to greater efforts. Some of the field seed men hinted that they might put on some sort of publicity campaign also.

There was some discussion of trade acceptances brought on by a talk by J. G. Peppard, of the J. G. Peppard Seed Co., of Kansas City. He said that distributors sometimes put stock where it could not be properly handled, on account of trade acceptances, and the same method sometimes caused purchases to be made on artificially expanded credits. It was the general opinion that seedsmen could avoid trade acceptances by arranging with their banks to pay cash for their stocks.

At the noon luncheon the address was given by ex-Governor W. J. Bailey, of Kansas, a director of the Federal Reserve Bank of the tenth district. In the evening the Kansas City, Atchison and Lawrence seedsmen were hosts to the visiting members of the trade at a banquet at the Hotel Savoy.

Six firms were admitted to membership. The meeting was well attended,

NEWS OF THE NURSERY TRADE

A PAMPHLET on tree surgery has been prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture. It may be obtained by writing to Washington for Farmers' Bulletin No. 1178.

SHADE trees and ornamental shrubs in the United States represent a value of $1,000,000,000, according to the estimate of the United States Department of Agriculture. Ten million dollars' damage is done annually by shade tree insects.

ACCORDING to a recent estimate, there are in the United States 4,500 nurseries, covering 172,800 acres, representing an investment of $52,500,000, employing 45,600 men and 2,279 women, using 14,200 animals, and there are 3,400,000,000 plants or trees growing in the nurseries of this country.

CHESTNUT orchards which have been practically annihilated by a blight of Japanese origin may be restored through efforts of the United States Department of Agriculture. Ten years' experimentation has shown that it is possible to cross the chinquapin, a dwarf chestnut, with the Japanese chestnut, which is blight-resistant, and that the hybrid trees thus produced are quite resistant to the disease and yield nuts of good flavor and quality.

THE twelve best roses, according to a plebiscite taken by the Argus, a newspaper of Melbourne, Australia, are as follows: Madame Abel Chatenay, 455; Frau Karl Druschki (otherwise Snow Queen), 423; Miss Marion Manifold, 313; Lyons Rose, 265; Madame Edouard Herriot, 261; Mrs. Herbert Stevens, 252; General MacArthur, 246; Chateau de Clos Vougeot, 235; Belle Siebrecht, 235; Red Letter Day, 221; Lady Hillingdon, 187; Maman Cochet (White), 185.

EXPRESS EMBARGO LIFTED.

Improved operating conditions have enabled the American Railway Express Co. to remove the limitations on the size of packages, restrictions which seriously hampered some nurserymen's shipments. The American Railway Express Co. announced November 11 that it had removed its embargo on single pieces of express matter weighing 200 pounds or over, which has been in effect since April 5. Nurserymen were allowed to ship single pieces to the weight of 300 pounds.

The embargo was placed at that time on the express traffic throughout the eastern and central states and later throughout the country because of the congestion of traffic and difficult operating conditions. Exceptions were made only in the case of shipments needed in special emergencies.

LABURNUM IN NEW JERSEY.

Will Cytisus Laburnum bloom in New Jersey? E. C. M.—N. J.

There is no reason why laburnums should not succeed in New Jersey. I have seen fine plants in nurseries of that state. Several hundred miles farther north we are able to grow and flower them. In 1919 they were magnificent. In 1920, following the severe winter, they bloomed somewhat more sparsely, but we never have any trouble with the wood winter-killing. Give the plants a good, deep soil which holds the moisture well. C. W.

BLUE SPRUCE FROM SEED.

Would you please give me some information concerning the growing of blue spruce from seed in Pennsylvania? V. R.—Pa.

Procure the seed in the fall; keep it in a cool place over winter and sow in the spring—about April 25 in your latitude—either in a prepared bed outdoors or, better still, in a coldframe.

Prepare the soil carefully. A soil composed of equal parts of leaf-mold and loam is good. Rake out all sticks, stones and other debris and make a smooth surface. Then sow your seed broadcast and use a fine wire screen and dust a light covering of compost over all. It is a good idea to water the bed after sowing and before screening the soil over the seed. Use a watering-can with a rose for watering. A covering of half-decayed leaves can be spread over the bed and left on until the seedlings germinate. Cloth covers might well be placed on the beds and tacked around at the sides to prevent birds from scratching in the frame. From time to time carefully water the beds or remove the cloth cover during showery weather.

After the seedlings germinate and through the first season you should keep lath shades over them. These can be

We are sending you under separate cover a root of our peonies and beg you to tell us if there is any remedy for this disease. These peonies have been doing well until affected with the disease. We shall appreciate an early answer, because we are just resetting our peonies. C. G.—Ia.

The peony disease is probably due to using fresh horse manure so freely that it has come in contact with the roots. We notice the inquirer is resetting these peonies; if so, all of those affected portions should be cut away and the tubers should be planted in rich new soil where manure has not been recently introduced and on ground not previously occupied by peonies. Lift them again in two years' time, cutting away the diseased portions. As a rule this treatment followed for a couple of times will eradicate the disease. Those badly infested would better be thrown away and, if not a choice variety, may not be worth this expensive treatment.

Some people advise dipping them in Bordeaux mixture.

Peterson Nursery.

PAINESVILLE, O.

A cold wave struck here November 11 and at the present writing is still with us, delaying shipping to some extent. However, there is usually at least two weeks of Indian summer in this section, which will afford opportunity to prepare for the winter.

George Martin, who for a number of years was in partnership with his brother, J. F. Martin, has launched out for himself and intends to grow perennials as a specialty. Mr. Martin has about fifteen acres under cultivation.

Mark Welch, grower of a general line of nursery stock, is having an exceptionally heavy demand this fall. Mr. Welch does a wholesale business only.

J. J. Hedderman, aster and sweet pea grower, intends to grow perennials during the coming season.

Carl Hagenburger, at West Mentor, has an extra fine lot of potted plants coming on for the holiday trade.

John Merkle, in speaking of the coal situation, said there is a decided difference between the cost of growing flowers nowadays and formerly. A few years ago the coal bill was $1,100; now it is $3,700 for the same quantity.

James B. Knight, Willoughby, O., has recently purchased more land.

The demand among local growers for perennials this fall surpasses that of all previous years. This is largely due to Martin Kohankie's withdrawal from business, as he was the largest grower in this section. His trade is going to some of the smaller nurseries. T. J. M.

FERNS

We wish to call particular attention to our fine stock of Ferns which we are offering at this time. We can give extra value in all of the sizes, and would recommend that orders be placed at once for shipment during November and before the cold weather sets in. There is no danger now of frosts, and later on, ahead of the holidays, there is always a risk in shipments being delayed and plants damaged, whereas if you have your orders shipped this month, they will go through promptly and you will have them on hand when you want them for your holiday trade. Besides, we can give you exceptionally good value for shipments now.

DENVER, COLO.

The Market.

There was not much change in the market during the week ending November 13. Roses are none too plentiful, owing, no doubt, to the heavy pinching for the holidays. Carnations remain about the same. Chrysanthemums are fairly good, but are going fast and it looks as though there would be few left for Thanksgiving. Sweet peas are of good quality, but a little scarce. The first Paper Whites are beginning to arrive.

Various Notes.

The second meeting of Denver Florists was held with the Denver Wholesale Florists Co., November 5. After the reading of the minutes of the previous meeting, J. Roberts, chairman, gave the committee's report, saying that it would not be advisable to hold a "Say It with Flowers" week this year, with so short a time for preparation. By unanimous vote the temporary officers and committees were made permanent and H. A. Clausen was chosen vice-president. The feeling seemed to prevail that an elaborate organization was unnecessary and that it should be entirely for business for the present, with no regular meetings. An assessment for both growers and retailers was agreed upon that would put at the disposal of the advertising committee about $400 monthly.

The Boldt-Lundy House of Flowers had an especially attractive window last week, with novelty baskets set off by large vases of alternate Yellow and White Turner mums.

The America Flower Shop had a display of Parisienne window baskets.

Mr. Braun, of Cheyenne, Wyo., also Mr. Flohr and John Krauss, a former Denver grower, from Washington, were visitors last week.

Greenhouse Heating

SUBSCRIBERS are invited to write the editor of this department with regard to any details of greenhouse heating that are not understood. When information is desired regarding the capacity of boilers, or the amount of radiation required for a greenhouse, the needed temperatures should be stated in the inquiry, as well as the amount of glass in the side walls, and the dimensions and general arrangement of the greenhouses. It is often helpful, also, to have a sketch showing the location of the houses.

HEATING TWO HOUSES.

As I am now completing my greenhouse and am ready for the heating plant, I should be glad to receive advice about it. I am sending a rough sketch of my two houses, which are 16x40 each. They are eight feet to the ridge and five to the eaves. Half-way up the sides there are double wood walls filled with sawdust, and the rest of the structure is glass. The houses run east and west. There is no partition between the two houses. They are protected on east and west sides.

The pipe I have is 2-inch, 3-inch and 4-inch. The boiler is a 5-section one made by the American Radiator Co. Heating is by hot water. In each house there are two raised beds three feet wide with pipes running under them and between these the center beds are six feet wide and built on the ground.

In the first house I have arranged four 2-inch return pipes under each raised bed. In the second house I have four 2-inch pipes under the south bed and three 2-inch pipes under the north raised bed. I have cut-offs at inlet and outlet of these pipes.

Would you advise using one or two lead pipes, and of 3-inch or 4-inch piping? The boiler return is 4-inch, that being the size of the lead.

J. R. S.—Ind.

Neither the letter nor the diagram indicates clearly just what size of pipes has been used for the leads. It would be preferable to use two 2½-inch flow pipes in each house, placing them upon the plates, but it would suffice if one 3-inch flow were carried under the ridge of each house.

The temperature desired in the houses is not stated, but flows of suitable size would probably secure 55 to 60 degrees in zero weather in the first house and 50 degrees in the second. If 60 degrees is desired in the first house when the atmospheric temperature is 10 degrees below zero, it would be well to put in an additional return on the north side. Two more pipes would increase the economy of firing, especially in severe weather.

BOILER TOO LARGE.

I am building a small lean-to, 12x35 feet, on the south side of my residence. This runs east and west and is well protected on the east by another building. I want to keep a temperature of 55 degrees in the coldest winter weather. The ridge is six and one-half feet from the ground. The south slope is ten feet long and the north is four feet long. On account of windows in the residence, it is necessary to have a low roof. The front and end walls are each eighteen

Heat Your Houses with Kroeschell Boilers

YOU'LL BE RICHER

TO THE MAN WHO NEEDS A BOILER

"The customer's interest first"—is the basis of the KROESCHELL standard. This principle makes the KROESCHELL Policy the most liberal of all in the Greenhouse Boiler business. The great variety of boilers that we make places us in a commanding position. It is the KROESCHELL principle to supply only the type of boiler best suited for the conditions. For this reason we always furnish the most efficient boiler unit in every case.

The KROESCHELL has proven its worth in many of the large establishments in this country. It has frequently been selected by the most careful buyers in competition with all other types of boilers. Its efficiency and capacity are completely beyond any other boiler.

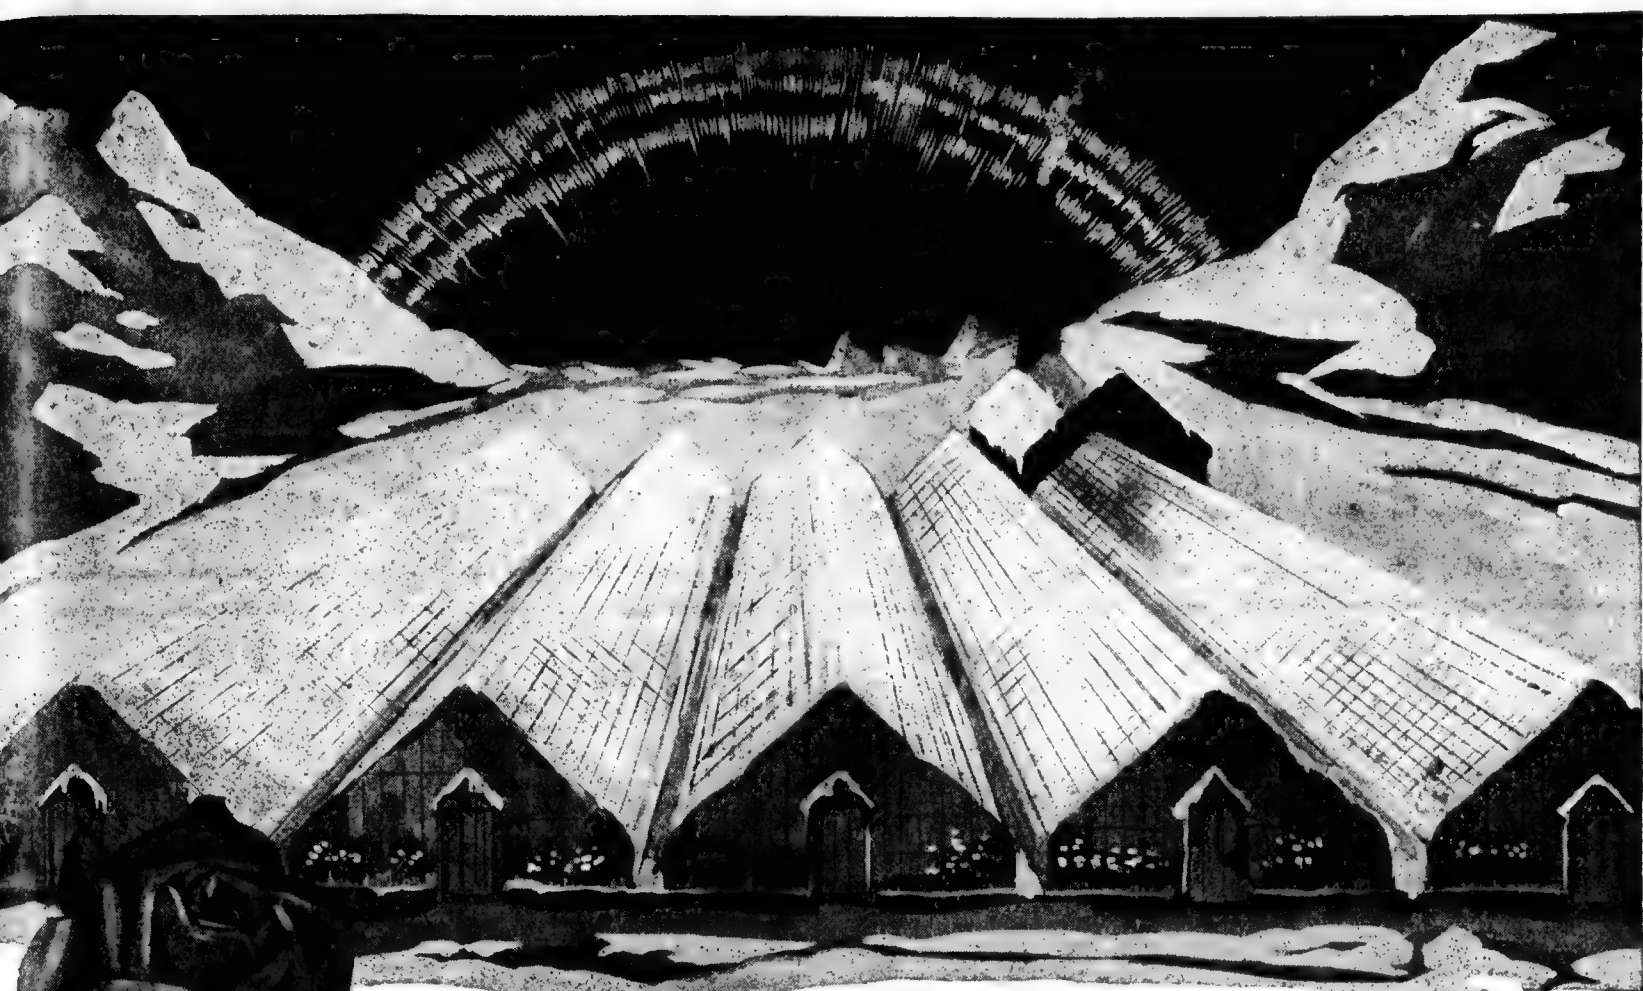

KROESCHELL BOILERS have no bulky, soot accumulating surfaces—you avoid the disagreeable work and trouble indispensable to cleaning boilers with complicated and tortuous back and forth passages.

The superiority of our boilers has resulted in the removal and abolishment of hundreds of cast iron sectional boilers—in every instance KROESCHELL BOILERS give more heat with the same piping with less fuel.

Summer Temperature in Winter Time!

ABSOLUTE CONTROL of temperature conditions in your greenhouses in June and January alike—is what you get from the easily installed MOREHEAD SYSTEM. Just attach the comparatively inexpensive Morehead Back-to-Boiler System to your present boiler equipment and you can dismiss the winter months' problem from your mind.

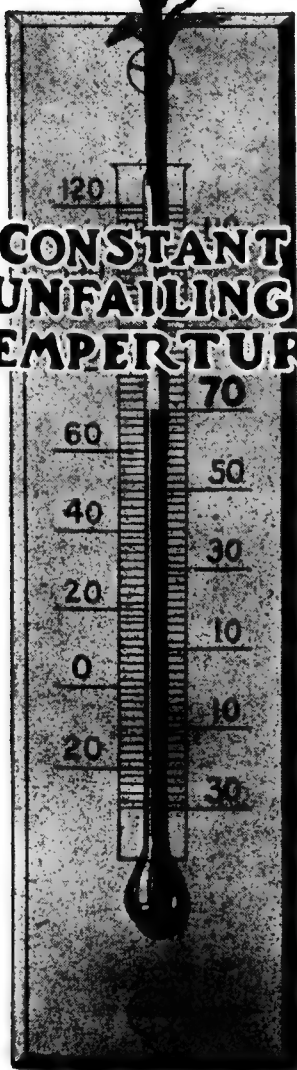

Substitute for the steam pumps you are perhaps using now—the Morehead System will eliminate sluggish circulation forever—and keep all your steam pipes clear of condensation—returning it to the boilers immediately as pure, hot feed water—in just the condition to use again with the least consumption of fuel.

Now—before the frigid blasts of another winter are upon us—is the time to find out what the Morehead System can do for you. Write immediately for proof that the coal man actually pays for your Morehead System in a few months' time—as well as copies of letters from progressive florists who find the Morehead System invaluable in growing prize-winning flowers.

inches high, composed of a double thickness of drop siding with a thickness of the heaviest tar paper on the market between them. This wall is banked to the eaves with clay. On account of the low roof, a path has been sunk between the benches. The east end of the house above the 18-inch wall will be glass and the front six feet of the west end will be glass. The other part of the west side will contain the door.

I have a hot water boiler, rated for 600 feet of radiation, which I should like to use. This can be installed in the basement of my residence twelve feet from the west wall of the greenhouse and four feet from the north side of the house. I want to run a coil of six 1½-inch pipes the full length of the house, under a bench sixteen inches from the ground, and a coil of three pipes along the bank of the path, as the bench nearest the front of the house is so low. Will that be enough radiation and what size of flow pipes is best to use? Also what is the best method of connecting? The boiler has two openings for feed pipes and one for a return.

W. D. M.—Wis.

Although the boiler is nearly three times as large as is necessary to heat the proposed greenhouse, it may be used with a fair degree of fuel economy if careful attention is given to the firing.

I should suggest the use of two 2½-inch flow pipes, running one on the wall of the residence just below the gutter of the greenhouse, and the other on the purlin posts near the glass about halfway between the gutter and the ridge on the south slope of the house. These two flow pipes with nine 1½-inch returns would, if properly distributed, heat the house to 55 degrees when it is 15 to 20 degrees below zero outside.

COAL?—Save It with this!

Coal Costs too Much to Waste Use the Farnsworth System to Save It—

Here is a good draining system for greenhouses. The system that florists have been using for handling the condensation from their greenhouses has in a majority of cases been very unsatisfactory and for that reason the Farnsworth Engineers have given the matter considerable study and have worked out a very efficient and very satisfactory Closed Loop System which will be of interest to the owner of a greenhouse, because we are able to positively eliminate all water and air from the coils, hold the condensation under pressure and deliver it directly into the boilers with no heat loss, other than that due to direct radiation from the common return pipe.

The system is very simple and requires practically no attention. It works automatically and keeps the temperature of the coils even at all times, and works satisfactorily on any pressure, depending upon the requirements of your greenhouse.

The line cut shows a Farnsworth Condensation Pump located inside the greenhouse at some low point. This machine handles the condensation as mentioned above and delivers it into a return line leading back to the boiler house. Above the boilers is located a Farnsworth Duplex Boiler Feeder. This machine has two chambers, one of which is always receiving while the other is delivering into the boilers, so that the condensation is never backed up in the return line.

Each greenhouse has a Farnsworth Pump to handle its condensation and each pump discharges into the common return line leading back to the Farnsworth Duplex Boiler Feeder. The pumps are small, so that they can be easily located as shown.

We wish to be frank with the greenhouse proprietors. We have not pushed the sale of Farnsworth equipment with you because of the demand made upon us for our systems by paper mills, textile mills, sugar refineries and big plants where heating and drying conditions required this system. We are now ready to produce results for you. Write us for details.

bench and the other three in the center walk, I judge that the temperature near the north side might be 60 or 65 degrees, while close to the glass on the south side it would not be more than 40 and perhaps as low as 32 degrees in severe weather. The bench along the south wall appears to be about five feet wide and is only eight inches from the ground. I should advise excavating under this bench so that the ground would be sixteen inches from the bottom of the bench, using five of the returns as an under-bench coil and placing only four in the other coil. There should be an opening three or four inches wide between the outer edge of the benches and the walls.

Miter the east end of each coil to provide for the expansion of the pipes. Cast-iron headers may be used for the coils, or they may be built up of tees and short nipples, using three tees, 2½-inch, 2-inch and 1½-inch, respectively, with 1¼-inch side openings and a 1¼-inch ell to receive the pipe forming the south line in each of the coils. The headers at the other end of the coils should be built up in the same manner and the main returns connecting the coils with the heater should also be 2½-inch. These may be joined into one 3-inch.

EL PASO, TEX.

The Potter Floral Co. probably grows more of its own flowers than any other firm in El Paso. This concern has thirteen large houses and this season 20,000 mums have been produced. In one of the houses roses are grown, two contain sweet peas and in other houses 30,000 carnation plants have been set. Potted plants, including cyclamens and geraniums, as well as pompons, are also grown. This, with the stock grown under lath, makes a large growing establishment.

H. W. Bierhorst reports that business has been good. He is handling a choice line of bulbs.

"A little between seasons," is the comment of J. Leebach, of the El Paso Seed Co., when asked regarding business conditions.

PITTSBURGH.

The Market.

Pittsburgh froze up for the winter Thursday night, November 11, and there is no more outdoor stock of any kind. Trade has been good along all lines, daily cleaning up in the wholesale houses, and stock of all kinds is bringing good prices. Chrysanthemums are good stock; in fact, this market is about cleaned up on locally grown mums. There are plenty of good pompons and they find ready sale.

Roses are now up to the winter standard and are bringing winter prices. They clean up every day. There are some sweet peas, but the demand seems to be for larger flowers. They will now, however, come into their own. Paper Whites have made their appearance, but are not much of an attraction. American Beauties are nearly all of the shorter grades and move more slowly.

Greens of all kinds are plentiful. The demand for early shipments of boxwood is in evidence. Many prefer to get their stock in and take care of it rather than take a chance on the later shipments, should the weather turn wet and cold in the south. Some fine ground pine is being offered.

Various Notes.

A new flower store has been opened at Sharon, Pa. George Baker is the proprietor and looks forward to a good business this winter.

J. Murchie, of Sharon, Pa., has been busy with funeral work and has a fine lot of potted plants for Christmas.

Adgate & Son, of Warren, O., report a good fall business, with plenty of funeral work.

Let's Look This Production Situation Square in the Face!

This year, many of you had plenty of rain, and a good cut. Stock didn't all bring top-notch prices, but it cleaned up fairly well, and made a good summer season.

But suppose there had been two, three or four weeks with no rain, in midsummer, causing your crops practically to fail?

Then 'twould be a very different story.

And yet, you know from past experience (which you can verify from Weather Department rain records) that the chances are nine to one, you won't get enough rain at the right times next season.

And you know how, in any modern business, "production" is planned for, and safeguarded against all possible interruptions.

Isn't it good sound business sense, then, for you at least to find out how much it would cost to remove the dry weather risk forever from your business?

Just fill in this blank, and mail it to us, and we'll quote you exact price on "The Skinner System," with the wonderful "Silver Stream" nozzle that has revolutionized overhead irrigation.

Stock did not move as briskly as it should at this time of the year until Saturday, November 13, which was clean-up day. Everything moved then with the exception of a few Turners. For some reason or another, the trade will not buy Turner at any price. They seem to be afraid of this variety because it has a weak stem and falls to pieces easily. Besides an abundance of chrysanthemums, there is not much on the market. Pompons and roses sell well and there are a few Easter lilies. Narcissi have made their appearance and a few carnations are obtainable.

The Market.

Magnificent chrysanthemums are being sold in Columbus. The Michigan-Ohio State football game, November 6, stimulated the sale of them and the florists had an exceptional day. Pompons hold a place next to chrysanthemums and roses and carnations are doing well. Sweet peas are slow.

Most of the bulbs for fall planting have been received.

Local florists sent exhibitions to the chrysanthemum show which was staged in conjunction with the horticultural show of the Ohio State University, November 11 to 13. The mums were given to patrons of the show on the closing evening.

The Fifth Avenue Floral Co. has had such a large supply of chrysanthemums that it has been able to supply wholesale trade, as well as its own retail business. Some of the extra large mums retail for $1.

THE TEST OF TIME

MANY HOUSES look good on paper and when they are new, but not all stand the only real test: THE TEST OF TIME. You will find among the "old-timers" many Dietsch houses that have stood this test and been found not wanting. Dietsch houses are designed and built on correct, scientific and practical principles. It is not our aim to meet our competitors' prices, for that would be inconsistent with good materials. To the grower who does not thoroughly investigate and compare, our proposition does not appeal.

THIS IS NOT THE TIME to build greenhouses, but it is a good time to think about it. Dietsch construction has stood the test of years. Not only are Dietsch houses among the oldest standing today, but you will find each house an improvement over the last. Our construction is advancing with the times. We advocate nothing that has not proved its value. There will be better houses than we are now building, and they will be built by us.

WHEN PLANNING YOUR NEW HOUSES, it will pay you to investigate Dietsch greenhouse materials and methods of construction. We build most efficient and durable houses at moderate cost. Construction of wood exclusively or wood and iron combined, using each where it will best serve its purpose.

LAKE FOREST EXHIBITION.

The third annual chrysanthemum exhibition, given by the North Shore Horticultural Society, was held at the Durand Art Institute, Lake Forest, Ill., November 6 and 7, and was a great success.

In the big groups of mums, F. W. Sparks, superintendent to A. B. Dick, duplicated his success of last year, winning for the second time the silver cup given by Mrs. L. F. Swift. The winner of the second prize was C. Geppert, gardener to L. F. Swift, and third place was taken by M. Twinney, superintendent to J. O. Armour.

This last exhibitor led in the class calling for a group of single mums, R. Chalmers, gardener to R. J. Thorne, being second, and C. Geppert third. This last exhibitor took first for a group of pompons.

For a group of ornamental foliage plants, F. W. Sparks was first and M. Twinney second.

There were six entries in the class for eighteen exhibition blooms, six varieties, three of each, and here F. W. Sparks led, followed by M. Twinney and H. Yakes, gardener to C. Schweppe. Principal winners in the other classes for this type of blooms were R. Chalmers, gardener to R. J. Thorne, and E. Borg, gardener to D. M. Cummings.

For a vase of mums decorated with autumn foliage, these last two exhibitors were first and second, respectively. For collection of 'singles, M. Twinney led, D. McNaughton being second.

In specimen plants, R. Chalmers won in the various classes. F. Kuehne, gardener to C. M. Carr, took first prize with

Black Glazing Cement

A PRACTICAL glazing material made for application in a practical manner. No clumsy, slow working tools necessary—simply a putty bulber or two and a filling gun to load same—furnished free to users.

Ajax Black Glazing Cement has been used throughout the country for several years with excellent results. To prospective purchasers we can give names of satisfied users in every greenhouse center—over a hundred names in Chicago locality alone.

Not Affected by Extreme Heat or Cold

Our product is a cement-like composition of Asbestos Fibres, and heavy, semi-drying hydro-carbon oils. Its exceptionally long life is due to the fact that it never thoroughly hardens like old fashioned white putty. The outside surface (which is exposed to the oxygen of the air) forms a resilient tough skin, below which the material remains soft and plastic. Because of this we guarantee that the coldest weather will not cause it to become brittle or pull away. On the other hand our product is warranted not to sag or run in extremely hot weather due to its being inter-laced with the Asbestos Fibres.

As Ajax Black Glazing Cement never thoroughly hardens, glass glazed with it can be shifted when desired without the loss of breakage that so often results when hard drying white putties are used.

Easily applied with a bulber. No clumsy tools necessary.

FREE OFFER

To facilitate the application of our product we furnish the following apparatus free of charge:

With Each Barrel

2 Bulbers

1 Gun for filling bulbers

With Each Half-Barrel

1 Bulber

1 Gun for filling bulber

Lower Cost than White Putty

Compared with the old fashioned White Lead putties, Ajax Black Glazing Cement not only lasts years longer, but is a great deal lower in initial cost.

One gallon is sufficient to glaze 500 lineal feet of sash.

CYPRESS BY TEST. SUBSTITUTES BY TALK.

Is there value to you in an endurance test of 50 years in greenhouse sash? It is reported to us that sash made of heart Cypress by a prominent greenhouse contractor in Chicago and placed in position in a greenhouse at Des Plaines, Ill., in 1868, are still doing service.

Jacob Fries, Bethlehem, Pa., has Cypress sash that have stood the racket for 30 years and are still on the job. And these are not isolated cases—they represent no more than a fair test of "The Wood Eternal" for greenhouse use.

It will serve you as well and save you the nuisance and expense of repairs and replacements.

The argument backed by such facts cannot be answered by mere talk. Ask the manufacturer or contractor who wants to give you a "substitute" for Cypress to cite you to an endurance test of 30 or 50 years to the credit of the so-called "substitute."

That is no more than a fair precaution on your part—good, ordinary business sense.

If he would meet the Cypress record with more talk, and no test, then there's a "nigger in that wood-pile." You know you would better pass up the "substitute" and stick to the real article, which is Cypress.

"PECKY" CYPRESS. You greenhouse men know how common it looks and how uncommon it lasts. The U. S. Govt. Rept. (Forest Service Bul. 95) says—"That the disease (which produces the 'peck') has been a long time preying upon Cypress timber is apparent from an examination of Cypress logs dug from alluvial deposits many feet below the present level of the Gulf of Mexico. Some of that prehistoric timber is pecky, though it has been buried during a period estimated at no less than 30,000 years. . . . The effect of the disease (known as 'Pecky') . . . is believed to act as a preservative . . . and to hinder decay."

Is 30,000 years' "hindering of decay" long enough for YOUR greenhouse?

There is no known record of rotten "Pecky." Use nothing else for benches and bench standards. It is cheap, too. A postal will do, a letter is better—either brings a booklet or two from the famous CYPRESS Pocket Library (a strictly authoritative reference work). Vol. 3 is all about "GREENHOUSES." It is FREE. Send for it. Also ask for Vol. 2, on "Pecky"—a money saver. Take no hearsay. GET THE FACTS. Then ACT. Vol. 4 is the Barn Book; Vol. 20 is "All Farm Needs Book"; Vol. 36 is the "Carpentry Book," in which a dozen hard jobs of carpentry are made easy, and Vol. 37 is the Big, New Silo Book. All contain plans for building and are profusely illustrated.

Asbestfalt

An Elastic Cement That Expands and Contracts With the Weather

Make your greenhouse weather-tight with Asbestfalt, the elastic cement that never gets hard, cracks or peels in cold weather or runs in hot weather.

$1.25 per gallon. Why pay more?

You can't get anything better no matter how much more you pay. The ingredients are of the purest; weighs but 10 pounds to the gallon.

With the scarcity of coal and its high prices, the careful application of Asbestfalt will more than pay for itself by keeping your greenhouse air-tight.

To insure best results, apply Asbestfalt with our Liquid Putty Machine, price $2.00. With every barrel purchase of Asbestfalt, one machine free.

King GREENHOUSES

Here is a 60-foot wide King Steel Flat Rafter House.

This is our standard design of framing for houses from 50 to 65 feet in width.

The distance between interior posts varying with the width.

We have another design for houses 68 to 76 feet wide.

These standards we know are right.

This house was built for one of the largest growers in Pennsylvania.

Read What He Says

"It has more light than any house I ever saw—I cannot supply the demand for these roses—It is the best growing house in the world."

Some Facts About Wide Houses

A house 20 feet wide has  $6\frac{1}{3}$  cubic feet of air per square foot of glass.

A house 60 feet wide has  $10\frac{3}{4}$  cubic feet of air per square foot of glass.

Does this mean anything to you?

Think it over.

When you think of wide houses think of KING.

POINSETTIAS IN COLD HOUSE.

I have sixty 8-inch pans with three poinsettias in each. They have not grown evenly. Some are not twelve inches high and others are twice that height. The soil is sandy loam mixed with considerable cow manure. The plants are thrifty now, but have not grown any and I should like to know how to handle them from now on. My greenhouse is not heated.

C. D. O.—La.

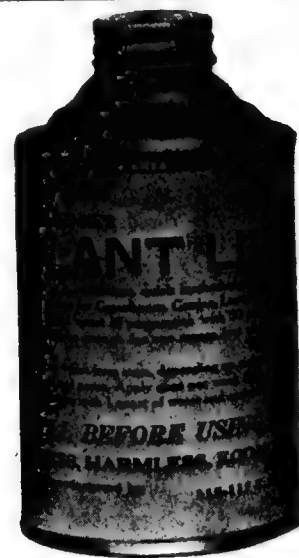

The culture of poinsettias is not difficult up to a certain stage; viz., when the flower bracts begin to form and weather grows cold. When cold nights arrive and temperatures drop sharply under glass, you will note that the poinsettia leaves hang down, showing plainly how they feel the cold. This is the season when they need great care, particularly in the matter of watering. Yellow foliage will be the result of keeping them either too wet or too dry. Attempt to keep the soil fairly moist and, as the bracts develop, apply weak doses of stimulant in the form of liquid manure. Once a week will be beneficial. As your greenhouse is not heated, it will be necessary to keep the soil a little drier when the bracts are fully developed.

C. W.

Amelia, O.—Rolland E. Seales, for many years a truck gardener here, plans to devote most of the fifty-four acres he has under cultivation to flowers. He will grow peonies, dahlias, asters and gladioli.

Gable Bracings in the Joseph Heacock Big Rose House, at Roelofs, Pa.

More Gabble About Gables

Why all this gable-gabble?

For exactly the same reason as why all this talk about loosened glass.

On one depends much of the other.

If a gable gives, the glass goes.

It goes, because the giving of a gable means a give to the entire frame.

It's the give that loosens the glass.

Take a tree.

A pine for example.

There it stands, strong and sturdy.

Winds blow against it, and it never breaks.

But it gives.

Because of the give, it doesn't break.

Stiffen that same tree, if it were possible to do such a thing, by putting another one beside it, and clamping them together.

Still they would give and sway.

Now suppose you had braced that tree by running braces against it from the ground up, what would have happened?

There would have been no give below the braces, and a lot less above them.

It would seem, therefore, that with present day big houses, having such tall gable rafters; that stiffening them is not enough.

That's why we brace ours.

It's one of the big reasons why our houses have so little loosening or breakage of glass.

Braces run from the gable rafters direct into the ground, where they are securely anchored in concrete. Other braces go direct to the ridge.

To further take the wind's thrust off the frame, we tie brace the first three columns, running the tie from the bottom of the first one, to the middle of the second, and up to the top of the third.

We have in mind a big house, near the gable of which was built a high board fence to break the terrific force of the wind against that big flat gable.

That board fence was braced against the wind, the way we brace our gables.

It has always been our contention, that if the greenhouse gable had been similarly braced; there would have been no necessity for the fence.

What do you think about it?

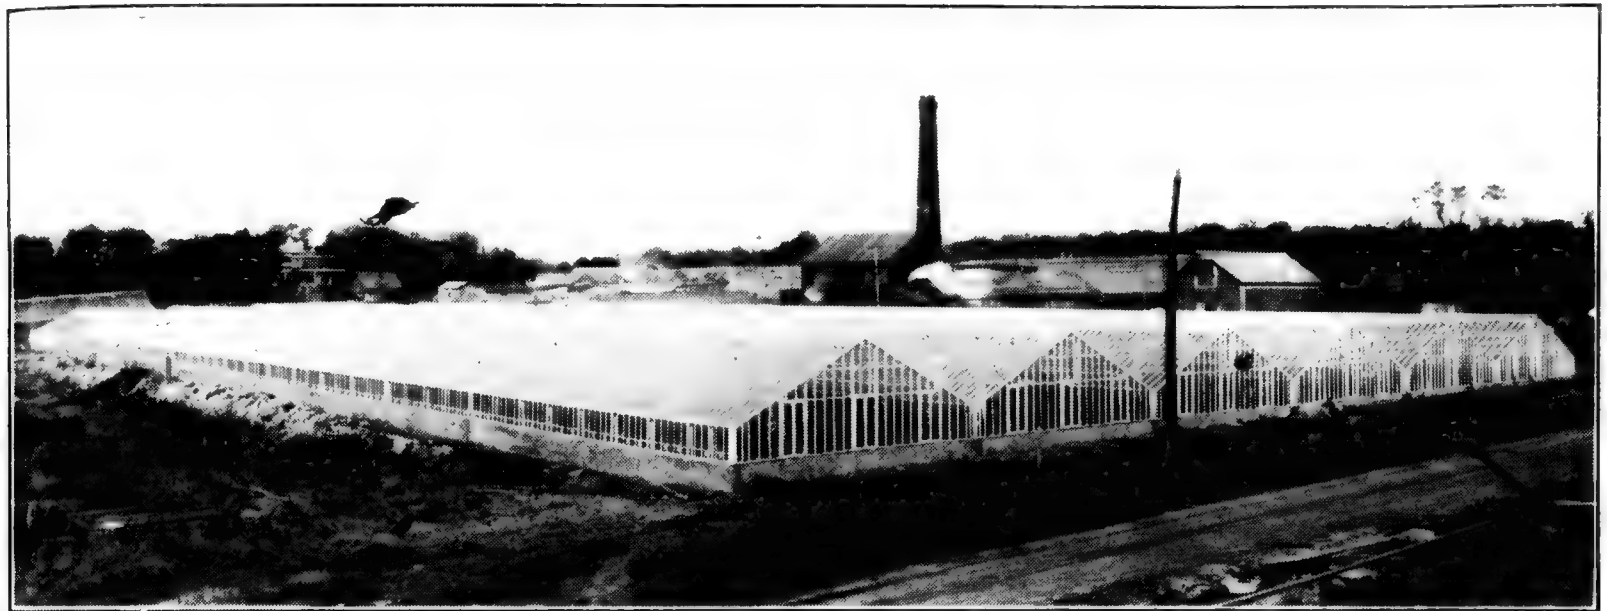

You know we go anywhere for business, or to talk business.

At An Attractive Figure

A NEW IRON FRAME GREENHOUSE And 70 Acre Farm

Between Philadelphia and Trenton, at St. Leonard's, Bucks Co., Pa.

Here is one of those opportunities that come once in a lifetime. An opportunity to buy a completely equipped new greenhouse plant with ample land. Everything is all ready for starting at once, even to the bench soil which is in piles at each end of the house. The proposition in detail is as follows:

A new Lord & Burnham greenhouse, 70 feet Wide, 603 feet long. Complete with benches, steam vacuum heating, watering and manure water systems.

1. Workroom building and boiler house 30 by 111 feet. Iron frame construction with roof and sides of double asbestos coated steel sheets.
2. Two 135 horse-power Burnham tubular boilers, giving ample capacity for another greenhouse same size. Room for another boiler for third house.
3. Radial brick chimney.
4. Concrete manure water pit holding a carload at a time.
5. 70 acres of fertile farm land.
6. 2½ story 9-room frame residence with cellar, 32x34.
7. 6-room, 2-family stone tenement house 30x16, with wing 12x14. Has garret and cellar.
8. Frame barn 58x52 with stone foundations.
9. Frame shed, 14x58.
10. Cow barn, 14x30.
11. Chicken house, 14x14.
12. Wagon house, 26x34.
13. Wood shed, 14x16.
14. Property faces on two main highways.
15. Railroad station within 500 feet from greenhouse.

It will be sold at the regular price of the property, plus the cost of the greenhouse layout as it stands. The price for the layout will be based on the cost of materials and equipment AS IT WAS TWO YEARS AGO. THIS YOU AT ONCE CAN SEE MEANS A DECIDED SAVING OVER PRESENT PRICES. It is less than they are likely to be for some time to come.

Although it was originally planned for a Rose range, it is ideal for practically any growing purpose. For full particulars and terms, write direct to our main office at Irvington.

OF NEW CROP

Formosum Lilies

Mostly Dark Stems

$47.00 PER CASE
Less 5% for cash with order

FORMOSUM LILIES throw more flowers than any other variety. Plant as late as January for Decoration Day. Grow cool; need no forcing. Put your Giganteum in storage, as the new crop is very short. If you desire to take advantage of this low offer on FORMOSUM, we will place same in storage and deliver to you as wanted. FORMOSUM do well when planted as late as May. The fact that Giganteum are so scarce will prove this to be a good purchase.

Lilium Giganteum, 7 to 9, 300 to case, $45.00 per case

All advance orders have been filled. We can now accept additional orders and ship immediately. Lilies started cool, with good root action, can be forced harder than late planted stock. Write us your order and we will ship same day.

Fresh Stock Lilium Rubrum and Magnificum

New Carnations

To keep abreast of the times, you must buy the new varieties as they are offered. We are offering three varieties that we feel sure you will plant sooner or later. We suggest that you stock up with them while they are still in robust health and vigorous in growth.

Let us book your order NOW.

Harvester is a white that will give you a continuous cut of first quality blooms ALL THE TIME. Propagates easily, makes a fine field plant, comes into crop quickly and KEEPS AT IT.

Edna Nic Zweifel's scarlet. We believe that this fine red will please those growers who have been in search of a red that is healthy, that blooms freely, that does not go off color, that keeps well and does not split the calyx.

Maine Sunshine is already well known as the best yellow in every respect that has ever trotted down the pike.

Come and see these varieties growing here.

$15.00 per 100; $120.00 per 1000

CYCLAMEN

Why cyclamen purchased from us will give entire satisfaction and make you the most money:

Our Shipping Facilities:

Exceptional facilities for southern and southwest points. Express Office in our packing room insures less rough handling. Main lines New York Central Lines and Pennsylvania for east and west shipments, and C. & E. I. and Illinois Central for north and south shipments.

Plants Now Coming Into Bloom Strong.

Large stock to select from; first come, first choice. The most discriminating buyers are inspecting, buying our stock and giving us repeat orders. (We have the varieties and the quality.)

NO PACKING CHARGE.

What our customers say about our quality and packing:

From North Carolina:

"It is with great pleasure and satisfaction to report to you that the shipment of cyclamen reached me in first-class condition. I give you full credit for the way you packed the shipment. That's the way to pack plants, and not just slap them in like so many shippers are doing nowadays. Everyone seems to be mighty anxious to sell goods and get the money, but don't give a rap how goods reach the buyer. Enclosed find check for additional order."

From Arizona:

"Duplicate our order of the 24th; did not think shipment could be made this far."

"Received 400 cyclamen from the east and they can't touch yours."

"Cyclamen arrived; well pleased with quality and they were packed fine."

"Enclosed find check for $360.00; cys arrived in fine shape and we are well pleased with the stock."

Not the cheapest that are offered, because quality stock cannot be had cheap. Nor the highest prices, because we have a large quantity and can afford to share profits with you; just the best that can be had for the money.

WHO STANDS THE SHIPPING LOSS?

Constantly altercations arise between buyer and seller as to who is to blame for mishaps in delivery and who is to stand the loss so incurred. Clearer comprehension of the legal view of the relations of the two will obviate many misunderstandings.

EVERY year there are hundreds, perhaps thousands, of controversies between members of the florists', seed and nursery trades over shipments made in the normal course of business. The parties involved therein are reputable—we are not concerned here with any who are not—and make their claims in good faith. This situation is not peculiar to this line of business; it is common to every industry. Most of the disputes are needless and result in nothing but bad feeling; they have no basis for legal action, for they are the result of ignorance or misconception of the principles laid down by the law in such matters. Knowledge of these legal principles will aid every florist in the transaction of his business. He will then know when he has basis for complaint and when the responsibility rests with him. He will avoid needless controversies and consequent ill feeling. He will facilitate his own business and maintain amicable relations with those with whom he deals. He will also, perhaps, save the expense of hiring a lawyer to tell him he has no case. A good deal, indeed, may be gained by a knowledge of the legal principles involved in making shipments and ridding oneself of some prevalent misconceptions.

Delivery.

Perhaps one of the most common misconceptions is that goods shipped by the seller to the buyer are not "delivered" to the buyer until they have arrived at their destination. This is true only where the seller has agreed to deliver them at the destination, or where he has reserved title by shipping under an order bill of lading not transferred to the buyer until after completion of the transportation.

Primarily it is presumed that goods are intended to be delivered wherever they happen to be at the time of sale. So, except for understanding to the contrary, all sales would be presumed to be on the "cash and carry" basis, whether a retail sale of a plant or a wholesale transaction between parties living in different cities or different countries.

By A. L. H. STREET, Attorney-at-Law.

To some extent this presumption has been destroyed by trade customs. So the retail florist who maintains no delivery system and who has not agreed to deliver at the customer's residence or place of business, is not bound to make delivery at any place other than the store where the goods sold happen to be when sold. But where the florist has led the public generally to suppose that deliveries will be made elsewhere, understanding that the customer may desigtrade usage, it will be presumed in the ordinary case to have been understood that the seller would properly pack and ship the goods for the buyer.

But now comes the important point to be kept in mind: Ordinarily, the railway company, or other carrier of a shipment, is to be regarded as the representative of the buyer, and not the representative of the seller. The following statement of the law can probably be supported by citation of an appellate court decision in every state in the union:

"Ordinarily a delivery of goods by the seller to the carrier designated by the purchaser, or to one usually employed in the transportation of goods from the place of the seller to that of the purchaser, is a delivery to the purchaser, the carrier becoming the agent of the buyer. The delivery should be of goods of the proper quality and in the proper quantity. The fact that the purchaser has a right of inspection and approval on receipt does not change the rule. Delivery to a carrier is not a delivery to the buyer if the seller is bound to deliver at the buyer's residence or place of business, the carrier in such case being the agent of the seller. * * *

Law's View.

"The delivery to carrier must be such a transfer of possession as will remove the goods wholly from the dominion of the seller, and such as to entitle the purchaser to demand the goods of the carrier; consequently it is not a delivery to the buyer if the seller reserves the right of disposal of the goods, by consigning them to his own order, or by taking the bill of lading in his own name and retaining the same, or making the delivery of the bill of lading conditional on the payment of the price. If, however, the bill of lading, although taken out in the name of another, is duly indorsed and tendered to the buyer, the delivery is good." (35 Cyc. 193.)

Thus it will be seen that the ordinary contract for a sale of goods to be shipped direct to the buyer, nothing being said as to where delivery is to be made, is substantially the same thing as a contract specifying that delivery is to be

THE LEGAL VIEW

Whether a shipment is an express parcel or a carload of freight, whether it is of plants, bulbs, seeds or trees, the law regarding the responsibility of buyer, seller and carrier is explicit. Its basic principle is: "A delivery of goods by the seller to the carrier designated by the purchaser, is a delivery to the purchaser, the carrier becoming the agent of the buyer." Its interpretations are equally definite, as explained by a legal writer on this page.

nate any reasonable place within the florist's usual delivery limits will be inferred.

Trade Usage.

And now it is no longer understood that a buyer of goods to be shipped to him from another point by the seller is to go to the seller's place of business, or send some one there, to get the goods and ship them, although nothing may have been specifically said concerning delivery. In accordance with universal made f. o. b. the shipping point. But a contract specifying delivery f. o. b. the shipping point is to be preferred to one silent as to the place of delivery, because it tends to set at rest any chance of quibble on the part of the buyer that he was entitled to delivery at the destination of the shipment.

But in order to constitute delivery to the buyer by delivering to the railway or express company, certain reasonable conditions must be observed by the seller. The shipment must be made in such circumstances as to make it fair that the buyer should accept it, so far as the seller is concerned. For example, if A has sold B a thousand plants to be sent by freight or express, a mere setting down of that many plants on the railway or express company's premises, without properly marking the shipment or having it properly billed, would not operate as a constructive delivery to the buyer. Nor would shipment of plants unreasonably exposed to breakage or freezing by reason of failure to pack them in the manner usual in making such shipments, resulting in their being damaged, be treated as a delivery to the buyer.

Buyer's Risk.

From what has been said it follows that where goods are sold f. o. b. place of shipment, or without any understanding as to whether delivery is to be f. o. b. there or the destination, the goods are at the buyer's risk when they have been properly put in transit by the seller. That they may be lost or damaged in transit, without any fault of the seller, does not affect his right to recover the agreed purchase price. If the buyer has any remedy he must enforce it against the railway or express company.

On the other hand, if the seller has agreed to deliver f. o. b. destination, or has reserved title to the shipment, he bears the risks of transportation so far as the buyer is concerned.

Reference to a few court decisions will serve to give useful information concerning the seller's rights and duties to the buyer when he acts as the latter's representative in arranging for transportation of goods. At the same time we believe that the discussion will serve to emphasize the practical value of getting as explicit instructions as is feasible from the buyer concerning routing, etc.

Practice Upheld.

In the case of Southern Nursery Co. vs. Winfield Nursery Co., 89 Kansas Reports 522, it appeared that plaintiff shipped a carload of stock to defendant. Defendant refused to pay the full agreed purchase price, because the stock had been damaged in transit, partly relying on the fact that, in making the shipment, plaintiff seller released the valuation of the shipment to 3 cents per pound, thereby making a difference of $1,304 between the actual value of the shipment and the released lesser valuation. The Kansas Supreme court decided the case in the seller's favor, on the ground that it acted reasonably and in accordance with general custom in agreeing to a reduced valuation to secure a lower freight rate. The court remarked that there was no doubt about its being the law that "the seller is authorized, in the absence of special instructions, to ship according to the usual and ordinary method and that he discharges his duty to the buyer when he does so."

"In this case," added the court, "there is no dispute that nursery stock is to be shipped at a valuation of 3 cents per pound in order to obtain a lower freight rate, under a classification permitting it, unless positive instructions to the contrary are given. The seller's authority, therefore, extends no further than to take a bill of lading of the kind usual to such shipment, if contracts of that character may lawfully be made."

Same as Initial Carrier.

Both reason and law appear to put a shipping seller on the same plane as an initial carrier who receives a shipment destined to a point on a foreign railroad. The law in the latter class of cases is as follows:

"The general rule is that, when no special instructions are given and assented to as to routes, the initial carrier may select the route or use that commonly employed by it to the point of destination named, and the absence of special instructions given and assented to amounts to an assent that the carrier's usual course of business may be followed, and that it may designate the route as its convenience may suggest. This provision, being thus inserted in the contract by law, is as unassailable by parol [proof of verbal understandings tending to vary or contradict a written contract] as any of the express terms of the contract. However, the carrier's right in this regard is not an absolute or inalienable one, and it may be waived or surrendered by an agreement subsequently entered into.

"Furthermore, the rule stated in the preceding section is subject to the important limitation that the carrier in selecting the route must have due regard to the rights and interests of the shipper and must exercise its option of selecting a route so that it will not work to the disadvantage of the shipper, unless under circumstances which require it." (10 Corpus Juris, 83, 84.)

Care Required.

Another decision as to an initial carrier's liability, which seems to be subject to fair application to a shipping seller, is one by the United States Supreme court, holding that if it is known to a carrier that a shipment will be more liable to loss or injury on one route than on another, he must select the safer route. The same is true of the holding by one of the Texas Courts of Civil Appeals, that although a carrier was entitled to choose the route, it could not choose a route known to be so obstructed that delivery could not be made over it, where another practicable route was open. And it is also true of the court holdings that if the carrier knows that sending the shipment over a certain route will cause unusual delay, when there is a more direct and quicker route, the carrier must obtain authority from the shipper before sending over the slower route; and that if the carrier adopts a mode of transportation which involves the payment of a higher rate of freight than another, it may show that it asked for and obtained direction from the shipper or consignee to employ the more expensive mode, or that because of its inability to procure the means of shipment by the cheaper method it was reasonably necessary in view of the exigencies of the case.

MOTT-LY MUSINGS

"The impetus given the business by our show, held at the opening of the season, has been keeping up right along," observed Manager Thomas Tracey, of the Albany Cut Flower Exchange, Albany, N. Y., "and with Thanksgiving here, a good clean-up at fair prices is expected."

The annual meeting of the Albany Florists' Club will be held in the Exchange building December 9. There will be an election of officers at that time, followed by a banquet, at which venison, provided by Fred Henkes, will be served. A cordial invitation to attend is extended to any member of the craft who may be in the city at the time.

Sambrook Bros., Troy, N. Y., are cutting some fine Chadwick chrysanthemums in white and yellow from the Berlin place, operated by John Sambrook. This range is usually closed down during the winter to save coal, but the downtown range, run by George Sambrook, continues to do business all the year.

James G. Barrett, Troy, N. Y., says that he has not detected a diminution in funeral work, although ten notices to omit flowers were seen in one day in the obituary column of a local newspaper.

Henkes Bros., Watervliet, N. Y., booked many orders for Chadwicks and pompons for Thanksgiving, practically cleaning up everything. Cyclamens are also selling well. One large house is used for the storage of plants for local people who have left the city and wish their plants taken care of by someone who understands their culture.

"Funeral work has been the main feature of our business for some time past," said Henry Eberhardt, of the Rosendale Flower Shop, Schenectady, N. Y. Especial mention was made of a floral blanket of violets and roses with a cluster of white chrysanthemums in the center. Walter Dunning, who was dressing up a cyclamen plant for local delivery in response to a wire received from St. Louis, commented upon the enormous boost the business has received through publicity channels.

MEMPHIS MEETING

TENNESSEE CONVENTION.

Meeting at Memphis.

The seventh annual convention of the Tennessee State Florists' Association was held at Memphis, Tenn., Wednesday and Thursday, November 17 and 18. The election of officers, held Wednesday afternoon, resulted as follows:

President, W. H. Englehart, of the Idlewild Greenhouses, Memphis.

Vice-president, Harold M. Joy, of Nashville.

Secretary-treasurer, G. M. Bentley, of Knoxville.

The next place of meeting will be Chattanooga. The vice-president and secretary-treasurer were reelected from last year.

Make Membership Mark.

At the close of the convention it was announced that the Tennessee State Florists' Association was entitled to a seat on the board of directors of the S. A. F. The necessary qualification of the association was a membership of fifty in the national organization. This membership was reached by a special campaign conducted during the convention.

The morning of November 17 was devoted almost entirely to speech-making. The convention was called to order at 10:00 a. m. in the Chamber of Commerce building by W. Cleveland Johnson, of Memphis, chairman of the arrangement committee. Mayor Paine, on behalf of the city of Memphis, welcomed the delegates to the city, and when he had concluded his remarks, A. J. McNutt, of Knoxville, the retiring president, gave his address.

President's Address.

In his address President McNutt touched upon some present problems of the trade. He said:

"We hope to solve several difficult problems at this meeting, one of which is publicity. I feel sure that there is no better way than to tie up in some way with the national publicity committee and 'Say It with Flowers' to the limit.

"The coal situation is a most important one for the growers. The ones who did not buy their supply of coal before government control ceased are having to pay two or three times the price of last season. It behooves all of us to use every means to save coal. The speaker has recently installed a shaker grate bar that is proving to be a great coal saver over the old-style grate bar.

"Whether or not you believe in using artificial flowers, I think our supply houses deserve a great deal of credit for pushing this end of their line. Although the speaker does not believe in using them when you have the real, it is beyond dispute that they saved the day when the real flowers could not be had. I will leave this subject for your discussion, as you will have two papers on this subject, which I am sure will prove helpful.

"We, as members of the Tennessee State Florists' Association, should feel justly proud that we have Thomas H.

Joy, of Nashville, as a member of the board of directors of the S. A. F., and Karl P. Baum, of Knoxville, as an F. T. D. director. While we are proud to have these men to represent this state, nothing would give the speaker more pleasure than to assure the incoming president that he is entitled to a directorship of the S. A. F. This we can do by getting fifty of our members to become members of the S. A. F. Application blanks will be furnished to all who will join at this time."

Prof. G. M. Bentley, secretary-treasurer, reported a satisfactory state of affairs financially. The rest of the morning session was devoted to addresses, including "Birthday Flowers," by Vincent J. Gorly, St. Louis, Mo., and "National Publicity," by George Asmus, of Chicago. Mr. Asmus was unable to deliver his address in person, but sent a paper to be read.

Interesting Addresses.

The afternoon session November 17 commenced with the election of officers and reports of committees. An address on "Doings of the F. T. D." was delivered by Karl P. Baum, Knoxville, Tenn., and proved quite interesting. Mr. Baum dealt with the rapid growth of the F. T. D. and particularly with the effect of the recent convention at Indianapolis on the standing of the trade. He stated that there were sixteen Tennessee members of the association and hoped that soon there would be more than this.

Other addresses for the afternoon were "Substitutes for Debarred Blooming Plants," by Carl Hagenburger, West Mentor, O., and "A Travel Talk on the Orient," by A. Miller, of the American Bulb Co., Chicago. Mr. Miller spoke in an entertaining manner of his trip to Japan recently and was greeted with much applause at his conclusion.

The evening session opened at 7:45 p. m. and included an address on "Lily Culture in the South," by Prof. R. N. Lobel, of the Mississippi Agricultural College.

Motion Pictures.

Motion pictures were shown of Hollywood Gardens, Seattle, Wash., and of Gude Bros. Co., Washington, D. C. These were followed by a series of advertising slides donated by Penn the Florist, of Boston.

Heating and cooling systems were discussed by Fred Lautenschlager, of Kroeschell Bros. Co., Chicago, in an interesting address delivered at the Thursday morning session, November 18. This was followed by an address on greenhouse construction by Harold Joy, of Nashville, Tenn., vice-president of the association.

Sydney H. Bayersdorfer, of Philadelphia, was unable to present his address on "Florists' Problems in Europe" in person, and it was read by one of those present.

Florists' Exhibits.

Adjournment was made at 10:30 to permit the inspection of the flower exhibition, which filled the entire sixth floor of the building. Exhibits were sent in by out-of-town florists, although the Memphis members furnished the majority of the blooms. They also furnished display space free to outside members wishing to enter a display. Roses, chrysanthemums and carnations were much in evidence.

All the blooms and plants were loaded into trucks Thursday afternoon, November 18, after the exhibition, and distributed as a gift from the association among the various hospitals of Memphis. This act of generosity was much appreciated by the public.

Banquet.

Shortly after 1:00 p. m. the florists assembled for a trip to the greenhouses of Memphis and the city parks. The entire afternoon was spent in this way, and the local greenhouse methods were studied with much interest by visiting florists.

Upon their return from the tour of inspection, the delegates found an appetizing supper awaiting them at the Hotel Chisca. The banquet started at 6:30 and lasted until 8 o'clock. Several hundred guests were present. Music and brief talks by various florists followed and a merry-making party was formed to attend the Orpheum theater.

To judge from the expressions of prominent delegates, the convention was the most successful in the history of the association. There was something doing every minute of the time, from the moment the meeting was called to order Thursday morning until the last tired delegate went home Friday night, or perhaps more properly Saturday morning. For their first experience at entertaining a convention, the Memphis florists made an excellent showing.

COOLING FLOWERS

MECHANICAL REFRIGERATION.

Safe Medium for Florists.

There are several refrigerating mediums; namely, ammonia, sulphur dioxide and carbonic gas. On account of its absolute safety, combined with its high efficiency, carbonic gas is the most suitable for the florist.

Carbonic anhydride, commonly called carbonic gas, is absolutely neutral towards plant life, human life, food products and all materials. This same gas is used for carbonating beverages and is used in connection with all soda fountains. It is the cheapest refrigerant and is sold in all parts of the world.

Carbonic gas is odorless, nonexplosive and noninflammable. It cannot become a source of danger to human, plant or animal life. Unlike other refrigerants, it does not become a menace in time of fire; quite to the contrary, it is a fire extinguisher.

Refrigeration is directly the opposite of heating. It is utilized for the absorption of heat. Mechanical refrigeration is the process of reducing or keeping the temperature of a body or substance below the temperature of the atmosphere without the use of ice. In order to reduce such temperature, it is necessary to employ a medium of lower temperature which will absorb the heat.

Not Complicated.

To many it may seem that mechanical refrigerating apparatus is a rather complicated combination of machinery. This, however, is not the case. With a well designed modern equipment there are only two mechanical units necessary, the compressor and the power unit, which may either be electrical or steam driven.

The plant consists of compressor, motor and carbonic anhydride condenser. The cooling medium is transmitted through the piping coils which are placed in the upper part of the refrigerator and a portion of these pipe coils are placed in the brine tank, also in the upper part of the refrigerator. The tank of brine maintains the temperature when the refrigerating machinery is not in operation. It will surely be of interest to explain the cycle of operation.

Cycle of Operation.

The cycle of operation of refrigeration is the compression, liquefaction and evaporation of the carbonic anhydride. The refrigerating plant comprises three parts:

1. A compressor in which gas is compressed.
2. A condenser in which warm compressed gas imparts its heat to cold water and liquefies.
3. Expansion coils in which the liquid carbonic anhydride expands into its original gaseous state, thereby absorbing heat and performing the refrigerating work.

In order to make the operation continuous, the three parts are connected, the charge of carbonic anhydride originally put into the machine being used over and over, going progressively through the process of compression, condensation and evaporation. Thus only a small quantity of gas is required to replace any losses.

Rating of Machines.

Refrigerating machines are rated in the tons of refrigeration produced if operated continuously for twenty-four hours. One ton of refrigeration is the amount of cooling produced by the melting of one ton of ice. This is equivalent to 288,000 British thermal units.

It is not necessary to operate the compressor in a refrigerating plant twenty-four hours per day, as a compressor of good capacity performs the work during a shorter period of time.

The power required to operate the compressor varies from approximately one to one and three-fourths horsepower per ton of refrigeration, depending upon the size of compressor, temperature of condenser water and work to be done. Refrigerating machines may be operated by any available power; namely, steam engine, electric motor, gas engine, etc.

Usually Less Expensive.

Mechanical refrigeration is far more economical than the use of ice. In practically every case where the refrigerating space amounts to 500 cubic feet or more, it is cheaper than ice. The following figures may be relied upon to determine the cost of operation. From this table any florist can estimate the cost of operating a refrigerating machine. For example: A 4-ton machine requires 6 kilowatts, at a cost of 3 cents per kilowatt hour. It will cost 18 cents per kilowatt hour to operate this plant. To the figures stated must be added the cost of water, oil, etc., which is a small item:

Tons of refrigeration for 24 hours	Horsepower required	Kilowatts required for motor
1 ton	2	1.71
2 ton	4	3.43
3 ton	6	5.14
4 ton	7	6
5 ton	9	7.7
6 ton	10.4	8.9
7 ton	11.7	10
8 ton	12.9	11
9 ton	14	12
10 ton	15	13

As stated before, absolute temperature control may be insured at any point desired. The following temperature range, however, is recommended:

Ferns and greens.....	Freezing for storage.
Carnations .....	48 to 50 degrees.
Roses .....	44 to 50 degrees.

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS.

Committee Meeting.

In Cleveland, at the Hollenden hotel, Wednesday, December 8, at 9 a. m., there will be a meeting of the national flower show committee.

The horticultural interests of Cleveland and vicinity have been invited to attend a general conference later in the day, at which time the members of the national flower show committee will explain the method of procedure in arranging for such an important undertaking as the fifth national flower show, and at the same time explain how these interests can cooperate in the work to the fullest extent.

In the evening, Thomas Roland has consented to address the growers.

Thursday, December 9, there will be a meeting of the national publicity committee, and plans considered for the future conduct of the national advertising campaign. It will be decided at this meeting what action to take in regard to those delinquents who have failed to make good their subscriptions. Several other matters of importance will be submitted for consideration.

LILY BULB LAND

PREVIOUS to the war there were practically not over five export houses in Yokohama. Today there are about fifty doing business with foreign countries selling Japanese merchandise. If you are not acquainted with Japanese business methods, you might imagine, as I did previous to my visit, that you could go to any manufacturer and get full supplies of what you want. But business is conducted in an entirely different manner than it is in America. It is done on an exceedingly small scale. In order to do business you depend upon the exporter, who will submit samples and then gather up the merchandise from place to place and in this way accumulate your requirements. The Japanese do not hustle as we do. They take their time and aim for efficiency.

The love of flowers is one of the most distinctive features of the Japanese people's living and, indeed, existence without them would be monotonous and dreary. Nature must have known this, for in the far-eastern land, which lies like a green and flower-bedecked jewel in a wide sea, there are flowers year in and year out, which must have fostered the love of them in the hearts of the race. At any rate, all flowers in Japan, but more particularly the first flowers of each season, are regarded with solemn and most serious reverence. There are many flower stores in Japan. In the city of Tokyo there are about 700. Their business is done on a small scale in comparison with our business, as flowers are cheap and easily cultivated. Large quantities are grown and the demand is always equal to the supply, as every Japanese home and office is always decorated with some sort of flower, artistically arranged. The art of arranging flowers is taught in the public schools and other institutions where one can receive education in flower decoration.

Each Month's Flower.

You will often see a small twig arranged in a vase as attractively as many of our people will arrange flowers that are full of fragrance and color. This is proof of their love of flowers. Every month has a special flower which the Japanese worship and that flower is in their dwellings during the month.

Lily bulbs are produced in Japan much as we produce gladiolus corms. The seed bulbs are obtained from the large bulbs on the side of the plant stalk in the form of soft bulbs. In harvesting the export crop, each bulb is dug individually. The soil is removed by hand; the stalk is removed from the bulb by scissors. The bulbs are taken off, cleaned and sorted according to size and replanted during the months of November and December in beds, about three inches apart and in rows about a foot and a half apart.

From the address of A. Miller, of the American Bulb Co., Chicago, entitled, "A Travel Talk on the Orient," delivered at the seventh annual meeting of the Tennessee State Florists' Association, at Memphis, Tenn., November 17, 1920.

In the early fall, when the stalk turns yellow, the bulbs are dug again by hand, reselected according to size and planted in beds according to the size in the same months as the previous year, but in different soil and sometimes in a different locality. After this method is continued for two years the larger bulbs are then reselected and planted in a bed about eight inches apart and about two feet apart in the rows. This is usually the export bed, meaning that the bulbs will develop into export size.

Packing Bulbs.

About August the bulbs are dug, each bulb individually, cleaned, put into a box of about 150 bulbs per box and shipped to Yokohama or Tokyo. There the roots are removed by women and the soil is taken from between the scales and then they are regraded according to size, and packed in export cases in sterilized soil for shipping to America. To develop an export size bulb takes about three years, sometimes longer. Occasionally some bulbs will develop to an export size in about two years.

If a bulb is found in the fields showing any signs of disease, the bulb is removed early and lime is spread where the bulb has been dug out. Farmers are particular not to propagate from bulbs that have been dug near the diseased bulbs. Before packing, an examination is made by a government official to detect any sign of disease in the bulbs. If disease is found the government official will make the shipper destroy the bulbs and will not give a certificate of inspection, which every case must have before a permit is given to ship the bulbs.

The bulbs are produced on a small scale. About 3,000 farmers are engaged in the production of lily bulbs. They each produce from 3,000 to 20,000 bulbs. Before the war the output of lily bulbs was about 20,000,000. England has held an embargo on the importation of lily bulbs into the country for about four years, which has caused considerable loss to the Japanese lily growers. America put on an embargo for one year, which caused more loss to the lily exporters. When the war was over the demand for lily bulbs was heavy and the crop, which formerly was estimated between 20,000,000 and 25,000,000, was reduced to hardly over 7,000,000. This year the crop is estimated to be 3,500,000, which shows quite a reduction from the pre-war years, and it will take another three years before the quantity of lily bulbs will be increased to normal crop conditions.

According to figures and according to a catalogue issued in the year 1914, 7 to 9 lily bulbs were sold at $18 per case, 8 to 10 bulbs were sold at $23 per case and 9 to 10 at $22 per case, which shows that the present prices on lily bulbs have increased a little more than 100 per cent since before the war.

Comparing Prices.

In comparing lily bulb prices to Dutch bulb prices, when one studies them carefully, he will note that some of the Dutch bulbs have advanced from 300 to 500 per cent and none less than 100 per cent. So in comparison, the Dutch bulb growers have increased their prices far in advance of the Japanese growers, yet they suffered no embargo against exporting bulbs to America. In order to maintain the high prices, a trust was formed, which placed a minimum selling price on bulbs. According to reports that we have heard recently, I believe that some of the exporters have made more than 100 per cent on their Dutch bulbs. The grower, who furnishes the bulbs to the exporter, does not reap the benefit in comparison with the exporter.

There are many risks attached to the importing of lily bulbs from Japan. First, payment must be made four to five months before the bulbs are delivered; second, they usually travel at the end of the season and sometimes come in contact with cold weather, which causes the bulbs to freeze, and third, shipments may be held up on the Pacific coast, where it is warm, and there they sprout. The importer of lily bulbs takes all these chances and suffers all these losses and there is never a year that a few cars are not spoiled during the season. The florist buys his Dutch bulbs f. o. b. packing shed, and pays for packing, and the Hollander releases himself of all responsibility regardless of when they arrive, as they must be accepted by the purchaser. So, between the two, the greater risk lies with the lily importer.

COAXING IN THE CASH

HOW TO SAY "PLEASE REMIT."

Tactful Collecting.

The best method of collecting is the method that brings in the outstanding accounts without friction between the house and the customer.

Our experience over a period of many years would indicate that over ninety per cent of all charge accounts are paid within the month following purchase and that thirty-eight per cent of all accounts paid are paid on or before the tenth of the month following purchase.

The accounts that are not so prompt must be urged to payment by tactful letters requesting remittance. A statement of account, giving date and amount, is often the only reminder needed.

After that, a brief letter calling attention to the account brings good results, as many people are merely careless and a simple request is just the reminder they need.

As a Reminder.

After the bill, statement and reminder have been mailed without result, a special letter, written with a knowledge of the character of the individual, is often productive of the desired results, as many will gladly remit when attention is called to their delinquency by a personal appeal.

When an account becomes ninety days past due, it is well to have some one from your office call upon the debtor. This representative must be familiar with the account and the items purchased, and should have with him an itemized bill. By such a personal call, he can learn of any complaint the customer may have, or will find out the reason for the delay in payment, which reason the customer may not have wanted to put in a letter to you. By courteous manner and tactful approach to relieve the debtor of undue embarrassment, explanations are usually forthcoming as to the cause of delay, and, if not paid at once, assurance of a definite time of payment may be obtained. Generally the courtesy of the representative and the attitude of the house are appreciated and the honest debtor makes early remittance and maintains a friendly feeling towards your establishment.

But where a debtor is obstinate, pays no attention to statements and is indifferent to the requests of your solicitor, your attitude, while yet courteous and tactful, must be firm and decisive. A charge account is a shopping convenience, a courtesy granted to the public by the dealer, and not a right that may be demanded by any buyer. The obligation in the matter rests entirely on the debtor and morally and legally he is bound to meet that obligation. He is never justified in resenting courteous demand for payment for service rendered.

Specimen Letters.

The following letters have been used with considerable success in the collection of past due accounts, being sent out in order at about 2-week intervals. This order may be broken in upon at any time when, in your judgment, a visit from your collector might prove advisable. After all, knowledge of the personal character of your customers must largely determine your attitude towards them and your action regarding their indebtedness.

LETTER 1.

We desire respectfully to call your attention to the enclosed account. In making prompt collections we are enabled to make prompt payments, and so help business generally. These are extraordinary times, and we feel sure that everyone is willing to do his part in maintaining good business conditions. Would it not be a pleasure for you to assist by mailing us a check at an early date?

Your courtesy will be appreciated.

LETTER 2.

Our small account has no doubt escaped your notice. Will you not kindly look it up and send us your check? It will be appreciated.

LETTER 3.

If there is any reason why our account should not be paid, we should like to know, in order that the matter may be adjusted.

If the account is correct, we would appreciate your check in settlement.

LETTER 4.

We would appreciate very much the receipt of the amount due on your account, for goods sold you last.

We believe you will agree with us when we state we have given you good service and every courtesy in our business relations.

Surely you will consent that we are entitled to our money. Will you not show your appreciation of the fact by sending us your check?

LETTER 5.

We have no desire to embarrass you, but believe some attention is due our requests for payment of your account.

Will you not kindly give this your attention?

LETTER 6.

We cannot understand your nonattention to our requests for payment of your account.

We shall be compelled to use other means for collection if we do not hear from you at once.

We regret to take such action and hope to receive your check by return mail.

Personal Calls.

You have now, by means of statements, personal calls and collection letters, brought in all accounts except the few which appear to be absolutely bad. The next step is to turn these items over to a professional collector. In selecting such a medium, we believe the best success may be had through the agency that makes collections by personal call. For, after all, the delinquent debtor may be honest, have good reasons for nonpayment, maybe a just cause for a complaint that could be and should be adjusted (and bear in mind always that a satisfactorily adjusted complaint is one of the best advertisements you can possibly have). A tactful collector, by personal interview, can learn (because he is known as a professional collector, and the debtor knows that it is his business to find out such things) from the honest debtor the reasons for nonpayment or the causes for complaint. From the viewpoint of an outside party, and because of his experience in handling such problems, he can form a fair opinion of the debtor's inclination or ability to pay, and can pass just judgment on the case. If the circumstances appear to warrant an extension of time or an adjustment of the account, by tactful handling of the situation he can satisfy both parties and leave the debtor with a friendly feeling towards you. An old customer retained is better than a new customer obtained. Cumulative value of good will is a valuable asset to any store.

But should solicitation by the collector fail to realize the account, then, if the amount justifies the expense of such action, the further steps to be taken may safely be left to the good judgment and discretion of the collection agency.

Debtors Are Human.

But I would have you always bear in mind this truth: There is a good bit of human nature in all of us, both debtor and creditor. Maybe circumstances are temporarily all against the customer. Being human, he may not want to confess his misfortune. And maybe, because he is human and not unlike most of us, he may assume an attitude of indifference, believing that by so doing he can hide from the public his temporary misfortune. Later on, paying his obligations, he believes he has saved himself the embarrassment of having acknowledged his insolvency. Isn't that only human nature? If we believe so, we have an opportunity to prove our own greatness. Let him believe that we believe what he would have us believe.

Let us practice the Golden Rule.

LOCAL PUBLICITY

NO DOUBT you are all expecting something interesting and helpful from me in this brief discussion of local advertising; so I am going to do my best to tell you, in as few words as possible, some of the personal observations I have made that help me to get the best advertising results for the least money. Do not, however, expect for a moment that I am going to tell you how to advertise your business; I am not yet ready to quit the florists' business and take up the advertising profession, or make a monkey of myself. What I am going to tell you is based upon my belief in advertising as a business-builder, a patron-winner.

I believe in advertising. I believe in advertising because advertising to me is simply aggressive salesmanship in public print, which tells our story to the thousands who are reached by the media that we use.

Without going into the technique or details of advertising, which I leave entirely to my advertising man, I will tell you a few of the rules which I apply to our advertising in order that it may be most productive.

Result of Repetition.

I have heard it said by an experienced advertising man, and I believe it is true, that "repetition builds reputation." But unless you repeat some distinctive thought, idea or appealing message and stick to it everlastingly, you can have no impressive repetition and hence no reputation as a result of your advertising or the word-of-mouth recommendations of customers. So the first rule I judge my advertising by is: It must contain, in a clear, understandable way, the one idea upon which we are building our business. And that one idea is that Idlewild flowers (if you will pardon this reference to our business) are not just flowers, but high-quality flowers. And our advertising is constantly aiming at that same target, putting that same thought into the minds of the people we want to reach. So, instead of simply selling flowers, or advertising flowers, we are advertising and selling our own kind of flowers.

Right here I want to introduce my second rule of advertising and that is: Every one of our advertisements, when possible, must contain some sentiment. Sentiment sells flowers in the great majority of instances, and I think you all agree with me that it is one of the most vital pillars of the flower business. If I thought for a minute that sentiment would ever become dissociated from the flower business, I would sell out this minute or close up shop. I insist upon sentiment and am a firm believer in the fact that sentiment sells flowers.

Capitalizing Every Event.

In the way of sentiment I endeavor to capitalize every holiday, seasonable event and thought that in any way can be turned to flower sentiment. Whether we are pushing flowers, plants or bulbs, or anything else, I insist upon our advertising being seasonable. My third rule is, therefore, that our advertising must be seasonable and opportune.

My fourth, and next to last, rule is: Keep something before the public at all times. Our customers and friends, or prospective customers and friends, must paper advertising was the fact that department stores disposed of such great quantities of merchandise by using newspapers. For if newspapers will sell ordinary merchandise, they will certainly sell flowers, in which sentiment is strong in its appeal. And I have found it to be true. I need say little about newspaper advertising; it needs no justification. It is a business-getting, sales-making help to the florists' business.

If I have a hobby in publicity, my hobby is direct advertising. The timely mailing of folders, cards, etc., sent out just previous to holidays or events, brings a ready response in orders. You are all more or less familiar with the kind of advertising I mean. I mail this advertising to our customers only, as I have no prospect list, and as quickly as we win new customers I add them to my mailing list. During the last two seasons we have used the service of the Falls Service Co. for our direct mail advertising, with the good results I have mentioned.

Without taking up your time with billboard advertising or painted signs or street-car card advertising, all of which I favor, I will close with a few of the ways we have capitalized some of our equipment and location.

A Striking Store.

Locations in Memphis are difficult to find and remember, because of the countless numbers of small specialty stores and the fact that they are nearly all scattered about town.

On the sidewalk at the curb in front of our store you will find plants and trees that are green the year around. The entire front of the building is in a bright, attractive color that stands out for several blocks each way on the street—a bright spot on the street. When passers-by have once seen the green plants and trees on the sidewalk and the color of the store front, they will forever after identify our store and its location whenever they see one of our advertisements anywhere.

But we have gone further; the interior is also of a striking, appealing color and the displays and windows are in tune with the seasons.

Our paneled-body, motor delivery cars are also painted in a striking, appealing, attractive color, which is suggestive of bright and fresh flowers. A light green color is used as the dominating scheme. I am confident that it pays.

But I am also a stickler for this, the fifth and last rule in my advertising: I do not have a single advertisement, piece of printed matter, sign or service equipment that does not carry the greatest advertisement our business ever had, "Say It with Flowers." I credit much of the greater demand for

APHORISMS ON ADVERTISING.

Each advertisement should express, clearly and forcibly, the main idea or principle on which the firm's business is built.

Each advertisement, if possible, should contain an appeal to sentiment.

All advertising should be seasonable and opportune.

By various expedients, the business should be kept before the public continuously, lest possible purchasers forget the store or its wares.

The slogan, "Say It with Flowers," should be used persistently.

not be given an opportunity to forget what we sell, because I feel we owe them the duty of keeping them informed. I will briefly summarize the course of action embodied in the fourth rule, by telling you about the various kinds of advertising we employ, for I am constantly improving and building up our advertising.

First and of greatest importance to us in my experience has been our newspaper advertising. In my opinion newspaper advertising excels all others. If you will stop to consider, you can easily understand what a short cut to countless thousands of people newspaper advertising is. In Memphis we have two afternoon papers and one morning paper, and in a single day I can reach nearly every prospect in the territory within seventy miles of Memphis by using these papers.

What originally sold me on news-flowers to the greater use of this appealing slogan, which is the envy of all industries whose sales are even slightly influenced by sentiment. We have it, fellow florists; let's capitalize it for all it's worth. There is none better in the land.

As a parting thought I wish to say that we advertise to get people to think and feel and say the same things about our business that we want them to say; and in making them feel and think and talk, we sell them our product.

Recently the president of one of the greatest national retail dealers' organizations in the United States said: "The man who advertises locally not only advertises the fact that he is an up-to-date, wide-awake merchant, but also advertises the fact that he is successful in his business and making money, and usually he is an influential factor in his community."

And I want to say that I believe if there were thirty florists in Memphis and they all advertised in the right way, each of the thirty would do more business than each of the ten or fifteen now do with the small amount of local advertising that we now do.

PLANNING THE STORE

FLOWER SHOP ARRANGEMENT.

The Location.

To my mind, a flower store, like any other retail store, should have a location where the most people pass during the day and evening, in proximity to the hotels and theaters. I prefer a corner store, where it is possible to have the maximum of window space. The store, by all means, should be level with the sidewalk. I object to having even one step to make in approaching the entrance door.

Window Advertising.

The windows should have the first consideration, so get as much glass front as possible. I think a curved glass window with a marble base is the best. The floors of the windows should be from eighteen inches to two feet above the sidewalk. The flooring of the windows should be of tile, with provision for proper drainage. There should be a water connection in each window for watering plants and arranging fountain displays. There should also be electric sockets for connecting electrical decorations, such as lighted pumpkins for Halloween displays. Have the lights concealed, using reflectors with high-power globes, to make the windows and the front as bright as possible, which at the same time will light up the entire store front and show off your display to the best advantage.

In arranging a store front, if there is space for two windows, I prefer one large window and one small window, using the large window for decorative effects of a seasonal nature. My reason for having the smaller window is to show practically nothing in it except choice arrangements of cut flowers. The advantage of the small window is that you can combine different colors of velvet and ribbon with your general color scheme and you do not have to use a large quantity of cut flowers in the window.

Results from Windows.

When it comes to advertising, spend your money on your windows first and let the newspapers, posters, folders, etc., come next. The advantage of having a large window was demonstrated to me more this fall than ever before.

An address by R. I. Gresham, of the C. A. Dahl Co., Atlanta, Ga., on "Flower Shop Arrangement," delivered at the seventh annual meeting of the Tennessee State Florists' Association, at Memphis, Tenn., November 17, 1920.

During our fair we had a display of bulbs with attractive posters. There was box upon box of narcissus bulbs, and by using baskets filled with tulips and hyacinths and covering the floor with bulbs, we had a display which filled the entire window and was six feet high in the back and center. We intermingled palms and ferns with the cork bark in making this display. As a result we sold more bulbs than we ever had sold before.

We tried a display of baskets in this big window. We happened to have three shipments coming from different firms, which were all of practically different designs and colorings, from the smallest tumbler basket to some baskets six feet high. We also put two attractive displays on each side of the entrance to the store. Although these baskets were bought to carry us through the fall and Christmas seasons, we have practically sold the entire lots.

The windows should have mirrors in the sides where possible, but the back of the window should be left open, so that everything in the store can be seen.

Display Icebox.

Next to the windows, the icebox should be given the first consideration. The icebox should have as much glass space as possible. It should be well lighted, with a tile floor and step elevations, so that the flowers may be arranged one vase above another. Each vase of flowers should stand out distinctly from the others.

If possible, there should be a reserve icebox in the workroom, where the surplus flowers can be kept and not crowded together in the main icebox.

In displaying flowers in the icebox, I think that the green willow, zinc-lined vases lately introduced are decidedly the best, much better than the old-fashioned fiber jar, zinc vase, glass or crockery. It reflects the color of the flowers, as a dull background does all flowers. The vases are graded in sizes and are substantial. The icebox should have mirrors in the back of it, the same as the sides of the windows.

Arrangement of Store.

The size of the store has a great deal to do with the general arrangement, but the arrangements should be such as to afford the best display of the flowers. Whoever plans the store should follow out some floral scheme. He may arrange it in an Italian garden effect.

Pergola effects, with columns, can be worked in almost any store to good advantage, and with lattice trimmings you can get a garden-effect background that lends itself beautifully to the display of flowers. I am opposed to the use of mirrors in the up-to-date flower shop, because barber shops and Greek restaurants have worked mirrors overtime.

In my own store, I conceived the idea of a garden wall, which I built all around the store in tapestry brick of a fancy design, giving the effect of a handsome garden wall. This dull brick background shows the flowers and plants to great advantage.

In arranging the office in the store, I had a balcony built, and by having garden gates going through this brick wall, with a combination of pergola and balustrade, I was able to get an attractive background in the rear of the store, which afforded me the use of the balcony for office space, and the space underneath for the assorting and packing of the flowers.

Fountain an Aid.

Where the decorations of the store are carried out elaborately I think a fountain arrangement helps to make the store more attractive and is in keeping with floral schemes. In arranging a fountain, see that it is well built and of good design, and that there is not any leaking or splashing of water outside of it to make the floor wet and dirty. The fountain should also be built with a view of combining plants and flowers with it to give an attractive decorative effect. In other words, the fountain should, like a show case in a store, be used to display your merchandise in the most attractive manner.

To my mind there is nothing so attractive in a flower store as wicker furniture, upholstered with tapestry cushions. I also prefer baskets, stands and urns of willow, rather than of crockery. The floor of the store should be of some attractive tile design, which can be easily cleaned, and of the same color as the general scheme of the store decorations.

The lighting effects in the store should be given careful consideration. Flowers, like jewelry, should have all the light obtainable, but shaded fixtures should be used, so as not to let the light itself be seen.

Separate Workroom.

Where it is possible, the workroom should be separated from the store, as it is nearly impossible to keep the store clean if bouquets and designs are made up in the store. A clean store and icebox should be a manager's hobby. I think every store should have a maid to do nothing but see that the icebox and floor are kept clean and the fixtures and furniture are dusted and washed regularly. I do not think the office should be on the main floor of the store, where it is possible to have it on an upper floor or in a balcony, where there may be privacy for the bookkeepers. In some convenient but not conspicuous position, an attractive mirror should be placed, so that the customers may use it in pinning on flowers, etc.

The workroom should have as much daylight as possible and should be well lighted artificially, to aid the designer in combining flowers and ribbons. It should also be large enough to afford plenty of room for the workers and the

BEST FOR BEDDING

BEDDING ROSES FOR SOUTH.

Tests of Twenty-Five Years.

During the last twenty-five years I have tested more than 2,000 varieties of bedding roses in the open ground, giving only a minimum amount of care and attention to the plants, endeavoring, as far as possible, to determine the value of each variety under conditions which the rose usually finds in the gardens throughout the country, where they are made to struggle, in most instances, for their very existence.

The bedding rose which I have in view is one that does well on its own roots. It is a gross feeder, vigorous in growth, with foliage resistant to the greatest degree to the attacks of fungous diseases and other ills. It is prolific in bloom, constant under the most trying conditions, producing well formed buds and open flowers of good substance which stand up well when used for house decoration.

Object of List.

I shall, no doubt, be criticized for the list of bedding roses I am giving you, because I am leaving out many of your favorites, as well as many varieties which I am sure would add materially to any list if grown by skilled hands, but I have in mind rather the small buyer who loves the rose because it is chaste and beautiful and who has little time from the drudgery of everyday life to care for its needs. Under adverse conditions only the vigorous, robust rose will give a semblance of its real worth and beauty. Lack of knowledge in plant culture, sentiment and sympathy has been the process by which many roses have met an untimely end.

Owing to the great diversity of soil and climatic conditions throughout the country, the list I have prepared is suited only to localities similar to the one in which I live. I would not undertake to offer a list that would prove satisfying elsewhere, as each section of the country offers obstacles in growing successfully many of the varieties that are reliable in favored localities. However, you will find in my list many varieties that are not oversensitive to climatic conditions wherever planted in southern sections.

Tea Rose Most Satisfactory.

As a whole, the tea rose is the most satisfactory family suited to southern conditions. It thrives on its own roots, is robust in growth, floriferous, fragrant, constant in bloom and always dependable.

Next in order I would place the hybrid teas. When well done, all are beautiful, but the majority are slackers when the rub comes, and only the favored few are worthy of extended planting unless grown under equitable conditions.

To the above two groups may be added a few Bourbons, Chinas, hybrid remontants, rugosas and their hybrids and the baby ramblers. These families not only add variety to extended lists, but many are among our most dependable bedders.

Three Groups.

Bedding roses may be divided into three groups, (a) those grown for cut flowers, (b) those grown for massing or mass effect, and (c) those grown for borders, dwarf beds or similar requirements. Further divisions should be made, especially with varieties used for massing. Some of the most dependable varieties are unequal in growth, i. e., Duchesse de Brabant is a strong grower, while Gruss an Teplitz is only moderate in growth. It is needless to say that for mass planting or grouping, the best effect is brought about by using only one variety. Never use varieties of unequal

These varieties are also good as cut flower varieties, but for growth, freedom of bloom and general mass effect, they are unequaled.

HYBRID TEA ROSES.

Cut flower varieties.

Radiance, rosy carmine.
Red Radiance, glowing crimson.
President Taft, deep shining pink.
Antoine Rivoire, rosy flesh on yellow ground.
F. R. Patzer, creamy buff.
Col. S. R. Williamson, satiny white, blush center.
Helen Gould, bright red.
Laurent Carle, velvety carmine.
Mme. Abel Chatenay, carmine rose, shaded salmon.
Lady Ursula, flesh pink.
Rhea Reid, dark velvety red.
Mrs. A. R. Waddell, coppery orange—a beautiful combination of colors.
Mme. Jenny Gillemot, deep saffron yellow.

HYBRID TEA ROSES.

Varieties suited for massing.

Ecarlate, brilliant red.
Red Letter Day, brilliant glowing scarlet.
Mlle. H. Cambier, orange yellow.
Wellesley, pink.
Miss Cynthia Ford, pink.

Where one has good soil conditions, position and the desire to increase the list, and also a willingness to work and occasionally take defeat, the following should be grown:

General MacArthur,	Ophelia,
Lady Ashton,	Betty,
Mme. Segond Weber,	Mrs. Chas. Russell,
White Killarney,	Mme. Euler,
Columbia,	Mme. Jules Grolez,
Florence Pemberton,	Killarney,
Mme. Testout,	Mrs. Aaron Ward,
General Jansen,	Kaiserin.

Kaiserin, a most beautiful white rose, is unsatisfactory on its own roots. It does well, however, budded on canina or multiflora stocks. I have had splendid results by growing climbing Kaiserin as a bush plant, but this takes time and constant attention.

Lesser Classes.

Bourbons offer few varieties, but when properly grown, they prove their worth by giving a mass of bloom, especially during the fall months. Eugene Marlitt is an indispensable garden rose. It should be included in every list of dependable varieties.

Empress Eugenie, bright pink.
Eugene Marlitt, rich scarlet with deeper tones.
White Malmaison, white, tinted lemon yellow.
Souv. de la Malmaison, blush white, shaded flesh.
Hermosa, bright pink.
Sombrieul, white.

Malmaison and its white form should be pruned only sparingly. If allowed to grow into large bushes their freedom of bloom will repay any and all attention given.

China roses have been practically supplanted by the dwarf polyantha or baby roses, but several are indispensable, such as Gruss an Teplitz and Louis Philippe. The latter is one of the best garden roses grown. Free in growth and constant in bloom, it always offers a handful of flowers when almost every other rose is at play.

Louis Philippe, velvety crimson.
Gruss an Teplitz, deep crimson, shaded maroon.
Burbank, cherry rose.

Hybrid remontants include a splendid list of varieties which are prolific spring bloomers, but unless careful and constant attention is given to pruning, the fall crop of blooms is limited. Those varieties which are usually termed ever-bloomers are usually poor growers and growth in mixed plantings. If this method is disregarded, within a few years the weaker member will be overshadowed by those of vigorous growth and will soon become diseased and die.

I have found the following list to be dependable under the trying extremes that we have in this section:

TEA ROSES.

Cut flower varieties.

William R. Smith, salmon and rose-pink.
Maman Cochet, light pink, shaded with salmon.
White Cochet, creamy white, faintly tinged with blush.
Helen Good, delicate yellow, suffused with pink, each petal edged deeper.
Mrs. Benj. R. Cant, deep rose.
Safrano, apricot and fawn.
Papa Gontier, rosy crimson.
Etoile de Lyon, bright sulphur-yellow.
Alexander Hill Gray, deep golden yellow.
Marie Van Houtte, canary yellow, petals tipped with deep rose.
Devoniensis, creamy white, blush center.

TEA ROSES.

Varieties suited for massing and show.
Duchesse de Brabant, light rose, shading to salmon.
Mme. Jos. Schwartz, creamy white, tinted pink.
Mme. Lambard, bright deep rose.
Snowflake, pure white.

A paper entitled, "A Talk on Bedding Roses," presented by Samuel Crowell, of Rosacres, Miss., at the seventh annual meeting of the Tennessee State Florists' Association, at Memphis, Tenn., November 17, 1920.

are poor contenders for admiration when compared with the excellent varieties found in other groups. The best varieties are:

Paul Neyron, deep rose.
Frau Karl Druschki, pure white.
His Majesty, dark crimson.

Other desirable varieties are Captain Hayward, Ulrich Brunner, Anna de Diesbach, Duchess of Sutherland, Mrs. Cornelius West, Hugh Dickson, George Dickson and John Hopper.

Rugosas and hybrids, for strictly bedding roses where show of foliage and flower is desired, meet the requirements, especially those varieties having the typical rugosa foliage. They should be pruned closely each season.

Hansa, double red.
Blanc de Coubert, semi-double pure white.
Belle Poitevine, semi-double pink with rosy reflex.

Delicata, bright shining pink.
Magnifica, deep lustrous red.
Atropurpurea, single deep maroon.
Rubra, single pink.
Alba, single white.

Conrad F. Meyer, Nova Zembla, Sir T. Lipton and New Century are magnificent varieties which thrive under trying conditions, and may be used to advantage where other desirable varieties would fail.

The hardy, constant-blooming group called baby roses will thrive under almost any condition or in any position where good drainage is given. The only defect that the majority of varieties have is a tendency to mildew and black spot. It seems to be the only group of roses that will bloom without foliage. They seem to require only moisture and proper temperature to give their mass of miniature blooms, which when well done are showy and effective. Of those varieties true to type, I have found the following to be the most desirable:

Orleans, deep geranium pink, base of petals white.
Mme. Levavasseur, the original crimson baby Rambler.

Catherine Zeimet, pure double white flowers.

The following are desirable, as they produce an abundance of miniature buds that are excellent for cutting:

Mlle. Cecile Brunner, blush, shaded salmon-pink.
White Cecile Brunner, pure white.
Perle d'Or, nankeen yellow.

In addition to the above varieties, Clothilde Soupert must be added. No rose of its color will surpass this variety as a bedder or where mass effect is desired. It is dependable, effective and will stand the acid test.

For Small Garden.

The above list covers the varieties that came to mind when I was asked to talk on bedding roses. It is a list which could be used to advantage in extended plantings, but for the small garden that could use only a limited number of varieties, I would select the following from all the groups noted above:

Cut Flower Varieties.

Pink.	White.
Maman Cochet.	White Cochet.
Radiance.	Antoine Rivolt.
Wm. R. Smith.	Marie Van Houtte.
Red.	Yellow.
Red Radiance.	Mme. Jenny Gillemot.
Eugene Marlitt.	Alexander Hill Gray.
Louis Philippe.	Etoile de Lyon.
Rose.	Fancy.
Mrs. B. R. Cant.	Mrs. A. R. Waddell.
Laurent Carle.	Helen Good.
	Safrano.

Vigorous-growing varieties for strictly bedding or massing.

Duchesse de Brabant.	Mme. Lombard.
Mme. Jos. Schwartz.	Snowflake.
Mlle. Helene Gambier.	Red Letter Day.
Empress Eugenie.	Eugene Marlitt.
Red Radiance.	Radiance.

Varieties of moderate growth for bedding or massing.

Ecarlate.	Clothilde Soupert.
Gruss an Teplitz.	Wellesley.
Etoile de Lyon.	Hermosa.

AMEND BEETLE QUARANTINE.

An amendment to the quarantine of parts of New Jersey and Pennsylvania on account of the Japanese beetle, which will be effective December 1, permits the shipment of cut flowers from the prescribed districts between November 1 and June 15. In the first text of the quarantine cut flowers were included with plants from greenhouses in being barred from shipment, except with a certificate of inspection, the year around.

The revised section of the quarantine, No. 48, as issued by Acting Secretary of Agriculture E. D. Ball November 17, reads as follows:

Regulation 4. Regulation of Movement of Plants and Plant Products and Other Articles Under Quarantine Originating in Infested Areas.

(1) Farm, garden and orchard products of all kinds, including fresh or perishable crops, such as green corn, tomatoes, beans, peas, cantaloupes, watermelons, grapes, raspberries, blackberries, cherries, peaches, apples and all other fresh fruits and vegetables; (2) grain and forage crops of all kinds; (3) nursery, ornamental and greenhouse stock and all other plants, including bulbs and cut flowers; and (4) soil, compost and manure other than fresh manure shall not be moved or allowed to be moved interstate to any point outside the infested area quarantined for the Japanese beetle unless and until such articles have been inspected by the United States Department of Agriculture and certified to be free from the Japanese beetle. Provided, That in the case of nursery, ornamental and greenhouse stock, bulbs and all other plants except cut flowers, this quarantine and regulation shall apply throughout the year; in the case of cut flowers and all other products, for the period between June 15 and November 1.

In the original quarantine the last clause read as follows:

Provided, That in the case of nursery, ornamental and greenhouse stock, and all other plants, including bulbs and cut flowers, this quarantine and regulation shall apply throughout the year; in the case of all other products, for the period between June 15 and November 1.

BRAMPTON, ONT.

The Market.

The winter season has opened in fine style, November business showing a considerable increase over last year. The cold weather has been long in coming, but although a certain slackness has been felt during the last fortnight by florists generally throughout the Dominion, owing to the weather having brought in a glut of stock at a period when all other markets were supposed to be weak, the air has since cleared and it is felt that there are no reasonable grounds for apprehension regarding the prospects for the season just begun.

The most important question for the next few weeks will be concerned with the problem of supply during the holiday season, the demand for all lines of stock being greater than ever this year.

Various Notes.

The coal situation has improved considerably in the course of the last few weeks and, although some of the florists have been unfortunate enough to have to pay profiteering rates for their supply, they will find it less difficult to furnish an explanation to their Christmas patrons when the question of prices comes up.

The large heating section at the Dale Estate is at last completed and firing began on Thursday, November 18. This new plant has been erected at a great expense and under the most disagreeable conditions that could have possibly prevailed. It has taken over eighteen months to accomplish this work, but as it means the linking up of the various greenhouses, covering an area of twenty-six acres, it is hoped that there will be considerable saving in coal and labor.

The wages of the workingman have undergone a change within the last few weeks, the rate per hour having been reduced from 50 cents to 40 cents. This is general throughout the country.

At the Dale Estate, the new offices and a large addition to the cellar are nearing completion and things are well under way to enable this firm to cope with the busiest season ever experienced in the florists' trade.

Among recent visitors were E. G. Hill, Richmond, Ind.; C. Lee, Montreal, and A. Tomlinson, Guelph.

W. G. Peacock returned this week from a successful trip to Montreal, Quebec and Ottawa in the interests of the Dale Estate.

shipping clerk. There should be counters provided for the wirers and bins built for made-up shipping boxes, so that they may be had at a moment's notice.

Storage Rooms.

I have divided my second floor into different rooms. I have a ribbon room, where all the ribbon, tulle, chiffon, etc., is stored. The stock is kept in glass cases on shelves, so that one can readily see just what stock is on hand. I have another room where all the baskets, tumbler vases, etc., are kept. Another one we call the glass room, where flower bowls, small glass vases, bud vases and novelty glassware are kept. Another room we use for keeping general supplies, such as toothpicks, twine and match sticks.

On the next landing I store all shipping and cut flower boxes. There is a separate bin to hold each size that we use, both in corrugated and cut flower boxes.

At the front of this floor, where there is ample light space, is our wire shop.

I have my arrangements on the top floor similar to the workroom floor. This is given over to the decorators. They have one room where all of the decorative materials, such as electrical fixtures, candelabra, tall vases, urns for church work, lattice paneling, Japanese umbrellas and lanterns and all this class of articles, are stored. We have a separate room on this floor which we call the carpenter shop, where all the painting of baskets, making of birch boxes and work of this nature is done.

Responsibility.

All of these separate rooms throughout the building are under lock and key. The decorators are responsible for the decorating rooms. They see to it that the different articles are stored properly in their respective places. The wire man has his own key and is responsible for the wire room. A general stockkeeper looks after the other rooms, keeping them locked at all times, and deals out the different articles as they may be needed. I hold him responsible for the stock in these different rooms.

The basement of our store is used as a stock room for the made-up wirework, heavy decorative materials, iron stands and goods of this character.

Hutchinson, Kan.—The Smith Flower Shop has been thoroughly redecorated. The color scheme throughout is gray. French doors have been installed in the entrances to the show windows.

IOWANS ACTIVE

Growers Organize.

A meeting called by J. S. Wilson, Sr., of Des Moines, Ia., a director of the National Flower Growers' Association, was held at the store of J. F. Wilcox & Sons, Council Bluffs, Ia., Wednesday, November 17. The growers of Iowa, Nebraska and Missouri were privileged to hear Secretary J. F. Ammann, of the National Flower Growers' Association, outline the purpose and aims of the association in an interesting and instructive talk. At the conclusion of the talk and the reading of the constitution and by-laws a short discussion was held, after which twenty-seven applications for membership were received. The constitution and by-laws were approved and the name Mid-west District of the National Flower Growers' Association was adopted.

The following officers and directors were elected: President, J. S. Wilson, Sr., Des Moines, Ia.; vice-presidents, Irwin Frey, Lincoln, Neb., and F. X. Stuppy, St. Joseph, Mo.; directors, Glenn Wilcox and F. L. Lainson, Council Bluffs, Ia.; J. Aldous, Iowa City, Ia.; I. O. Kemble, Marshalltown, Ia.; G. A. Fosberg, Sioux City, Ia., and J. J. Hess, Omaha, Neb. The board was authorized to name delegates to the national convention.

At a meeting of the directors, James L. Denmead, Marshalltown, Ia., was appointed secretary and Glenn Wilcox, Council Bluffs, Ia., was appointed treasurer.

The secretary is going to put on an active campaign at once for additional members. The meeting was an enthusiastic one and the outlook is bright for a large and active membership. The secretary will act until after the national convention, when the district expects to employ a secretary.

J. F. Ammann was elected an honorary member of the district association.

Iowa Society Meets.

Tuesday, November 16, at Council Bluffs, Ia., during the annual exposition of the Mid-West Horticultural Society, the attending florists of Iowa were entertained at a dinner given by J. F. Wilcox & Sons, at the Grand hotel. A business meeting of the Society of Iowa Florists was held during the evening and the following officers were elected for the coming year: President, Blaine Wilcox, Council Bluffs; vice-president, J. S. Wilson, Sr., Des Moines; secretary and treasurer, James L. Denmead, Marshalltown.

It was the sense of the meeting that the society endeavor to raise funds to employ a secretary and that the secretary of the Mid-west Horticultural Society be asked to accept the office and carry on the work in connection with his other duties.

Twenty-five members paid their dues, and the secretary will put on a campaign for more members.

WASHINGTON, D. C.

The Market.

The weather was dark and unfavorable last week, and a shortage of all varieties of stock was felt during the last few days. The conditions which resulted formed a peculiar contrast with the previous week, when almost every seasonable variety of stock was available at low prices. There was a large increase in out-of-town orders, but it was hard to get sufficient stock to fill them. From all indications, this shortage will be felt for some time, as the dark, rainy weather continues.

Various Notes.

Z. D. Blackstone has added a new Dodge car to his delivery service.

Jacob Minder's greenhouses were robbed last week. The thieves took a large quantity of fine chrysanthemums.

Thomas Kirk, of the Oehmler Floral Co., was out of town on business several days last week.

Results bring advertising.
The Review brings results.

HOPE you had a good Thanksgiving.

ADVANCE orders indicated a better Thanksgiving business than usual in most markets.

SOME small ranges are more profitable than large ones, because their owners are expert at utilizing every foot of bench space.

THE requisites for success are ability to do something well and doing it. The second is as important as the first and more often lacking.

GIGANTEUM bulbs which are to be flowered for Easter, which is March 27 in 1921, should be planted not later than the first week in December.

A GOOD many people, florists and publishers among others, have not realized how easy it has been to get business in the last two years. It may be different during the next few months. The survival of the fittest may be among the old laws which are about to function again.

THE trade may not soon again be so ready to buy large quantities of Holland bulbs at high prices, but there is little probability that anyone who forces his 1920 purchases for his own retail trade will fail to make money. The florist who grows and retails in a small city is the most independent man on earth.

A STRAW shows the wind. Bradstreet's reports 307 failures in the United States for last week, against 211 for the previous week, and 110, 132, 238, 303 for the corresponding weeks of 1919 to 1916. About 69.7 per cent of the total number of concerns failing had $5,000 capital or less, and 16.6 per cent had from $5,000 to $20,000 capital.

"WE send today a few flowers for the editor's desk" has become a frequent message in the mails and with it November 22 came a half-dozen perfect blooms of Baur & Steinkamp's new chrysanthemum, Thanksgiving Pink, so named because of the season at which it is ready to cut. It is an unusually large, well formed flower, deep pink in color, and has been commented favorably on by everyone who has visited the offices of The Review this week. It will be generally tried, once it is on the market.

IT is said that one eastern concern has acquired all the coconut fiber in sight and doubled the price.

NEAR the large cities common labor is being obtained for greenhouse work at approximately half its cost six months ago.

THE November issue of the S. A. F. Journal, reduced to thirty-two pages this month, is filled chiefly with reports of state vice-presidents, which are mainly concerned with local fuel problems of last winter.

SOME sellers report the retail florists as being heavily stocked with Christmas goods, bought earlier and more freely than ever before, with present demand negligible, but it seems quite probable it is only the lull before the storm.

THE price of chiffon is what the salesmen call "shot to pieces," but none of the retailers is buying except for immediate needs; they are doing as almost always is done in a broken market, waiting for prices to go still lower, although there is greater probability they will rebound.

THE editor's desk has been decorated for several days with a vase of seedling chrysanthemums from W. F. Richter, Cullman, Ala. There were two varieties, of his own raising, a cream-colored semi-double and a snow-white variety almost like a cactus dahlia. Mr. Richter wrote that he has twenty-five plants of one and ten of the other, in their second year.

A DOZEN HUNDRED.

This week The Review pays to readers its twelve-hundredth visit—that is, to those of its present readers who were among the subscribers to its first number, and there are a considerable number of them. Those who can remember that first number will note a great change. Most marked is the change in size and appearance. It has occupied twenty-three years—not a lightning transformation, but a steady upward growth wrought by hard work and service to the trade. The dozen hundred numbers represent a contribution to the trade's progress; and there is satisfaction in realizing that The Review's growth has kept pace with that of the trade.

NO TIME FOR PESSIMISTS.

In the processes of business readjustment, some of which seem to have an exceedingly dark gray hue at the moment, florists should not overlook the factors operating, not for today or tomorrow, but for next week and next month. Clearness of mind on this score will save pessimistic thoughts and promote that courageous optimism which is so valuable to any business man just now. The reasons for assuming a cheerful view of conditions are cited in the following paragraph from a prominent banker's statement recently:

"There is so much in the present situation to inspire confidence and hope for the future that it is little short of criminal for anyone to paint the picture so blackly, through either ignorance or intent, that these vital facts are obscured. To cite a few pertinent facts: This country will harvest this year one of the largest crops in its history; its transportation congestion has been relieved and its railroad system is for the first time in a decade on a sound financial and operating basis; we have passed through a national election and assured four years of sane administration of public affairs; our banking system has withstood the greatest credit strain in its history and is on a sound and workable basis; the accumulated surplus of five years of splendid prosperity is stored in many ways for our continued use; the markets of the world demand our products and a great mercantile marine is prepared to transport them; this country has not been overbuilt or overextended in any of its underlying activities, and faces no program of readjustment along these lines such as usually precipitates panic conditions. We are in the soundest financial, industrial and political condition of any important nation in the world. These are the simple fundamental facts of our business situation, and to consider the present reaction as anything but a temporary setback from the destruction, inflation, extravagance and unsound economic conditions precipitated by the war is simply not to reckon with the truth."

HERE'S A CHANCE FOR HELP.

Greenhouse owners and nurserymen whose experienced employees have left them for more profitable trades and who have found no apprentices forthcoming to replace them, may find a possible solution of the help difficulty in the work of the Federal Board for Vocational Education, Division of Rehabilitation, which has offices in the principal cities of the country. The office of district No. 8 is at 14 East Congress street, Chicago. This district office covers the states of Illinois, Michigan and Wisconsin and in the last two weeks has had three applications from returned soldiers wishing to obtain positions in the florists' or nursery business.

Work in a greenhouse or a nursery is quite beneficial to men who have spent months in hospital wards, have suffered from a slight dose of gas, or are recuperating from shell shock or nervous troubles, and the board expects many applications in the near future by returned soldiers for positions in this kind of work. So systematic are the board's classifications that the employer need not fear that the man he takes on will be too much disabled to do his job. Only certain men with minor disabilities will be given positions of this nature, and in every case the man will be able to carry on his duties as well as another. Moreover, in some cases the disabilities might be such that, while able to do greenhouse work, the applicant would be unfitted for some other occupations, and hence would be the more likely to remain permanently in his place.

Of course, since these men are, for the most part, untrained in the rudiments of the profession, the employer would not feel justified in paying high salaries at first, but would in many cases gladly take the applicant as an apprentice, paying him what he was actually worth. The Federal Board for Vocational Education sees to it that each man gets enough, over and above what his employer pays him, to live on. This means that by making a place for a soldier apprentice the employer does not take any burden on his shoulders. He pays the actual value of the apprentice's labor and the federal board sees that he gets a competency.

OBITUARY

Charles J. Bolgiano.

Charles J. Bolgiano, president of J. Bolgiano & Son, Baltimore, Md., was found dead in his garage in the rear of his home, 8 Elmhurst road, Roland Park, Friday morning, November 19, from carbon monoxide gas poisoning. He was seated in his automobile, the engine of which was running, when found by his son, Charles A. Bolgiano. Gas from the engine of the car caused death, according to the coroner, who believed that death was accidental.

When informed of Mr. Bolgiano's death, Thomas Kemp, his attorney, said: "Mr. Bolgiano's death at this time is particularly sad and unfortunate. He had suffered business reverses which precipitated bankruptcy about a month ago, but only November 18, at a meeting of the larger creditors, which Mr. Bolgiano and his brother and other members of the family attended, a plan of reorganization was submitted, which was received favorably, and sufficient funds had been pledged by Mr. Bolgiano's brother and other relatives to finance the plan and rehabilitate the business."

"I attended this meeting with Mr. Bolgiano at the Baltimore Trust Co. and later Mr. Bolgiano came to my office, where we remained until late in the afternoon. Before leaving he made an appointment to call at my office at 10 o'clock Friday morning, to complete preparations for the reorganization. At this time he seemed very cheerful and optimistic."

Members of Mr. Bolgiano's family said that he had suffered heart attacks recently. He went to his garage to get his car at 6:30 o'clock, and when he did not emerge from the garage his son, thinking that something was wrong with the machine, went to help him. He found the door of the garage closed, and when he opened it, was met by a cloud of dense smoke and gas. He found his father, apparently dead, seated at the steering wheel of the car.

Several physicians were hastily summoned, but their efforts to revive Mr. Bolgiano proved futile.

He is survived by his widow, two sons, Charles Alfred and John Norman Bolgiano, five daughters, Flora E., May, Emily M., Mary Virginia and Charlotte A. Bolgiano, two brothers, Roland and Frank W. Bolgiano, and a sister, Mrs. J. Burch Joyce.

Mr. Bolgiano and his brother, Roland Bolgiano, now of Los Angeles, Cal., succeeded their father, the late Joseph H. Bolgiano, in the seed business in 1897. They conducted the business as partners until about seven years ago, when Roland's health caused him to resign from the firm.

That Mr. Bolgiano was deeply interested in the adjustment of his financial difficulties is shown by the fact that a few days ago, in association with William H. Hihm and Morris B. Robinson as incorporators, he obtained a charter for Charles J. Bolgiano, Inc., which was, with the assent of the creditors in the bankruptcy proceedings, hereafter to conduct the seed business under corporate, instead of his personal management. The authorized capital stock of the corporation was to consist of 1,000 shares of undeclared par value.

William Ingle, Waldo Newcomer and Albert D. Graham, who were named by the creditors of the late Mr. Bolgiano as trustees in bankruptcy of his assets and business, applied to Judge Rose for authority to continue this business for the present, in view of a report made by the receivers that, since their appointment a few weeks ago, the business has proved profitable.

Mr. Bolgiano was a member of many organizations, among which are the following: Board of Trade, American Seed Trade Association, Society of American Florists, City Club, Advertising Club, Ancient and Honorable Mechanical Company of Baltimore, Roland Park Civic League, Merchants and Manufacturers Association, Chamber of Commerce of the United States, Automobile Club of Maryland, Thirty-second Degree A. F. and A. M., Mystic Shrine and Knights Templar.

Abraham Iralson.

Abraham Iralson, one of the veteran retail florists in Chicago, died November 22 at Hahnemann hospital, as the result of an accident which occurred November 18. Shortly after dark on the evening of that day Mr. Iralson started to cross Grand boulevard near his store, which is at 356 East Forty-third street, and was struck by a taxicab. He suffered such severe injuries about the head and chest that he never fully regained consciousness.

Charles J. Bolgiano.

Mr. Iralson had spent a large part of his life in the vicinity of the spot at which he met his death. He had been in the retail business between Grand boulevard and the "L" station for over twenty years, first with a place on the south side of the street, which he sold out to permit a venture in the northwest. Returning to the city after an absence of a few years, he sought his old neighborhood, opening his store almost directly across the street from his former store. There he quickly regained the personal following that had made him moderately prosperous through life. He was about 50 years of age. A brother, Mose, is a well-known business man in the same south side neighborhood in which Mr. Iralson was located.

The funeral was held November 24 from the chapel at 936 East Forty-seventh street, with burial at Rosehill. There was a large attendance and many flowers.

John Weir.

John Weir, of Brooklyn, N. Y., died suddenly while on a New York Central train approaching the One Hundred and Twenty-fifth street station November 22. Since boyhood he had been connected with the business and was active around the store at 324 Fulton street up to Saturday, November 20, despite the 75 or more years of age he carried. For the period of an ordinary lifetime he was around the flower market, making purchases of stock, only recently settling down to indoor work. Both he and his brother, Fred, were prominent retailers of Brooklyn. His father, James Weir, a native of Perth, was a pioneer grower of plants in the vicinity of New York. He saw practically the beginning of the florists' business in and around New York and Brooklyn. He is survived by his wife, a son and a daughter. J. H. P.

Henry C. Woltemate.

Henry C. Woltemate, Mt. Airy, Philadelphia, died unexpectedly while asleep Sunday night, November 21. He was the last to survive of three brothers, all of whom achieved the reputation of able florists in the vicinity of Philadelphia. His son, Albert W. Woltemate, had succeeded to the management of his father's greenhouses, at Mt. Airy. Another son, Gilbert, bought a range at Wyndmoor.

CHICAGO.

The Market.

Last week closed with a two days' spurt of business which left the market at quitting time November 20 more closely cleaned up than in several months. This was in spite of the return of warm weather, which accelerated the production of cut flowers. Conditions gave rise to the belief that the trade is in line for its usual winter activity, with a fair amount of stock until after Christmas unless cold weather intervenes. A cold snap always reduces the cuts and, with demand at its present volume, prices are likely to be as erratic as the weather.

In certain places there was an increase in the rose supply last week, which set the local buyers shopping. There never was greater sameness in the rose supply than this season. Beauties have almost ceased to be a factor, although two growers are cutting almost perfect stock in some quantity. In most cases Premier and Russell are used interchangeably and Columbia is in largest supply. Something as yet unexplained has happened to Ophelia, which is neither so plentiful nor so good as usual at this time of year. Butterfly takes its place. The only red rose is Milady, a variety some growers do much less well than others. There are few white.

The supply of chrysanthemums for Thanksgiving is the smallest in years. The early sorts, including pompons, were nearly all cut out before the approach of the feast day began to be felt in the market. But it is said there will be unusually large supplies of mums and pompons after Thanksgiving. The explanation is that in recent seasons the late mums were much more profitable than the earlier varieties, with the result that the growers gradually have been shifting over. They say they will be cutting until Christmas.

Carnations have not increased in supply as had been expected and it is beginning to be believed that last year's experience is being felt in this department also. In spite of last year's high prices, many growers said they lost money because they cut so few flowers and several planted something else this season, principally lettuce. Certain it is that the supply, which started strong, has failed to assume the large proportions the favorable growing season had led us to expect. Prices stiffened even before the Thanksgiving orders began to have an influence. Laddie is more abundant than last year and deserves to be classed as the finest carnation ever offered to the public.

Paper Whites are plentiful; the price is too high for rapid selling. Lilies have begun to move more freely. The supply of valley is kept nicely adjusted to the demand. Cattleyas are scarce and the price is back where it was put last winter. Violets are not plentiful; there are few locally grown singles this year and New York prices have been better than Chicago prices for the doubles. There are some excellent sweet peas and they sell briskly.

phis last week, for the meeting of the progressive Tennessee State Florists' Association.

John Poehlmann, treasurer of Poehlmann Bros. Co. and manager of the city stores, was there with C. J. Nielsen, one of the supply department salesmen, and a fine exhibit of cut flowers. Mr. Poehlmann went thence to New Orleans for a couple of days, while Mr. Nielsen went to Burlington, Ia., to meet his wife, who was with relatives near there.

Paul R. Klingsporn spent three days at Memphis in the interest of the Chicago Flower Growers' Association, returning home to find the pride of the family, 2½ years old, under the care of the doctor. It proved to be only a cold.

William A. Hansen, of the Amling Co., spent Monday and Tuesday at the show at Council Bluffs, Wednesday and Thursday at Memphis and Friday at St. Louis.

Eric Johnson, manager of the cut flower department of the A. L. Randall Co., also had an exhibit for the supply department. Probably that fact had nothing to do with it, but Mr. Johnson returned November 20 suffering with a severe cold.

A. Miller and I. Rosnosky represented the A. B. C. Mr. Miller read a paper to the convention. There are those who say it was the best of many good ones.

Want an Apprentice?

At the meeting of the Commercial Flower Growers of Chicago November 18 a communication from the Federal Board for Vocational Education was read, offering to greenhouse men in this vicinity the opportunity to place slightly disabled men at work as apprentices at nominal, if any, wage. The board pays, in the Chicago district, $100 per month to such men, so that they are not dependent upon their earnings and a grower may pay just what he thinks such services are worth. The board's letter read as follows:

The Federal Board for Vocational Education, providing training for former service men who have been disabled, is desirous of placing men in greenhouses about Chicago. If a man has had any previous experience in this line or seems adapted to it, the Federal Board is anxious to teach him this line of business thoroughly. Employers may pay a person in training whatever they feel he is worth. The board pays a single man in training in Chicago $100 a month; so he is not dependent on his work for a livelihood. Anybody who has any openings where a man may learn "on the job" will confer a favor on the board by informing it of that fact. Telephone Harrison 8940 and ask for Mr. Rich.

Harvey W. Noyes,
Federal Board for Vocational Education.

Growers' Meeting.

A handful of the "old faithfuls" made a quorum at the meeting of the Commercial Flower Growers of Chicago at the Hotel Randolph Thursday evening, November 18, but not much more. The cold weather and the nearness of Thanksgiving kept most of the members home. On this account the important matters which came up for consideration were tabled or held over until the next meeting. The addition of one-eighth of one per cent to the one-half now collected on growers' returns, as a means of paying their dues to the local and national growers' organizations, was tabled until it could be learned whether the national body would take action in revising its schedule of dues at the Washington meeting in January. The matter of compensation for the secretary, brought up by President Kohout, was postponed for action at the next meeting. Consideration of the paper of President Kohout on stabilizing the market, published in The Review of September 23, was also deferred till a larger number of members might be present.

Secretary Otto Amling reported on "Say It with Flowers" week, the success of which is thoroughly recognized by the local trade. One new member, Calvary Cemetery Greenhouses, was admitted.

R. J. Windler sent in bunches of two pompon chrysanthemums as an exhibit. At his request they were judged, President Kohout appointing George J. Ball and Herbert Amling a committee for this purpose. Seedling No. 5 was given 90 points and No. 13 was given 75 points. Honorable mention was awarded the exhibitor. In this connection discussion ensued regarding the staging of exhibits at each meeting as a means of drawing a larger attendance. While the plan was favored, it was thought that the next meeting, coming nine days before Christmas, would be an inopportune time to begin.

Various Notes.

A representative of the Federal Horticultural Board visited Chicago importers last week to find out how the regulations for administering Quarantine No. 37 are working. He stated it to be the desire of the board to make the system operate as smoothly as possible and that he was sent to receive and consider suggestions. All administrative and inspection work has thus far been done at Washington and seaport cities, but it has been suggested that an office be opened at Chicago for the transaction of any of the business of the board.

"The florists' business is far from being dead yet," said the veteran, Ernst Wienhoeber. As a matter of fact, business was booming right then, with a rush of high-class funeral work and some good orders for social affairs. This has been, thus far, one of the best seasons in the experience of the E. Wienhoeber Co.

Visitors to the H. N. Bruns valley forcing establishment on the west side note with interest the marked difference between various lots of stock. The explanation is that the best stock came from his regular growers near Hamburg, but that the crop in 1919 was insufficient for the needs of his trade and, to maintain his output, it was necessary to force pips obtained from several other sources, many of which, if not blind, throw spikes which fail to develop. The Bruns distribution of pips extends from ocean to ocean, several growers on the Pacific coast receiving large weekly shipments. Mr. Bruns says his brother at Hamburg took the crops of his regular growers throughout the war, although the pips could not be shipped to America, and did well with them in Germany, and, curiously enough, found Russia a specially profitable custommer. Steamers with refrigeration service recently resumed fortnightly sailings from Hamburg to New York.

The accession of over forty new retailers to the membership list of the Allied Florists' Association since autumn activity commenced is looked upon by the directors as evidence of the organization's recognized success in the trade.

hill November 22 and the day marked Mr. Nissen's first absence from his post in the eight and one-half years he has been office man for the Chicago Flower Growers' Association.

Sweet peas are slow in progress this month and to that fact George J. Ball attributes their present good prices. The November and December crops are, so to speak, on the knees of the weather man.

There are 2,068 square feet of space in the basement rose department of the E. C. Amling Co. C. J. Michelsen says its capacity is the grading and counting of 10,000 roses per hour. Mr. Michelsen will have nothing to do but work for a month, as his home is quarantined. June has a light case of scarlet fever.

The death of Abe Iralson, as the result of an automobile accident, is recorded in this week's obituary column.

C. L. Washburn says he noted with interest the "Open Letter" of J. A. Cannon in The Review of November 11, containing the sentence: "Flowers during the present season are of a poorer quality and higher in price than a year ago." "The remark leads to the belief," says Mr. Washburn, "that the gentleman does not get his stock from the Chicago market, because flowers here never were better than this year, while prices have not been higher than last autumn, except, perhaps, for mums."

The wholesalers are being repeatedly warned that the supply of ferns will not last till spring. The eastern shippers have put the price up steadily, "to conserve the stock on hand."

F. O. Wildhagen and L. J. Dumwald, of Waterloo, Ia., have been here this week. From strawberry plants they have advanced to gladioli and have a crop of bulbs to sell this season. They bought a large quantity of planting stock last spring, obtaining it from several sources, and say they have learned that there is a great difference in the health and vitality of the same variety from different growers.

Mr. Johnson, of the Johnson Floral Co., Kendallville, Ind., who has been a Review reader for fifteen years, was a visitor this week on his way home from the University of Illinois, where he spent Fathers' day, November 20, with his son.

Andrew Brown, aged 25, a former employee of Poehlmann Bros. Co., whose sister is an office assistant at Morton Grove, died November 19 and was buried at Niles Center November 22.

east of Chicago last week. He reports that the passing of the mum season will result in a considerable increase in the calls on this market. Most of the large stores look to Chicago for their better grades of roses.

R. Scheffler, Wheaton, only began to cut his crops of pompons for Thanksgiving. He will cut until Christmas.

A. J. Zech accounts for last week's boost in the market's activity by pointing out that chrysanthemums had become pretty well cleaned up everywhere within Chicago's shipping radius, with the result that innumerable florists who recently have been using their own mums again came into position to handle Chicago flowers. The increase in business principally was in shipping.

ological gardens in Cook county's forest preserve near Riverside has been finished and Peter Reinberg, as president of the board of commissioners, has named November 30 for a conference with a group of leading residents of Chicago interested in the big enterprise. As indicating the magnitude of the operations of Lubliner & Trinz, former florists who now are movie magnates, one of their string of more than a dozen theaters was sold last week, the Vita-graph, for $165,000. The sale does not affect the tenancy of Lubliner & Trinz, who operate the 1,000-seat theater under a fifteen-year lease from September 1, 1914, at a net annual rental of $15,000, the lessee paying all taxes, insurance and upkeep. Their lease also includes the stores and offices in the two-story building.

the demand even at that was not strong enough to absorb arrivals, and clearances were quite difficult to make. Everybody is wondering what is the matter with business. Retailers say that prospective customers come into their stores, look around, ask prices and go out again without purchasing. When one notes the light buying for retail needs it is not hard to believe what the retailers say. There is something out of joint, but none can say exactly what.

Roses are not overplentiful, but move slowly. Individual sales are small and indicate hand-to-mouth buying. American Beauty is on the short side and the top price has advanced to $100 per hundred and even more for selected flowers. Hybrid teas are of excellent quality, but last week's quotations still apply, there being no change, although prices of the short grades are somewhat firmer.

About $6 per dozen is the average top price, with selected flowers of some of the finer varieties bringing as much as $9. These prices, of course, apply to absolutely fresh stock; to remove occasional congestion they are materially shaded. Pompons and singles are bringing from 35 to 75 cents per bunch.

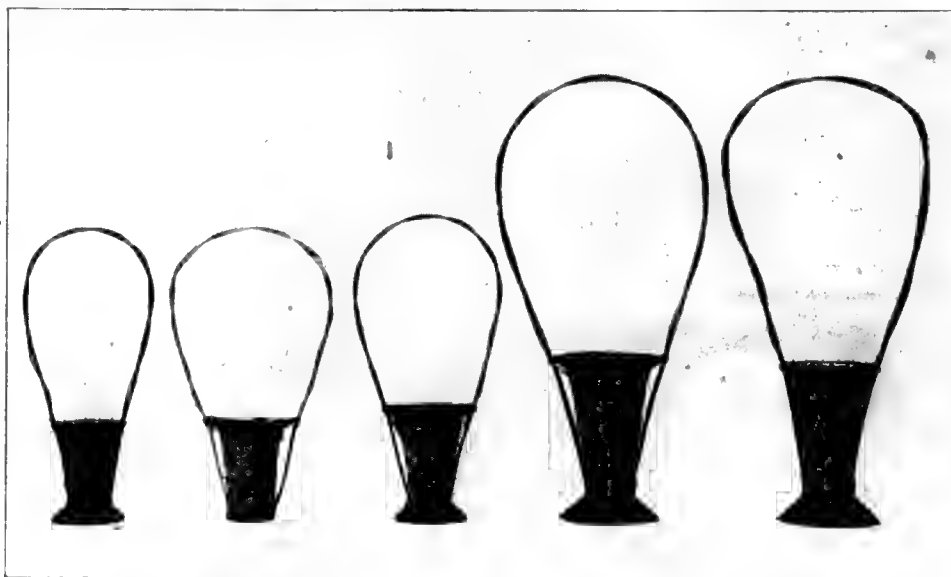

Violets at the close of the week were in short supply, owing to a large demand for them arising from the Yale-Harvard football game, and the asking price was $4 per hundred, although actual sales at $2.50 per hundred became at the end the rule rather than the exception. The violet supply is likely to be light for a little time, due to weather conditions lately experienced. In miscellaneous flowers there are snapdragons, calendulas, pansies, bouvardia and sweet peas.

Various Notes.

A well attended meeting at the Hotel Imperial Monday evening, November 15, marked the rejuvenescence of the Associated Retail Florists of New York. The activities among the other trade bodies in this section in the direction of publicity for flowers have been the cause of the awakening of this organization. Various members of the organization were responsible for a large number of new members taken into the association at this meeting, and it looks as though the retail trade from now on will have an organization of which it may be proud. G. E. M. Stumpp presided, and Wm. H. Siebrecht, Jr., acted as secretary. Officers elected at the meeting were as follows: President, E. J. Hession; vice-president, H. Perry; treasurer, C. H. Brown. To the president was given power to appoint a secretary. Directors are E. J. Hession, Marshall Clarke, Max Schling, A. T. Bunyard, E. J. McCarthy, G. E. M. Stumpp, Henry Hart, Wm. A. Warendorff, Wm. A. Phillips and Adolph Meyer.

A meeting of the flower show committee was called for Monday, November 22, at the secretary's office, at which arrangements in progress for the exhibition were discussed.

To be dead, buried and have one's memory slated for an official memorial while yet alive is the lot of few mortals.

M. C. Wright, the well-known representative of the Lord & Burnham Co., located in Chicago, is assuring his many friends in the east that he is quite alive, notwithstanding the report in an eastern contemporary that at the recent meeting of the New York Florists' Club a resolution of sympathy upon his death was passed. It was reported at the meeting that Mr. Wright had "cashed in," but it was only as regards his membership in the club, which he regretfully relinquished for the reason that his field of activity for some time had been outside the sphere of the club.

The approach of the Christmas season is evidenced in the arrival of quantities of lycopodium and other greens, which are going into cold storage.

HOME FROM ABROAD

WM. T. USINGER, FOREIGN BUYER FOR THE McCALLUM COMPANY, RETURNS

OUR Foreign Buyer, Mr. Wm. T. Usinger, has just returned from abroad, where he was most successful in making some very exceptional buys in such articles as Crepe Paper, Chiffons, Prepared Foliages, Artificial Flowers, Novelties and various other items of a more staple nature. These Florists' requisites will shortly be following him across and we expect to have the greatest line of imported goods to offer the Florist trade that has ever been handled by a supply house—this together with our own manufactured goods will place at your command the most complete and largest assortments of supplies to be found anywhere. This will enable us to render even a greater service in the future than in the past.

The Wholesale Florists' Protective Association held its twelfth anniversary dinner at the Hotel Breslin Saturday evening, November 20. About forty members and guests sat down to a most excellent repast. Among the guests were E. Gurney Hill, Richmond, Ind., and C. H. Totty, Madison, N. J. After coffee was served, President Frank H. Traendly, as toastmaster, called upon several for short addresses, which dealt in the main with the objects of the organization. A splendid orchestra furnished music, and a couple of feminine singers furnished cabaret specialties which were greatly enjoyed. The table

PHILADELPHIA.

The Market.

The week before Thanksgiving was marked by a scarcity of cut flowers. Cold, on several days stormy, weather has been partly responsible; the almost irresistible and foolish tendency to hold back flowers as a holiday approaches has helped and no special effort has been made to crop for Thanksgiving. Chrysanthemums are the leading flower. The late varieties, the pompons and the singles are at their best. Prices have been excellent.

Other flowers have been in fair rather than good supply. The demand keeps them moving rapidly at prices that are slowly advancing.

To Fight Quarantine 37.

The horticultural societies of three states, Massachusetts, New York and Pennsylvania, are carrying on a joint campaign against Quarantine No. 37. The idea is to gather together an array of facts that will prove the quarantine to be unwise and to present these each as a case before the Federal Horticultural Board, with the object of having the quarantine modified or removed altogether. Each of the horticultural societies has appropriated $2,000 to be used in paying the expenses of gathering and compiling the necessary data. It is further proposed to greatly increase the fund of $6,000 by private subscription, should this be found necessary. The task is so great that much effort will be required and much energy will be needed to carry it through successfully.

The Bickmore Greenhouses.

It is the ambition of Milton H. Bickley to make his place the finest in the country. Beautifully situated at Wallingford, in the midst of rolling country, the Bickmore Greenhouses are rapidly coming to the front. Their specialties are grown in such large quantities as to stagger the ordinary florist even in these days of large figures. For instance, half a million bulbs are to be forced, including narcissi, hyacinths and tulips, and they have lilies all the year around. Carnations are Mr. Bickley's leading specialty, with the idea of making them as good as can be. Clarence Alwine, famous for his success at Alden, has been placed in charge as manager. Mr. Bickley believes that the carnations in the Bickmore Greenhouses today are the finest that have ever been seen there. The varieties are Matchless, Mrs. C. W. Ward, Benora, Enchantress Supreme, Belle Washburn (large and perfect), Laddie (highly esteemed), and Perfection, a crystal white (new).

The chrysanthemums are just finishing their season. Bonnaffon, White Chadwick, Mrs. Godfrey and Seidewitz are fine. They had the finished look that denotes culture.

The bulbs are just beginning to make their presence known inside. Lilies are few, out of respect for the queen of autumn. Paper White narcissi are in full bloom, while Trumpet Majors are just pushing through the soil. The cold storage shed for bulbs is remarkable. It is of great size, something like 30x480 feet, filled with ventilators and steam pipes. Perfect in its arrangements, the shed makes an ideal place for bulbs now rooting outside.

Material for Easter, spring and summer abounded. Concrete frames, a personal achievement of Mr. Bickley, were well made. The water system,

The American Legion.

When a grower reaches that point of success where he feels he may safely venture on untrodden paths, or, to put it differently, when he feels ambitious enough to take a chance, he usually goes to see Robert Scott & Son or he goes to see Edward Towill. It is easy to locate the progressive, wide-awake rose growers by calling at Sharon Hill or at Roslyn. For there you see rose seedlings galore. At Sharon Hill are the best Irish seedlings of pedigree as well as those raised there. At Roslyn are Teddy Towill's own.

Now, it so happened that Mrs. Prentiss Nichols had been called upon at home and vastly admired even before her christening; so this call was at Roslyn. That the visit was well timed was shown by the fact that a very great grower, who shall be nameless, was there, already intent on securing stock of a certain new cerise-colored rose seedling, considered so promising that Mr. Towill has a quantity planted out under glass.

This seedling is the now famous American Legion, christened at the Armory two weeks ago. Its forbears include Hadley and Milady (Mr. Towill's own) and Rosalind Orr English. It is so fine a thing that Mr. Towill's admirers are talking about American Legion and American Beauty as though the rose list ended right there. The great man was evidently taken with the rose. Its unusual color, its vigor, its freedom of bloom appealed to him. His name and whether he decided to plant a house with American Legion may not be here disclosed. For this information you will have to ask Edward Towill, of Roslyn.

Porto Rico.

The event of the week was the departure of Robert Craig for Porto Rico, accompanied by two assistants and 150 bundles of sashbars. Mr. Craig sailed from New York November 17. He will go to his farm near San Juan. There he will put in a water system and erect sashbar houses. His idea is that sashbar houses will be more rigid than slat houses and therefore not so easily blown down. As soon as this work is completed dracena canes and some other specialties will be shipped him from Norwood. They will be grown at the farm in Porto Rico and sent back to Norwood when ready. Since Porto Rico is a part of our country, Quarantine No. 37 does not affect these shipments. It will be remembered that Mr. Craig celebrated his golden wedding October 27. His enterprise is an inspiration to us all.

FRAT-M'S

Frat-Ms are a great help to florists who make funeral work. They are exact reproductions of the official emblems embossed in gold and the different colors as required by each Fraternal and Labor organization.

The florist is saved time and worry in the nuisance of lettering, as well as the keeping of such a stock of wire frames, and different colored flowers. Just use such flowers as you have and then attach a FRAT-M with paste to the chiffon, or by the hanger that comes for each, as a card, and that is all there is to it, excepting the comment and commendatory talk for the florist.

Just pick out a dozen of the most used from the list following, enclosing $2.00 per dozen, and if they don't make you ten times their cost, return those unused and get your money.

Square and Compass, Chapter, Commandery, 32nd Degree, Shrine, Eastern Star, Royal Neighbors, M. W. A., Maccabees, Odd Fellows, Red Men, Knights of Columbus, K. of P., Moose, Jr. O. U. A. M., B. of R. T., B. of R. Clerks, B. of L. E., Br. of Blacksmiths and Helpers, Eagles.

No fancy prices are likely, but stock is shortening up and with the early passing of chrysanthemums a decided shortage seems probable. No one anticipates as good business as a year ago. The majority of flowers sold at $3 to $6 per dozen, with poor ones lower. Pompons, especially bronze and crimson ones, have sold well of late.

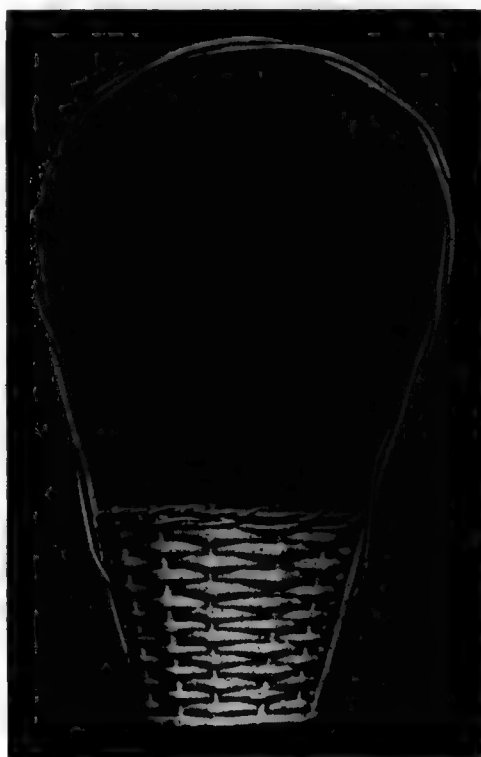

Roses are coming in less freely and there is no trouble in cleaning them up at good prices. Short-stemmed stock makes $6 to $10, according to color. The best grades make as high as $25 and some fancy pinks and reds $40. For American Beauty there has been a good call. Carnations have braced up to $8 and $10, Laddie bringing more. Violets at $2 and $3 are not abundant; neither are lilies or callas. Paper Whites are rather a slow sale. Stevia has appeared, but will sell better a little later. The warm fall has hastened its blooming period. Sweet peas are selling better; so is the comparatively small quantity of miscellaneous flowers arriving.

There are still good supplies of catleyas and more cypripediums are coming in than a week ago. Valley is scarce and dear. Small lots of gardenias are arriving. An abundance of good cyclamens, begonias and other flowering plants are coming in, some poinsettias being included.

Gardeners' and Florists' Club.

In spite of a cold, driving storm of rain and sleet, the first of the season, there was a good attendance at the club meeting November 16, over sixty members being present. The executive committee reported in favor of holding a banquet on or about February 1 and after some discussion they were instructed to secure figures from various hotels and caterers to present at the December meeting. Communications were read asking support for the American Red Cross and inviting club members to view the great show of winter-flowering begonias in the E. S. Webster greenhouses, at Chestnut Hill.

George T. Stewart, of Waltham, was presented with a large and handsome gold medal, awarded by the National Association of Gardeners for meritorious new plants, hybrid calceolarias, shown in Boston last May. The presentation was made by W. N. Craig, the newly elected president of the association. Exhibits of the evening included fine plants of Golden Mistletoe and Helen Frick chrysanthemums from Walter H. Golby, a collection of twenty-three seedling chrysanthemums raised from Mrs. Filkins and nine other seedlings from A. E. T. Rogers, Prides Crossing, Mass., awarded honorable mention, and a collection of pompon and anemone chrysanthemums and Bouvardia made as follows: President, William N. Craig; treasurer, James Methven; executive committee, P. W. Burke, J. R. Ness, A. K. Rogers, John L. Russell, George W. Butterworth, George W. Hammer and Louis J. Reuter. The election will be held December 21.

Andrew Christensen was the first speaker of the evening and entertained the members in his inimitable way for about forty minutes as he graphically described his recent tour through the war zone of northern France, including the Chemin des Dames, Soissons, Rheims, Belleau Woods, Chateau Thierry, Meaux and other places hallowed for all time in history. He spoke feelingly of the magnificent avenues of trees, once so majestic, now standing torn and stark after their terrific shelling. In some of the large dugouts he found fine crops of mushrooms growing. In the cultivated fields, wheat, sugar beets, mangels and alfalfa were producing splendid crops. In the heart of the war zone he found one most interesting small florist's place walled in with trained fruit trees, in which heliotropes, fuchsias, veronicas and other plants showed loving care.

The various cemeteries were carefully inspected and all showed excellent care. Paris itself seemed the same as when he visited it ten years earlier, and had he not visited the war zone and seen the awful destruction wreaked by the Germans, it would have been hard to believe that such a terrible war had been fought.

Captain George C. Moyse, of the New England branch of the National Flower Growers' Association, spoke on the new association and the work it aimed to accomplish. He found his work as organizing secretary interesting. He had been surprised to find how growers who were in the same towns were opposed to each other and how much cooperation was needed. There was far too much price-cutting on all hands. When anyone grew the best every effort should be made to sell it to the best possible advantage. The new association wanted to create a greater demand by putting the growers before the public through a publicity campaign. National cooperative purchasing was a necessity as well as selling.

Captain Moyse, who is a fluent and interesting speaker, spoke on some of his war experiences. He was the first national guard officer of the 105th Infantry to set foot on French soil. Only seven out of 250 of his men went through the war without being killed or wounded. He had on exhibition a large collection of souvenirs secured, in the way of gas masks, bullets, guns, etc., which proved interesting. Rousing votes of thanks to the speakers closed a pleasant evening.

Various Notes.

Among visitors last week was J. A. Brown, of the Brown Bulb Ranch, Capitola, Cal. Mr. Brown made an extended European trip and secured large quantities of Iris tingitana in France; also I. filifolia, hispanica, etc., to plant on his bulb farm. He is a large grower of freesias, gladioli and other bulbs and hopes to achieve success in the genial California climate with the various forcing irises.

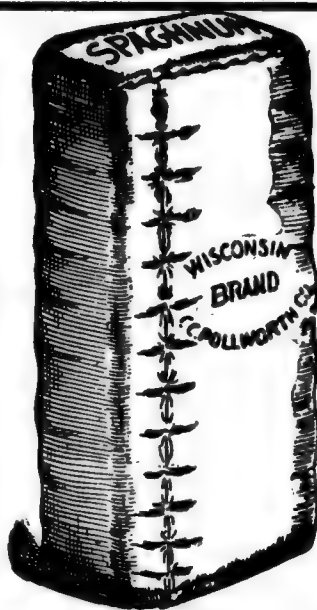

E. F. Gorney, secretary of the Boston Florists' Association, has received many letters from local hospitals expressing appreciation for the generous donations of flowers and plants made on Armistice day, November 11, when, through the efforts of members of the association, some twenty-five automobiles carried good cheer to a host of patients. This excellent work will, it is hoped, be continued and be emulated in many other cities in future years.

At the store of R. & J. Farquhar Co., on South Market street, bulb business has been extra good and nearly all sorts are now cleared out. A fine lot of flowering plants, including chrysanthemums, cyclamens, begonias and ericas, is carried.

Anderson Bros., of Woburn, are cutting heavily of pompon mums for Thanksgiving trade. They have all the newest varieties, but Western King, pink, seems especially popular. They are still cutting a fine crop of asters under glass and these sell well, even in competition with mums.

Welch Bros. Co. is receiving excellent American Beauty roses and a fine line of new varieties. Patrick Welch, while somewhat uncertain about the volume of Thanksgiving trade, is of the opinion that we are now running into a period when flowers will be decidedly scarce.

The combined agricultural interests of Massachusetts are planning to hold another big union meeting in Horticultural hall, Boston, in January, and a preliminary meeting to make arrangements was held at the State House November

23. A. K. Rogers represented the Gardeners' and Florists' Club. It is planned to have exhibits, demonstrations, lectures, etc., as in former years and a full week will be given up to it.

Thomas F. Galvin, Jr., on Devonshire street, while near the wholesale cut flower section and some distance from the retail part of the city, is doing a thriving business and pulling in many good orders. He keeps attractive window displays.

The Boston Floral Supply & Snyder Co. is showing an extensive line of baskets and other holiday articles. They report business as good, both in the cut flower and supply departments.

E. S. Webster, of Chestnut Hill, had his greenhouse open to the public November 16 to 20 to allow visitors to inspect the grand collection of winter-flowering begonias, and large numbers availed themselves of the privilege. Peter Arnott, the superintendent here, had an even finer display of beautifully flowered plants than a year ago. Remarkably fine were Optima, Mrs. Heal, Rosalind, Exquisite, Winter Cheer and numerous others of the English winter-blooming section. In addition there were numerous specimens of Glory of Cincinnati, Melior, Gloire de Lorraine and other better known varieties. Poinsettias were good, as were cyclamens, antirrhinums and mignonette. Among carnations, Pink Delight, Laddie, Matchless, Doris and Beacon were noteworthy. Roses, cattleyas and other orchids, gardenias, ericas and other plants were all in excellent condition and reflected much credit on Mr. Arnott's skill as a grower.

Duncan Finlayson is spending a few days in Washington.

William R. Nicholson, of Framingham, Mass., had a grand lot of fancy crimson mums for the Harvard-Yale game. He has a splendid crop of pompons and singles, and his carnations, in spite of hail damage early in the summer, look extremely well.

Boston had its first real snowstorm of the season November 21. W. N. C.

Woodlynne, N. J.—Joseph A. Kelley, for fourteen years a florist in the employ of companies near Laurel Hill cemetery, Philadelphia, Pa., has gone into business here for himself, as a florist and landscape gardener.

TATE'S TIPS

SLOGAN SENTIMENTS.

Voices Virtues, Not Vices.

All of us are familiar with the slogan. We think it the best of any possessed by any industry in the country, but how many of us have taken the time to analyze and dissect it to see what it really means in our business? I was of the opinion that I was familiar with all that "Say It with Flowers" meant as a business-getter until I started to study the subject; then I found that it started an endless chain of possibilities. It can be applied to any good thing that happens in any life, no matter how long that life may be, from the cradle to the grave. You will note that I say any good thing. Did you ever stop to think that you cannot vilify or be sarcastic when you "Say It with Flowers"? If you think that you can, try it on some known enemy, and instead of widening the breach you will soon find the dove of peace hovering about, bearing with it the olive branch.

Even at a Prize Fight.

Only recently I was in the company of a publicity expert, trying to get some concession from the window dresser of a large department store. My friend was driving home arguments that the window dresser could not gainsay; yet the latter did not want to grant our request.

Finally he said, "What can you say with your slogan, anyway?"

My friend replied: "I will answer that question by asking one. What can we not say?"

Now, there is no doubt that this window dresser was trying to think of an extreme case.

"Well," he replied, "how would you say it at a prize fight?"

I will confess that I thought we were stumped, but my friend, the publicity man, answered, "If, after Jack Dempsey's last great battle, some loved one had presented him with a basket of roses, don't you think his heart would have been touched?"

The window dresser smiled and said, "You win. Even a prize fighter is human after all."

We got our concession. But it seems a sacrilege to speak of prize fights and "Say It with Flowers" in the same story. The above instance is merely cited to show how easy it is to defend the slogan, if it ever needs defense.

Expresses Sacred Thought.

I said in the beginning of this article that the slogan could be applied to any event of life from the cradle to the grave. Let us start at the beginning and peep into the room where a new life has been born; it matters not if it is the home of a king or the most humble subject in his realm. A woman has been through the valley of shadows. Perhaps we shall see a uniformed nurse with rubber-soled slippers moving about noiselessly; the physician's orders are strict; there is perfect quiet and no conversation to excite the patient. Loved ones are anxious, but a strict discipline must be maintained. It is then that another language must be used, and when the nurse shows the mother perhaps a cradle filled with Sweetheart roses and she reads the card attached, she realizes that loved ones are waiting to share her happiness. What joy it must bring to that heart, already overflowing with happiness! I may be accused of being sentimental, but my object is to bring home to readers how elastic our slogan is. Take the humble laborer: He has been away all day at his toil. Has there been a minute of the day that his thoughts have not been in that room with those who are dear to him? He, too, is having his Gethsemane. The world cannot know what is going on in that man's mind; it is too sacred. But quitting time comes at last and he hurries home. By the roadside he stops to gather a bunch of wild flowers; perhaps there is no vase in his home, but reverently he places them in a tumbler, and, ashamed of what he thinks is his own weakness, he carries them to the bedside of his wife. When he sees the light of appreciation on her face, are

Cooperation is a name of something.
Cooperating is the name of that something when it is doing something.
Cooperated is the name of that something, after it is done.

"Birds of a feather flock together."
But it takes more than one feather to feather a flock. Or to say it another way—you, just for example, believe in cooperation; but you can't cooperate all by yourself.
Co, besides being short for company, is the Latin for with.
Now, you can't be with something, without being with it.

Daddy Pochelon finally succeeded in getting that through my head after writing me one thousand'six hundred and thirty-three and a half letters.
He convinced me that the only way to get more F. T. D. business was to work with (co) more, and more F. T. Deers.
So I did. And I did. Try it and see.

those two souls not knit closer together, and could anyone convince that man that to "Say It with Flowers" is not the best way in the world to express what he feels? Speech may have failed him, but those flowers carried his message of love home as no words in the English language could have done.

But these trying days are over and the next is the christening; it may take place in the grand cathedral, where the baptismal font is adorned with the most costly orchids, or in the cotter's humble home, where flowers from the fields are used. They all carry the same message; the child and the flowers are sent by the same loving God, to brighten the hearts and the lives of those parents.

The next important event in the child's life is its confirmation or first communion. It is being taught in this step that there is a God to whom its allegiance is due and again we find the altar before which this service is rendered decked with flowers. Who of us cannot remember a freckle-faced boy—how proudly he carried a pyramid bouquet, with every flower in it placed in due precision! Or the lass in her smart white frock, with a wreath of flowers on her head and carrying a large bouquet! These are the events in the lives of the people that have made America the greatest nation on earth, and in them "Say It with Flowers" has played no small part.

Back to Boyhood.

How many of you old business men, as you read this, cannot think back and remember the time when you said it to the teacher with flowers? It may have been in a little red schoolhouse off in the hills. Perhaps the receptacle that held the flowers was only a bottle on her desk, but did they not carry the same message that an expensive box from our most exclusive florist would today! The language of flowers will never be a dead one; the only change since our boyhood is that we are becoming better educated in it. Any well educated man's desire is to use his education for the good of mankind.

But I can hear some pessimists say that this is all rot, that we want to boost "Say It with Flowers" for the sake of financial return. I say to such that "the laborer is worthy of his hire," but the florists owe it to the world to educate it to "Say It with Flowers."

Is there anything selfish about your national publicity committee? True, in disseminating this education they are bettering their own business and at the same time yours, whether you are a subscriber to the fund or not, but at the same time they are bringing more happiness and sunshine into this old world. That is why Major O'Keefe has such faith in the slogan. That is why adver-

The Market.

The business done last week showed a great improvement over that of the week previous and, according to the leading retailers, business became steady in all lines. At the various wholesale markets the demand is steady daily and prices have advanced considerably on fancy stock. The supply is equal to every demand on seasonable stock. Even the quality has improved.

Chrysanthemums have the call over any other stock for the present. Among those coming in daily are Bonnaffon, of exceptionally fine quality, Eaton, Turner, Chadwick and Chieftain. Bonnaffon, leading the demand, brings $35 per hun-been excellent, especially for Enchantress and Nebraska.

Violets have been poor so far this season and, from reports, the production will not be so great as in other seasons.
Few sweet peas are coming into the market at present, but the crop will probably be large after the mum season.
Paper Whites clean up daily at 6 cents.
There has been a large demand for valley lately and often the supply has not been equal to it. Orchids are exceptionally scarce. There is a fair supply of lilies, calandulas and snapdragons.

There is the usual good supply of greens, for which the demand is good.

Ludwig LaRoche, grower for the W. C. Smith Wholesale Floral Co., at its Kirkwood range, sent in extra large blooms of Chadwick and Golden Chadwick mums, which were sold at $7.50 per dozen wholesale.

Earl Mann, of the E. G. Hill Co., Richmond, Ind., was a caller in the wholesale district November 18. Mr. Mann says that mums are not so plentiful now, but he expects to see a large crop of roses for Christmas.

The officers of the St. Louis Florists' Club will hold their monthly conference at the home of Secretary J. J. Beneke December 2. They will also arrange a program for the club meeting of December 8.

The Bourdet Floral Co. has put a delivery truck into service with a large sign on it, "Say It with Flowers." The firm has a large supply of blooming plants for Christmas trade.

The annual banquet and dance of the Retail Florists' Association was held Monday night, November 15. Only retailers and their families were present. Those who attended say it was a most enjoyable affair.

Fred Foster, head of the Foster Floral Co., expected the company's new store, in the Republic building, to be ready for occupation before Thanksgiving.

The new establishment recently opened by John J. Burke has been styled the Juniata Floral Shop. His partner, Edward J. Jakle, is widely known in retail circles. The new firm is enjoying a good business.

ers will hold its regular monthly meeting December 1. During the winter months all the meetings of the organization will be held at the municipal green-houses.

Albert Gumz, of the Windler Wholesale Floral Co., says that the demand for fancy stock is growing daily. The consignments of roses from the J. F. Ammann Co., Edwardsville, Ill., have been large and of fine quality.

Fred C. Weber, Joseph Witek, F. H. Weber, Sanders Nursery Co. and the Waldbart Floral Co., west end retail establishments, had many advance orders booked for Thanksgiving and for social events in early December.

Young's Greenhouses, at Olivette, Mo., in charge of William Dee, will have an extra fine supply of blooming plants for the coming holidays, especially poinsettias.

Oscar Ruff, of the Bergstermann Floral Co., reports a splendid demand for large cut mums and a good demand for social decorative work. A show house of excellent mums is attracting many buyers.

then proposed for adoption and, after having been read, were adopted, with a few reservations.

An annual meeting was decided on for the third Tuesday in January, and quarterly meetings on the same day in April, July and October. The board of directors is to decide upon the city in which the meetings will be held.

Officers Elected.

A nominating committee was then appointed, composed of members of both the Illinois and Missouri committees, to nominate members for the various offices except those of secretary and treasurer, which are appointed by the board of directors. While the nominating committee retired, a general discussion for the good of the new organization took place, in which A. C. Brown, J. W. Ross, Frank Weber and J. F. Ammann took part.

On returning to the room, the nominating committee announced the following nominations: President, Walter Amling, Pana, Ill.; first vice-president, L. Jules Bourdet, St. Louis; second vice-president, H. Blixen, of Edwardsville, Ill. The following nominations were made for trustees: A. C. Brown, J. W. Ross, Mr. Stapp, Rock Island, Ill., and W. A. Rowe, Joseph Deutschmann and C. E. DeWever, all of St. Louis. No other nominations were made and it was voted that the nominated members be elected to office.

All present joined the organization and the meeting adjourned until the first annual session of the new association, the third Tuesday in January, 1921.

After the meeting the board of directors got together and elected a secretary and treasurer. J. J. Beneke and W. R. Rowe hold these offices, respectively. All offices are to be effective only until the annual meeting to be held in January.

Those Present.

Among those present at the organization were the following: J. W. Ross, Centralia, Ill.; A. N. Nielsen, and Walter Amling, Pana, Ill.; Frank L. Washburn, Bloomington, Ill.; J. F. Ammann and H. Blixen, Edwardsville, Ill.; Mr. and Mrs. A. C. Brown, James N. Cole and W. J. Hembreiker, Springfield, Ill.; Charles Johann, Collinsville, Ill.; M. F. Widmer, Highland, Ill.; L. J. The Market.

Mums are showing signs of diminution. Roses have not reached their stride as yet; while there are plenty for the present demand, when mums are out of the way there may be a shortage. However, the growers are hurrying the rose crop as much as possible and, if there is a sufficient miscellaneous stock, the market should go along smoothly. The heavy demand in roses is for short-stemmed stock, indicating that there is a quite large funeral business being done. Long-stemmed roses are a little draggy; this is owing to mums still being plentiful. Carnations are not in large supply, but, as with roses, there are enough for present requirements. There is going to be a fine supply of all the best varieties of carnations this winter. Stevia has made its appearance and, as it works in well for funeral work, it sells well. Bouvardia is one of the old-time flowers that seems to be coming back; a house of bouvardia should pay any grower well, for it can be used almost anywhere. Humboldtii is as fine a finish in a funeral offering as anything one could use. Violets are scarce, few doubles being yet on the market. Orchids are scarce and the demand for them is light. There are a few Paper Whites to be had, but not any great supply. Easter lilies are here in a limited supply. In fact, everything, aside from mums, under normal conditions would be scarce. Prices are good, however, and the market, though a short one, cleans up fairly well.

for the first week in December. This will open the social season. I am informed that there will be a large number of debutantes this year, and the more we have of these the larger the season will be from the florists' standpoint. The Harmonie social will take place about the same time and, from all I hear, more Hebrew young ladies will make their bow this year than have for a long time. The outlook is for one of the gayest social seasons that Baltimore has known since before the war. This last winter we did have a spell of cloudy weather, for which they blamed the shortage.

The Maryland State Agricultural College has installed a new feature, a fall flower show. James Moss, son of Isaac H. Moss, who is a student at the college, has been appointed by the faculty to be superintendent of the show. Every florist in Baltimore wishes the college all sorts of success in the venture. Having two cities, Baltimore and Washington, to draw from, this feature of the college life should be made a permanent attraction.

In one of our daily papers the writer notes a florist's advertisement which advises the public to "Express Your Sentiments with Flowers." This may be more elegant English than "Say It with Flowers," but is it good business? We must remember that thousands of dollars are being spent in popularizing the slogan; that the idea of a slogan is to have a catchy phrase, and no one will deny the fact that our slogan is composed of four of the solidest words in the English language.

Joseph S. Merritt and his entertainment committee are putting in some strenuous work arranging a program for the club for the coming winter. The idea of the committee is to have something instructive for each meeting. Arrangements are being made with such men as Joseph H. Hill, of Richmond, Ind., Robert Pyle, of West Grove, Pa., and Max Schling, of New York, N. Y. Lectures by such men as the above-named will mean ladies' nights. Perhaps it might be a good thing for the club to have every night a ladies' night. Stevenson Bros. have a fine house of Begonia Konkurrent. They are as finely shaped plants as I have ever seen and should fill in splendidly for the Christmas holidays.

William H. Cochran has decided to economize on his estate this winter and not run his houses. John Rider was about heartbroken to see his splendid Russells abandoned; they were in fine shape and most promising for this winter.

Cut Flowers, Floral Designs and Potted Plants H. W. ALLERSMA

SAN ANTONIO, TEX.

Visitors to this charming and historic old city are many and the trade is in a healthy, flourishing condition. A good deal of stock is shipped in from Los Angeles, San Francisco, Denver and St. Louis. The long journey over the desert makes it difficult to get the stock from the coast in good condition, though for the credit of the shippers it must be said that they do it and do it well.

Edward Green, of Avenue O and Eighth street, has in a few years worked up a profitable business, which is still developing into larger things. Both he and Mrs. Green are closely interested in the business and the whole staff works harmoniously and well.

F. C. Suchy is a born hustler and imbues his staff with the same spirit. He is busy all the time and so is everyone there. Large shipments of mums from the coast arrive in good shape and Mr. Suchy is not making any wait about hard times. Several decorations and weddings were on the table last week.

Mrs. Charles Albrecht has the sympathy of the trade in the loss of her husband. She and her son are keeping the business going and in good order.

Busy Bee Candy & Florist is all that the name implies.

Stock looks fine at the greenhouses of the Hauser Floral Co.

November 10 to 12 an excellent flower show was staged by the Toronto Horticultural Society, in which many growers took part. The attendance was fair, but it cannot be said that the show was a decided success or that the flowers were shown to advantage, mixed as they were with honey, potatoes and apples. Both florists and gardeners have decided that in future an exclusive flower show will be held in Toronto. The show was opened by the governor-general, the Duke of Devonshire, assisted by Lieutenant-Governor Clark, of Toronto, and the Hon. Mr. Raney.

The Dale Estate had a good exhibit in many classes and other winners were H. G. Dilleuth, Thomas Manton, J. S. Wilson, William Jay & Son and A. Sheridan. In twenty-four classes there was only one entry. In fact, the Dale Estate had no competition, though the stock was such as to win first prizes in any show and the firm is to be congratulated on its showing.

The flowers which were shown were good and those from the greenhouses of
